No Motoring as Usual

Motorists along the Eastern Seaboard, including 150,000 here in the District, were somewhat bewildered last night over the question of how much gasoline they will get under the new card rationing plan which becomes effective May 15.

The situation became further befogged after Secretary of Interior Ickes, who is also petroleum coordinator, scoffed at earlier predictions that the ordinary driver might be limited to 2½ gallons a week.

"We refuse to believe people will be put under such short rations," Ickes told his press conference yesterday. "Whoever gave out these figures was a poor prophet. If we are able to carry out our plans, there will be no such severe cut."

Monthly Ration Estimated

One of Ickes' aides estimated that 25 gallons a month per automobile would be a more likely allowance, whereas the American Automobile Association estimated that the average motorist normally uses 55 gallons a month.

Ickes' statement came a day after an announcement from Price Administrator Leon Henderson that curtailment of gasoline consumption would begin May 15 in 17 Eastern States and the District. A source in Henderson's organization said each automobile would get as little as 2½ to 5 gallons weekly.

However, whatever the quota, the administration will be directly under the OPA and not under State supervision, Henderson told District Commissioner Guy Mason last night.

The gasoline situation caused repercussions in many quarters. Heads of five high war agencies told motorists flatly that the Government no longer would risk lives of Amer-

Rail Officials Cleared of Labor Coercion Charge

Peoria, Ill., April 23 (AP).—President George P. McNear, jr., and two other officials of the Toledo, Peoria & Western Railroad were acquitted by a Federal Court jury today of charges of violating the National Railway Labor Act by coercing union employes.

The verdict of not guilty was returned after the jury of five men and seven women had deliberated eight hours.

It was the first criminal action brought under the 1926 Railway Labor Act. The Government contended that McNear and two subordinates, Supt. Harlan H. Best and Trainmaster Bruce Gifford, by threats had tried to stop their employes from organizing a local of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen.

The 239-mile road, which enables transcontinental freight to bypass Chicago, was seized recently by the Government as the culmination of a strike dispute.

By the Associated Press

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., April 23. Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, mother of the President, left a net estate estimated at $1,089,872, a New York State transfer tax appraisal showed today.

This figure was reached after deduction of funeral and administrative expenses and debts totaling $38,489. A State tax of $46,431 was imposed.

Under a will probated earlier, President Roosevelt receives nine-tenths of the entire estate and his mother's Hyde Park, N. Y., property.

Mrs. Roosevelt died last September 7, at Hyde Park.

The largest division of assets in the estate is the schedule of bonds and stocks, appraised at $939,993. The schedule shows that Mrs. Roosevelt held bond and stock interest in about 100 of America's leading corporations. She also had $30,000 in U. S. Government bonds, including $10,000 in 2.5 per cent Defense Bonds.

The general appraisal of assets also includes real estate, $6,250; mortgages, notes and cash, $119,606, and miscellaneous items, $128,361.

Biddle Issues New Warning On Sedition

Publications Barred From Mails May Not Be Circulated at All

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Attorney General Biddle said yesterday that seditious publications barred from the mails will not be allowed to circulate by truck, freight or express.

When a publication is barred from the mails under the Sedition Act, the Attorney General said the Trading with the Enemy Act forbids its circulation at all, with penalties as high as $10,000 fine and ten years in jail for violation.

Biddle cleared up this point while the special grand jury on Axis agents started analyzing two bulky cases of documents produced by E. Perrin Schwartz, editor of Charles E. Coughlin's weekly magazine, Social Justice.

Hearing Set for Wednesday

The mails were closed to Social Justice last week, after Biddle declared that it followed the German propaganda line and was "clearly seditious." Postmaster General Frank C. Walker will determine whether the magazine is permanently outlawed after a hearing, originally set for next Wednesday, but postponed for one week at the request of counsel.

Lieut. Edward J. Hickey, jr., U. S. N., questioned Schwartz for several hours yesterday and ordered him to return to the grand jury chambers this morning. A member of the propaganda squad which smashed two rings of Nazi agents, Hickey was loaned to the Department of Justice for the Social Justice inquiry.

With Special Prosecutors William Power Maloney and John T. M. Reddan, Hickey is conducting the grand jury investigation under the command of the chief of the criminal division, Assistant Attorney General Wendell Berge.

U.S.-German Deal Tied Up Magnesium

Cartel Operated To Restrict Output Here to Help Nazis, Senate Unit Told

Dominated British

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

When the Federal Government was faced with the necessity for spending hundreds of millions of dollars to expand American magnesium production, an American-German cartel was operating to restrict manufacture of the metal to a fraction of the Nation's war needs, the Senate Patents Committee was told yesterday.

Furthermore, the German member of the cartel, I. G. Farbenindustrie, not only was provided with a check on United States magnesium production, but dominated the industry in Great Britain which was dependent on the Nazis for 40 per cent of her magnesium requirements, the committee was informed.

The charges were made by Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold, who detailed for the committee the effect of the cartel on America's ability to produce metal essential for the manufacture of dive bombers and incendiary bombs, now sorely needed by the United States and her British ally.

Arnold Asked for Figures

The American cartel partners—Aluminum Co. of America and the Dow Chemical Co.—agreed April 15 to dissolution of the alliance under terms of a Federal Court consent decree which freed, for use of other manufacturers without payment of royalties, magnesium producing and fabricating patents.

Aroused by the need for expenditure of taxpayers' money for production of war material that might well have been available in greater quantity, Senator Bone (Democrat), of Washington, called on Arnold for figures on the Government's investment in magnesium.

Arnold was unable to supply the information, but from another source it was learned that to date the Defense Plant Corporation has obligated the Government to an investment of 365 million dollars in magnesium plants.

Breakdown of Figures

Later in the day one of Arnold's assistants obtained a breakdown of the Government's magnesium investment. This showed that beginning early in 1941, the year America went to war, the Defense Plant Corporation has made many agreements for magnesium manufacture, but that the principal beneficiary of the Federal outlay has been Dow Chemical or allied companies.

Senator LaFollette (Progressive) of Wisconsin, characterized the investments as "the price we are paying for this nice little arrangement with I. G. Farben."

"We are paying a swell price for it," he said.

The breakdown of DPC agreements, which did not cover all of the agency's commitments, showed Dow to be on the receiving end of $148,010,932 out of $299,484,710 advanced for new magnesium production facilities.

"Although the sources of magnesium are virtually unlimited, since it may be extracted from sea water or from ores which are

Attack in 1942 Can Settle War, U. S. Publishers Told by Briton

(Beaverbrook Text, Page 14.)

By the Associated Press

New York, April 23.—Lord Beaverbrook, declaring that "Russia may settle the war for us in 1942," called tonight for a great new offensive by the British in the west to help the Soviet armies battling Germany.

"By holding the Germans in check, possibly even by defeating them, the Russians may be the means of bringing the whole Axis structure down," the British publisher told the annual dinner of the Bureau of Advertising American Newspaper Publishers Association.

"This is a chance, an opportunity to bring the war to an end here and now. But if the Russians are defeated and driven out of the war, never will such a chance come to us again.

"Even Recklessly"

"Strike out to help Russia. Strike out violently. Strike even recklessly, but in any event such blows that real help will be our share and contribution to the Russian battle-front."

The British publisher, who recently left Prime Minister Winston Churchill's cabinet to come to the United States on a government mission, said that he believed in the Russian theory that "the best form of defense is attack." He paid high tribute to the vital aid the United States has given the Soviet armed forces.

Speaking on the same platform with Francis B. Sayre, United States High Commissioner to the Philippines, Beaverbrook found an attentive audience in the publishers. Closing their fifty-sixth annual convention, they had sent a resolution to President Roosevelt pledging "Our . . . unswerving support to our Commander in Chief in this hour of national crisis . . ."

Beaverbrook made no effort to minimize the misfortunes the British have been surviving on their present home front, and he also made an ardent defense of Stalin and his generals.

"We know that the Russians kill more Germans every day than all the Allies put together. We know they destroy more enemy tanks, bring down more enemy planes than any of us or all of us. Russia is the Kuibyshev, April 23.—Nine-tenths of the whole German army is on the Russian front and Hitler has called up 1,900,000 reserves, but the Red army is moving up enough men to meet this immense threat, the official Soviet spokesman declared today.

Finnish troops appeared for the first time today on the Kalinin front, in the broad area northwest of Moscow, participating in local but nonetheless fierce combats as both the Russian defenders and the Axis invaders piled up reserves for the expected gigantic conflict of spring and early summer.

(How or in what strength the Finns got to the Kalinin front was not disclosed. At latest reports they were engaged in furious battle with the Russians on the Svir River front in the north, with both sides claiming success.)

Fierce Fighting in Many Sectors.

Hotly fought local actions were reported on many sectors. The Communist Party paper Pravda said the invaders were launching numerous counterattacks but that all had failed.

Three Marine Corps Bases

Glider Troops to Be Trained As Spearhead of U.S. Offensive

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The Marine Corps is beginning the organization of a large body of glider troops to serve as the spearhead of the amphibious forces which will play an important role in the scheduled 1943 Allied offensive.

Funds were provided in the sixth supplemental defense appropriation bill, passed by Congress this week, for establishing three glider bases in continental United States for training marines in this new "blitz" weapon.

The Navy Department Bureau of Aeronautics has had experiments underway for months in building large troop-carrying gliders, and some of the craft already have been built or are on order.

The size of the glider force planned is, of course, a carefully guarded secret, but it is clear that an extensive training program is to be launched by the Marines.

This was indicated by Chairman Vinson of the House Naval Affairs Committee on the House floor when he announced that three Marine glider training stations are contemplated. Legislation authorizing an unlimited number of Naval and Marine Corps bases of all types was passed by the House Monday and a 800-million-dollar appropriation for them is now awaiting President Roosevelt's signature.

Vinson said the Marine glider bases probably will be established in the "Central-Eastern States" but gave no other details.

Although the United States had done little or nothing to develop glider troops prior to the Battle of Crete, their great value, particularly in amphibious warfare, has been recognized since then.

The Battle of the Pacific is largely an amphibious war, and the engineless aerial troop carriers may well

Chungking, China, April 23.—Japanese encirclement tactics, pressed home with plane-supported tanks and hard driving fresh infantry, have forced the Chinese to fall back from Loikaw and Pyinmana on the east side of the Burma defense lines, while the British withdrew from Taungdingyi on the center.

Battles raged today at key points all along the Burma Front, from the Shan States near the Siamese border westward to the Yenangyaung sector on the Irrawaddy, but it was on the eastern flanks that the ten-times-superior forces of the invaders made their most dangerous gains.

State Capital Taken

A Chinese communique said Loikaw, capital of the Karen-ni States on the Nam Pawn River, was abandoned after the Japanese outflanked the town on the north Tuesday evening.

The Chinese garrison forces, however, fought a long delaying action in the streets, struggling hand-to-hand against 10 to 1 odds, said the communique. Casualties were described as heavy on both sides.

George Offers Over-All Tax To Curb Profits

Senate Proposal Would Recapture Gains Above A Fixed Percentage

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

A new plan for an extra or "over-all" war profits tax, recapturing all profits over a fixed percentage limit after all other taxes had been imposed, yesterday was proposed to the Senate by Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

George outlined a five-point war profits tax formula as the Senate attached a war contract renegotiation compromise to the completed $19,131,597,000 war appropriation bill and sent the big military measure to the White House for signature.

Even as Congress compromised proposed statutory limits on profits by legalizing present departmental methods of preventing big war gains, the House Ways and Means Committee explored still another plan for reaching excess profits through taxes.

25% Rise Recommended

Colin F. Stam, congressional staff expert on internal revenue, recommended that the committee step up existing excess profits taxes 25 per cent in each bracket to a maximum rate of 85 per cent. The existing top rate is 60 per cent and the Treasury has recommended an increase to 75 per cent. President Roosevelt in his forthcoming anti-inflation message was expected to go far higher.

But into the race to halt profits by taxes both George and members of the Ways and Means Committee injected a note of caution. George,

Russians Intern American Crew Of Bomber Lost Deep in Interior

By the Associated Press

Moscow (Friday), April 24.—The official Tass News Agency announced today that an American plane identified by its crew as a participant in the air raids on Japanese cities last Saturday made a forced landing in Siberia after losing its bearings.

The text of the Tass statement broadcast by the Moscow radio follows:

"On April 18 an American war plane landed in Maritime territory (the Siberian Maritime Provinces).

"According to the statement of the plane's crew on that day this plane had participated in an American air raid on Japanese islands and, having lost its bearings, made a false landing on Soviet territory.

"In accordance with international law, Soviet authorities interned the American plane and its crew."

400 Miles From Vladivostok

This was the first direct word from any source of the landing of any of the planes which raided Japan. There still has been no word from any other United Nations source regarding the raids.

(The British News Agency Reuters reported in London that the Moscow radio broadcast that reports from Khabarovsk said the plane landed in Russian Far East territory.

(It was not stated where the plane landed but Khabarovsk is 200 miles west of the Sea of Japan and 400 miles north of Vladivostok, Russian Siberian port.)

Information Please! Says Anxious Tokyo

By the United Press

The Tokyo radio, obviously fishing for information, indirectly asked the United States Army and Navy on Thursday to tell what they know about Saturday's air-raids on Japan.

Apparently unable to restrain its curiosity any longer, Tokyo, in a broadcast heard by the United Press in San Francisco, said:

"The American papers are talking big, but not a whisper from the Army or Navy. We will be very interested in knowing just how many planes came from, and escaped, to their bases.

"We will be very interested in knowing their claims of damages.

C. I. O. Repudiates Lewis Claim; Break Seen Near

By the United Press

An open break between the C. I. O. and its founder, President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers, appeared more imminent last night after the C. I. O. refused to repay $1,635,000 which Lewis claims his union loaned to the C. I. O. in its formative days.

The C. I. O.'s executive officers not only voted unanimously to reject the demand but urgently "requested" that the United Mine Workers pay $60,000 in back dues.

Lewis, who broke with C. I. O. President Philip Murray in 1940 when they differed over support of President Roosevelt for a third term, would not comment, nor would U. M. W. Secretary-Treasurer Thomas Kennedy, to whom the rebuff was addressed.

The decision was transmitted to Kennedy in four separate communications which said, in substance, that the "loan"—made in 1935—was a contribution which, with kindred donations from other unions, enabled the C. I. O. to give "the benefit of union organization and economic security" to millions of unorganized workers.

C. I. O. Asks Roosevelt Probe of 'Failure' to Convert Dodge Plant

By the Associated Press

Detroit, April 23. — President Roosevelt was asked today by a United Automobile Workers (C. I. O.) official to send a personal representative to Detroit to investigate failure of Chrysler Corp. to convert its Dodge main plant to war production.

Earl Reynolds, president of Dodge Local No. 3, contended in a letter to the President that "less than 25 per cent of the plant's machinery and less than 10 per cent of its floor space" is being used for war work.

"We are greatly perturbed that the Government has authorized construction of new buildings, to the extent that a shortage of steel exists for ships, when a considerable portion of the work to be done in these new buildings could be done in this empty Dodge plant," the letter stated.

"Something is wrong out here. Something must be done in the interest of the war effort and in the interest of the thousands of unemployed people."

A Chrysler Corp. spokesman denied the union head's charges and said Government leaders are "fully aware of the problems affecting the conversion of the Dodge plant."

"Chrysler Corp. has war contracts for which it is tooling as rapidly as the machinery and tools can be delivered," the spokesman said.

"When in full production the Dodge plant will require more employes than used in normal times."

With Minds on Work Men Will Produce Far More, He Holds

By the Associated Press

Rear Adm. Emory S. Land called yesterday for the establishment of a national war labor policy to end the "infernal agitation" he said was keeping some of the men who build merchant ships from giving their level best on the job.

The chairman of the Maritime Commission told the Senate Defense Investigating Committee that if troublesome labor questions and other impediments to morale were cleared away, the ship construction program could be stepped up 12½ per cent this year and 25 per cent next year with the same facilities.

After committee members had asked why some yards were lagging behind schedule, Land declared:

"We've got to have a national war labor policy. We ought to stabilize our labor and management relations so that the men won't be disturbed all of the time by these questions.

"If we had a definite program it would stop the infernal agitation that is going around in everybody's head whether they have a closed shop, an open shop or some other condition."

In this connection, he said he regarded work slowdowns as a serious question and was greatly perturbed by loafing. He indicated support of proposals for freezing the status of open and closed shop jobs, but said

Stretching the 2-Way Stretch

WPB Halves Rubber Content Of Girdles, Calls Corsets Back

By Lee Carson
International News Service Staff Writer

In an effort to stretch supplies of girdles, brassieres, and combinations over a greater area, the War Production Board last night recalled from exile the old-fashioned, boned, and well-laced contraption known as "a set of corsets."

Reducing by 50 per cent the elastic or any version thereof which may be used in any kind of curve-controller, the order sets forth rules on how much and where the two-way stretch will be planted.

To ladies who avoid public scales, the order is an undisguised blessing. The sylphs, on the other hand, have a choice of dropping their sheaths entirely or being controlled within an inch of their bones.

Textile and Clothing Chief H. Stanley Marcus, successful creator of the order on milday's wartime wardrobe, said:

"As a result of this order, the number of garments which can be made available for women will be doubled and the production from present stocks of elastic fabric will be extended at least eight or nine months.

"Adequate supplies of girdles, combinations, brassieres and corsets will be available for many months ahead."

The difference will be in the stress and strain. The all-rubber and a yard-wide girdle or corset will be banished. In the lightweight division, the peek-a-boo pantie-girdles and other mildly confining flimsies woven of elastic fabric, will also be sacrificed in order that very little can cover so much.

In the combination and surgical-girdle division the WPB has decreed

Beautiful and Brave

Girl Intern Crawls Beneath Engine, Performs Amputation

By the United Press

Richmond, Va., April 23.—A beautiful Puerto Rican girl, who became an intern at a hospital here and was assigned to ride the ambulance at night, crawled under a big locomotive before dawn Monday and amputated the leg of a railroad brakeman who was about to bleed to death, it was revealed here tonight.

Too modest to tell anyone of her feat, Dr. Mariana Diez-Rivas, 23—who goes by the name of Dr. Diez because "if I use both names they put my suitcases with the R's"—saved the life of 21-year-old Bernard Jonathan Colgin, whose right leg had been crushed by a locomotive in the yards here.

Answering a dawn ambulance call, Dr. Diez found Colgin pinned beneath the giant wheels in such a way that the engine could not back off his right leg without crushing the left.

Colgin was bleeding badly when the pretty Puerto Rican arrived, and he could not have lived much longer without help.

Dr. Diez crawled under the locomotive, "lay flat on my belly," stuck a flashlight between her teeth, and began amputating.

She began the amputation with a small scalpel she carried in her kit. When the scalpel would not serve, a railroad worker offered his big pocket knife, which the now smudgy doctor sterilized in alcohol and used to complete the operation.

She then took Colgin back to the Medical College of Virginia Hospital, where she is an intern.

"It was a beautiful job, but most of all it took guts," a hulking 200-pound intern said.

Nazis Gird for Invasion, Jittery From Commando Raid, New R. A. F. Assault

Rumors Rife Of Allied Blow Early in May

By International News Service

London, April 23.—In the wake of yesterday's daring Commando raid on Boulogne and further Royal Air Force assaults today, Nazis in occupied western Europe tonight displayed a new case of invasion jitters.

From the coast of occupied France, through Belgium and Holland, to Denmark and Norway, there was unrest, fear and increasing defense precautions on the part of Nazi occupational authorities.

Held to their bases by bad weather for the last two days, hard-hitting R. A. F. pilots emerged today to range far and wide over France, Germany's industrial Rhineland and two cities in Sicily, now "occupied" by the Nazis.

Copenhagen Has Alarm

Reports from Stockholm told of a 90-minute air raid alarm last night in the Danish capital of Copenhagen, the first such alarm there since July, 1940.

Stockholm newspapers reported that 50 persons suffering from shock or wounds brought on by heavy antiaircraft fire had been sent to hospitals in Copenhagen.

Earlier reports said no hostile bombers had been seen, and no bombs dropped. The wounded presumably were hit by falling fragments of antiaircraft shells.

Meanwhile, Berlin correspondents of Stockholm newspapers said that German official quarters were discussing the possibility of a joint Anglo-American invasion of the continent. These correspondents confirmed that a new Siegfried Line of concrete defenses, heavy artillery and a chain of airdromes had been built along the Channel coast.

The London Evening Standard said that Adolf Hitler has warned all people in the occupied countries against anti-German activities in the event of a United Nations invasion. At the same time, a curfew was put on night traffic along the Normandy coast.

To bear out its story, the Standard quoted an order issued by a Nazi official in Holland in which he warned "irresponsible elements" against using any landings by United Nations forces as an excuse to incite "anti-German members of the population to irresponsible acts." He added that "any Dutch participation in hostilities will result in sharp action by German forces."

Le Havre Pounded Again

During last night R. A. F. bombers were over Germany, occupied France and Sicily. The last attack, staged on Comiso and Ragusa, was announced by the Italian imperial command and was staged by British bombers that might have come from the Middle East, or even from oft-bombed Malta.

The air ministry announced that targets in the Rhineland were pounded, as were docks at Le Havre on the French coast. Four British bombers did not return to their bases.

Berlin admitted that west and southwestern Germany were attacked during the night with "some material damage and loss of life.")

[A row of cottages was damaged and a few persons were injured tonight by incendiary and high explosive bombs dropped during a raid on a southwest district of England. The Associated Press reported raiders also were reported over South Wales.]

British antiaircraft batteries along the Thames Estuary went into action when high-flying German raiders appeared overhead. Some hostile machine gun fire was heard but no bombs were dropped.

Meanwhile, the Stockholm newspaper Dagens Nyheter reported that Norway is filled with rumors of a coming British invasion against the Norwegian coast, scheduled to be staged before May 1.

Feverish German defense measures throughout the country were said to have added fuel to these rumors, with the result that the Norwegian population has become increasingly hostile to Nazi occupation officials. The newspaper added that Maj. Vidkun Quisling and his decrees are now completely ignored.

Gen. Stumpf, the German commander, was said to have transferred his headquarters to the north, while Admiral Boehm was said to have done the same. Large Panzer units were stated to have arrived in Norway.

While German headquarters in Norway still remain at Oslo, subordinate commands were declared to have been set up throughout the country. It was reported that large detachments of tanks and armored cars took part in a German parade in Oslo last Monday, the first time that any Panzer units have appeared there in a parade.

London, April 23.—Convinced that the British commando raid on the Boulogne area early yesterday was aided by people on the spot (next seven words cut by censor) Nazi authorities last night had arrested nearly 150 local citizens after an all-day check-up of identity papers in and around Boulogne, according to information received in London.

Field Marshal von Rundstedt, recently appointed commander of German forces in France, made a rush visit to the raided area yesterday and threw local Nazi officials into a near panic in his demands for explanations. He is said to have ordered the arrest of several for "neglect of duty."

Chungking, April 23 (U.P.).—Chinese reports said tonight that an estimated 32 Japanese planes raided and made reconnaissance flights today over widespread areas in Kiangsi and Chekiang Provinces, apparently searching for American planes based on Chinese airdromes.

The reports said that although bombs were dropped, they caused no damage.

It was the fourth straight day that this section of China had been raided. Previously this week the Chinese have told of Japanese attacks on airdromes in Kiangsi.

South Africa Breaks Relations With Vichy

By the United Press

Pretoria, April 23.—The Union of South Africa today became the first Allied Nation to break relations with Vichy France for collaborating with Germany, and reports circulated that South African troops might occupy Madagascar, French island colony flanking the Allied Indian Ocean supply route.

Field Marshal Jan C. Smuts, Premier of the Union, handed a note to the Vichy Minister reading:

"Developments have taken place regarding the French government which make it impossible for the Union government to continue diplomatic relations. The Union has been anxious ever since the Armistice of 1940 to keep up friendly relations with the French government. Changes have taken place from which the Union government infer with sorrow that the French government, under strong pressure, decided radically to change its course and to accept collaboration with the Axis.

"The Vichy Minister, M. (Ernest Maurice) De Simonin is asked to inform the French government it is the wish of the Union government that the French representatives, ministerial and consular, should be withdrawn from the union. We do not cease to cherish a firm faith in the resurrection of France and we shall continue to labor and fight for the day when France once more shall resume its proud place in the world and the proper role among the champions of the rights of man."

Contrary to British press reports of a reign of terror on Madagascar, 240 miles off the southeast coast of Africa, occasioned by a reported round-up of Free French sympathizers, travelers reaching South Africa have said that life on the island is more or less normal, and that at least 75 per cent of the population favors the Allies.

De Simonin said he would leave in May from Lourenco Marques, Portuguese East Africa, aboard the Swedish steamer Drottningholm for the United States, in company with his wife. Mme. De Simonin is from New Orleans and they have a son in the American armed forces. De Simonin refused to comment on the diplomatic break.

(The reported friendliness between Smuts and De Simonin, together with the minister's refusal to comment, suggested the possibility that he might be breaking away from the Vichy regime.)

Wooing French, Nazis Free 20 More Hostages

By the Associated Press

Vichy, April 23.—The 20 hostages of St. Nazaire, seized by the Germans because Frenchmen of that important coastal city participated in the British Commando raid on the naval base last March 28, were freed today by the Germans.

It was the second such act of intended conciliation toward the French in two days, although it came after a total of 123 German executions of Frenchmen since April in an attempt to stop a series of outbreaks against German soldiery in occupied France.

Upward of 100 hostages remain who are scheduled to die unless perpetrators of several of the outbreaks are yielded up to the occupying authorities by two deadlines—one tonight and one Sunday night. Among these are 80 hostages taken at Rouen for the bombing of a German troop train. There are 15 at Paris in another group and an unstated number in a third group.

Yesterday the German military commander in Paris released 20 hostages who would have been shot within a week for the killing of a German soldier in Paris Monday night. Fifteen hostages already had been shot Tuesday for this and another German killing.

Today the 20 St. Nazaire hostages were freed, after French authorities had made personal representations in their behalf. Among the 20 was Jean Blanchard, an important labor leader, whose arrest attracted especial attention.

Of the 123 persons officially announced as executed this month, 97 were hostages. The other 26 were shot after trial as Communists.

In Vichy the government of Pierre Laval was issuing a statement meanwhile, denying "Moscow radio reports" that German sailors were arriving at Toulon, the French Mediterranean naval base, or that French naval units were being turned over to the Germans.

World Traveler Gets Lost—He's Chinese, 8 Months Old

Eight-month-old Shao-wei Hwang and his parents

By the United Press

New York, April 23.—Shao-wei Hwang, aged 8 months, who flew to America from Chungking, via Calcutta, Cairo, Lagos and Natal without missing a meal or a nap, and then got lost at LaGuardia Field, gurgled and cooed today, unaware of his fame as a world traveler.

Sturdy, beaming Shao-wei made the seven-weeks trip with composure and aplomb, according to his parents, Maj. and Mrs. John P. H. Hwang, but disappeared in the confusion of landing. He was found 15 minutes later, being passed around among half a dozen excited air hostesses.

He and his parents are en route to London, where Maj. Hwang will be Air Attache. With them was Commander Ying-tsung Chow, on his way to London as Naval Attache.

Shao-wei, called Howard for the convenience of his parents' American friends, was the petted darling of the hop across four continents, getting all the attention of other passengers and most of the spare time of pilots.

In Calcutta he joined in celebrating the arrival of Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell, whose advent in the city coincided with Shao-wei's.

In the same place his wide smile prevailed upon airline officials to suspend rules against women passengers and thus permit his mother and himself to go on to Cairo with his father.

His laundry was the concern not only of his mother—who summed up the whole trip with a smiling "you manage"—but of helpful passengers. Once or twice it was spread out on the ground to dry when the plane made a brief landing.

Major Hwang's only luggage was a brief case and Howard got through the trip in the heavy Chinese quilted robe in which he started, and two sweater suits—one of which he outgrew on the way because of his gain in weight.

Nothing in the journey bothered Shao-wei but the 10,000-foot altitude near Chungking. When the plane made a sharp descent, Shao-wei made loud protest about the pressure on his eardrums.

The military plane which carried the four Chinese from Calcutta to Cairo was not insulated against noise or cold. Pilots wrapped little Howard in their coats and took turns about amusing him.

Two Royal Air Force pilots made a bed for the baby from their camp cot and Shao-wei slept contentedly in this on the trip across Africa.

Luggage restrictions made it impossible to bring any of Shao-wei's toys but he never missed them.

Allies Step Up Tempo of Raids On Rabaul

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters, Australia, April 23.—A quickening of the tempo of Allied air raids on the important and battered Japanese base of Rabaul on New Britain Island was announced today from General MacArthur's headquarters, along with word that Dutch and Australian forces still are battling the Japanese on the invaded island of Timor.

Buildings at Stockholm Plantation, near Rabaul, were hit directly in a surprise raid Tuesday afternoon, MacArthur's communique said, and on Wednesday morning the Allied bombers followed up with attacks on a dock.

The size of the United Nations forces still on Timor, which is a part-Dutch, part-Portuguese island, 400 miles northwest of Australia, was not disclosed.

Battle on Cebu Continues

Touching also on the continued fighting in the Philippines, the communique said the struggle was continuing on Cebu Island, that American-Filipino forces were in contact with the enemy on southern Panay Island, and that the Manila Bay fortress of Corregidor had undergone intermittent but diminishing dive-bomber attacks.

(The Japanese radio reported 500 to 600 Americans and Filipinos were holding out on the slopes of Mount Baloy on Panay, but that other resistance on that island had collapsed.)

While General MacArthur conferred with his air commander, Lieut. Gen. George H. Brett, who has just returned from inspection of bases, Vice Admiral Herbert F. Leary announced formation of a 14-man naval staff for the southwest Pacific area. Two are Australians and one Dutch, the others being Americans, headed by Capt. J. Cary Jones as chief of staff.

Others Named to Staff

Commander (Supply Corps) A. A. Antrim, Capt. J. H. Carson, Commander M. R. Kelley, Commander R. C. Hudson, Commander J. H. Shultz, Lieut. Comdr. E. T. Neale, Lieut. Comdr. H. J. Martin, Lieut. Comdr. B. B. C. Lovett, Lieut. Comdr. J. D. L. Grant, Lieut. R. L. Taylor, all of the United States Navy; Capt. F. E. Getting of the Royal Australian Navy, Commander G. B. Salm of the Royal Netherlands Navy, Wing Commander G. Packer of the Royal Australian Air Force.

MacArthur, with Prime Minister Curtin, also met the premiers of the Australian states in a closed session on political and military plans.

Meanwhile an announcement by Prime Minister Peter Fraser in New Zealand clarified the status of that dominion, more than 1000 miles east of Australia. He said his government had concurred in placing defense of New Zealand, Fiji and other islands under a United States naval command, even though New Zealand had made representations favoring a close link with Australia under MacArthur.

Kerch Peninsula, using from 20 to 30 tanks in one thrust. Stockholm dispatches said the Russians were massing men near Kerch for a new drive westward and that others were being concentrated in the southern Ukraine, possibly for offensive action. These reports were substantiated to some degree by a German announcement that the Nazi air force was bombing troop concenstrations southeast of Kharkov and in the Kerch area as well.

Russian reports from the southern sectors, where the ground now is hardening and where the Germans might be expected to strike an early new blow toward the Caucasus, indicated that German counterattacks had waned mysteriously, and that in many sectors the enemy was merely defending fortified populated places.

Of the total of German reserves called recently to the colors, at least 900,000 were said by Solomon Lozovsky, the Soviet vice commissar of foreign affairs, to be from new military classes of youths 17 and 18 years old. Half a million more, he added, were taken from vital industry and another half a million from "the vassal countries."

Lozovsky said there was every indication that the German rear was disintegrating and the people exhausted. In this connection, he praised such British air action as the recent heavy raids on Augsburg and Luebeck. But he would not express an opinion as to whether this situation offered the possibility of creating of a second front in Europe by Russia's allies and he cautiously evaded a question as to the scope of United States supplies now arriving in Russia.

Also he said there was no change in Soviet-Japanese relations since the April thirteenth anniversary of the Soviet-Japanese neutrality pact.

Most of the military action reported today dealt with the diminishing scale of German counterattacks. Two of these were reported in the southwest, where the enemy threw a pontoon bridge over a river under cover of a heavy artillery and trench-mortar barrage, only to see it destroyed by Russian shells and the crossing frustrated.

On the southern front the only enemy action of consequence was an outflanking movement by a large Italian detachment. Half of the Italians were put out of action when the Russians closed a pincers on the detachment.

Another southern front dispatch told of the surrender of a Rumanian battalion commander, Maj. Marcu Bonkes, who gave himself up without even being scratched. A few days later, the dispatch said, the Russians captured the battalion headquarters and found reports of "the heroic death of Maj. Bonkes."

A Chinese army spokesman said terrific Japanese pressure also had forced the Chinese out of Pyinmana on the Sittang River 65 miles northwest of Loikaw and less than 150 miles south of Mandalay.

The front now is in the vicinity of Myidanggan, north of Pyinmana on the railroad to Mandalay, said the Chinese, with fighting still in bitter progress.

There, too, the story was similar: Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's Chinese troops were engaged almost continuously for weeks without relief, while the Japanese continued to throw in well-rested reinforcements.

Frontal Assaults Costly

The Chinese spokesman said a right-flanking movement at Zewe had won Pyinmana for the Japanese after they gained less than 6 miles in expensive frontal assaults.

Forty miles farther northwest, the British reported they had pulled out of Taungdwingyi, apparently in a line-straightening operation necessitated by the loss of Pyinmana.

Another 60 miles northwest, where a Chinese counterattack previously had rescued British forces trapped at Yenangyaung, the Chinese reported that they had mopped up Japanese elements 3 of 4 miles south of that ravaged oil town but that the invaders now had been reinforced and a battle was taking place in the vicinity of the Piur River, a tributary of the broad Irrawaddy.

Army Supply Services Split Into 4 Branches

The War Department announced yesterday that four new service branches have been created within the Service of Supply, ranking with Quartermaster Corps, Medical Department, etc.

They are Transportation Service, headed by Brig. Gen. C. P. Gross; the General Depot Service, headed by Col. R. E. Duff; Statistical Service, under Brig. Gen. Leonard P. Ayers, and the Army Exchange Service, the chief of which is Brig. Gen. Isaac Spalding.

Other announcements were that to expedite the appointment of badly needed medical officers, physicians and dentists under 45 who volunteer and meet requirements, may be commissioned on the spot at local recruiting offices.

Enlisted men of the Army reserve components, whose recall to active duty has been deferred because of dependents, may apply for admission to officer candidates schools if they have had at least three months of active duty since September 1, 1940 and are otherwise qualified.

To stimulate recruiting among men aged 18 and 19, such youths may select the combat branch in which they enlist. Heretofore all recruits were assigned as the Army desired.

The new Tarnsportation Service under General Gross is composed of the old transportation unit of the General Staff supply branch, the former transportation division of the Office of the Quartermaster General. It will have control of the ports of embarkation, the staging areas, and the regulating and reconsignment stations.

The General Depot Service was formed by merging the various general depots throughout the United States and the old General Staff unit handling such matters.

The Statistical Service was formerly statistics branch of the Office of the Undersecretary of War and recently the statistics division of the Services of Supply.

$5000 Insurance Refused By Mother of Slain Soldier

Altoona, Pa., April 23 (AP).—A woman who was born in Poland but became an American citizen refused today to accept payment of $5000 Federal insurance in the death of her sailor son, declaring the Government needed the money more than she and her husband, a coal miner.

Chief Signalman Charles Lynch Navy recruiting officer, identified her only as a resident of Cresson, Pa. Her son was lost in the battle of Java.

Lynch said she has another son in the Navy.

Nylon for 'Chutes

Memphis, Tenn., April 23 (AP).—A continuous supply of the most necessary form of insurance—parachutes—is assured for United States fliers.

In discussions today at the closing meeting of the American Chemical Society scientists declared that nylon is proving to be a "very satisfactory substitute" for silk in the making of parachutes.

The fabric, also used to make stockings, neckties and other articles, is made out of coal, water and air, so the supply is limitless. Until it was developed the Army and Navy depended on Japan for silk for its parachutes. When the war broke out they had less than a year's supply of silk to use as aviation insurance.

Today every part of the parachute "bustle" which a flier wears is made of nylon except for the addition of some cotton into the harness webbing to thicken it enough to fit into the buckles previously made for cotton and linen webbing.

Morgenthau Opens War Bond Drive

O'Hare on Broadcast With Farm, Labor And Business Chiefs

Secretary of Treasury Morgenthau last night launched a spring offensive on the home front designed to raise one billion dollars a month by July through purchase of war bonds.

The campaign was opened in a radio broadcast over the Blue Network and was indorsed by Lieut. Comdr. Edward H. O'Hare, U. S. Navy pilot, who was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor for shooting down five Jap bombers, and by leaders of labor, agriculture and business.

"It is now high time for us civilians, as individuals, to make our own declaration of war against the enemy—to fight, to work, to save with all our heart and soul," Morgenthau said.

Pilot Describes Fight

Commander O'Hare, introduced by Morgenthau, told in his modest way, how he shot down the enemy bombers—saying he "got the breaks"—and added:

"From what I've seen of the Japanese, I'd say that if we can meet them on anything like even terms, we can beat them! Just give us enough trained men, enough ships and planes to approach even terms, and we'll come out on top!"

Morgenthau said that beginning May 1, tens of thousands of volunteer "minute men" will call on more than 50 million income earners throughout the Nation in an intensified drive to subscribe 10 per cent of their incomes for the war effort. At the same time, he announced a new war bond quota system calling for a national quota for May of 800 million dollars, increased to 900 million dollars in June and reaching the billion-dollar mark in July.

The quotas are based on a monthly percentage of bond sales from July, 1941, through January, 1942, when the average monthly sale totaled $437,951,243. The monthly average for the District was $4,553,913, and its May quota will be $6,178,900.

Wickard Praises Farm Effort

Secretary of Agriculture Wickard praised the efforts of farmers to increase production of food and urged them to buy bonds.

"Farmers are hit hard when inflation gets out of hand," he said. "Buying war savings bonds is a way to check inflation. Farmers may need nest eggs if the present period of good prices ends. Bonds will provide that nest egg."

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said the war savings program holds a major place in our war effort and added:

"Have no doubt that labor will do its part in the war bond campaign. Every worker will, I am sure, keep up with his quota. This is a voluntary program. It is thoroughly American. The whole American people have their hearts and souls in this war and will not hold back with their money."

Philip Murray, president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, said:

"Organized labor is doing its share to set the pace for the community as a whole to follow. Only full participation by every segment of our community will make this program a success. We pledge that we will do our share."

Business leaders who pledged to support the program were T. C. Cashen, chairman, railway labor executive committee; John W. O'Leary, chairman, executive committee, United States Chamber of Commerce, and W. P. Witherow, president, National Association of Manufacturers.

Phones Curtailed

Cut Ordered In Delivery Truck Runs

By the Associated Press

Operators of all local delivery services, from department stores down to the corner grocery, were ordered yesterday to eliminate special deliveries, reduce certain regular operations and, in addition, to curtail the other mileage of their trucks at least 25 per cent.

At the same time, another Government order imposed restrictions on installations of new telephones that will probably result in denial of 200,000 applications for main line service this year.

In the delivery action, interpreted here as a long step toward forced pooling of trucking facilities in cities throughout the country, the Office of Defense Transportation prohibited, after May 15, special deliveries and "callbacks"—except to hospitals, military establishments, or for emergency deliveries of supplies necessary to public health or safety.

"Callbacks" Forbidden

Trucks also are forbidden to make more than one delivery to the same person in a single day. "Callbacks" were defined as renewed attempts to deliver goods on the same day, or to make collections.

The order to cut other mileage one-fourth under the figures of corresponding months last year, takes effect June 1. ODT emphasized that mileage saved by curtailing the specific deliveries mentioned in the order could not be included in calculating the 25 per cent mileage reduction.

Vehicles used "exclusively" for utility construction, sanitation services, military purposes, for transporting farm produce to farm or market, or for a pick-up and delivery services for common carriers are excluded from terms of the order.

Joseph B. Eastman, ODT director, in another order, laid down specific rules for wartime operations of the intercity trucking industry after June 1, except for certain vehicles exempt because of the nature of services they perform, all trucks must be loaded to capacity on outgoing trips and to at least 75 per cent capacity on return trips.

Must Pool Their Facilities

Contract and private carriers were ordered to revise their shipping schedules to comply with this provision, while common carriers, in addition to tightening up schedules, will be required to pool their facilities whenever necessary.

The order on new telephone installations means, the WPB said, that only persons engaged in direct war work or in occupations essential to the public welfare "can be sure of obtaining new telephone service in the future."

"New service may be denied to groups outside the preferred category unless existing exchange lines capacity can take care of their needs without disrupting essential service," a WPB statement added.

Annual savings of critical materials, to result from the restriction, were estimated at 53,000 tons of lead, 35,000 tons of iron and steel, 54,000 tons of copper, 6500 tons of zinc, 1800 tons of crude rubber and other materials.

George Offers Over-All Tax To Curb Profits

in proposing the over-all tax, said injustices would result from trying to solve the problem entirely by excess profits levies. Ways and Means committeemen showed interest in the British plan of refunding to the taxpayer 20 per cent of its excess profits tax, as a post-war cushion.

The big war bill carries funds to equip a 3,600,000-man Army, to complete 31,000 more war planes, and to provide funds for an Army Specialist Corps, already created by executive order. Recruited from civilian ranks, the quasi-military corps would wear a distinctive uniform. The pay range is $2300 to $8000, but the bill requires all employed at a salary above $4500 to be appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate.

The profits compromise, leaving chiefs of war agencies to decide where excessive profits were made and to renegotiate contracts as they now do, ran into a cross-fire of criticism. Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, said it left the problem unsettled. Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, said it delegated arbitrary profits power to department heads without any thumb rule. Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, insisted it would result in saving "tremendous sums." Senator George said he did not regard it as "useless," but the real problem would have to be met by taxes.

Then George outlined his plan, which he later will develop in the Finance Committee. He would invoke over-all percentage limits tentatively every year on the balance of war profits remaining after other taxes are imposed. Final adjustments would be made at the end of a three-year period or at the end of the war. The effect he said, would be to limit the aggregate profit on all war contracts to a fixed percentage of the aggregate contract price over the period of the war. Subcontracts as well as direct war contracts would be included. The extra tax would not apply to gains not resulting from the war.

George said he is "perfectly willing to say that the aggregate profit on all war contracts should be limited to not exceeding 6 per cent, and possibly not exceeding 5 per cent."

Under his plan, George said, Congress would proceed to work out a reasonable program of excess profits and other corporate normal and surtaxes. The over-all percentage limit would be applied at the end of the year against "taxable net income minus the taxes thereon."

In the case of a contractor performing nonwar work as well as war contracts, the taxable net income would be allocated between the two, on the basis of gross receipts from sales.

Across the Capitol, Stam, staff chief of the Congressional Joint Committee on Internal Revenue, meanwhile unfolded his corporate tax plan as an alternative to Treasury recommendations. Besides an excess profits tax ranging from 60 to 85 per cent, Stam proposed retention of the present 24 per cent normal tax and a war surtax of from 12 to 16 per cent. Morgenthau had recommended a war surtax of 31 per cent plus normal taxes. The Morgenthau excess profits gradations ranged from 50 to 75 per cent, as against the present excess profits range of from 35 to 60 per cent.

Tax Exemption For War Goods Asked in House

The House was urged by its Ways and Means Committee yesterday to enact promptly a bill to exempt war purchases from State and local taxation to "speed up the war program" and to prevent diversion of war appropriations from their main purpose.

A majority of the committee in a report on a bill twice revised said that "from every national standpoint, prompt enactment of this legislation is vitally necessary."

But a six-man minority took the opposite view and said the legislation would interfere seriously with State and local revenues.

"Contrary to the assumption of the majority, this would not be confined to a few sales-tax States but would occur throughout the Union," they said. "If State and local governments are denied sources of revenue now available to them, they must meet the deficit from other sources or forgo services essential to public welfare. Either alternative is highly undesirable and will disrupt national unity."

Signing the minority report were Representatives Buck (Democrat), California; Hill (Democrat), Washington; West (Democrat), Texas; Boehne (Democrat), Indiana; Cullen (Democrat), New York and Gearhart (Republican), California.

Representative Treadway (Republican), Massachusetts, filed a separate minority report.

Big Expansion Of Waterways To Provide Oil

By Cecil B. Dickson

Copyright by Chicago Sun

Vast expansion in the use of inland waterways, including the construction of a 12-foot barge canal across Florida, for the safe transportation of oil and gasoline to the war industries on the Eastern seaboard yesterday was planned by the Administration.

Legislation will be introduced in Congress Monday by Chairman Joseph J. Mansfield (Democrat), Texas, of the House Rivers and Harbors Committee, providing for a 25 million dollar Florida ship canal to hookup the Atlantic and Gulf Coast inland waterways that stretch from Corpus Christi, Tex., to Trenton, N. J.

The proposal was discussed recently with President Roosevelt by Mansfield and Army engineers now are putting the finishing touches to a report on the Barge Canal project.

Temporary pipe lines are to be laid across Florida, meantime, to permit the immediate use of the inland passages by barges towed by tugs. Pipe lines not in use in Texas are to be transported to Florida, under the plans. They are to be laid from Jacksonville to Apalachicola, Mansfield said.

Steel barges now on the Mississippi and Ohio are to be diverted to the hauling of gasoline and oil and they are to be supplanted by wooden barges to haul lumber, grain and other commodities that are not so inflammable.

Raid Detectors To Dot Coasts, Stimson Says

Secretary of War Stimson said yesterday that the Army is rapidly equipping the Nation's coast lines with "electric eye" detection devices able to locate planes or ships more than 100 miles at sea, and thus providing a warning of approaching enemy raids.

He told reporters he had inspected the secret radio locators during a recent trip to Fort Monmouth, N. J., and nearby areas, and confessed that his eyes had been opened by the amazing things achieved in this field by the Army Signal Corps.

"We already have a great many of the detectors and are working hard to get more," the War Secretary said at a press conference.

"New Science" Applied

The Signal Corps, he said, has been "applying much of the new science to war," and its officers at Fort Monmouth have been giving intense study to using radio wave echoes to warn of approaching enemy planes and ships.

"This electric eye can see 100 miles or more and warn of danger," Stimson said. "It can see at night and through fog and tell the location of enemy craft."

On his recent inspection trip, the Secretary said, he had looked at one of the new warning instruments and had seen the indication of a plane 60 miles away.

"And what I saw was elemental compared to what the officers are working on, with every indication of success, in the laboratories at Fort Monmouth," he added.

Number of Accidents Cut

Stimson also disclosed that despite the increased hazards of wartime air operations, Army flying today is 10 per cent safer than the average of the past 10 years. Although there are more accidents than in prior years due to the much greater number of men flying, the Army accident rate now is 68 per cent lower than a decade ago, he said.

However, because the great bulk of the accidents are due to the inexperience of younger pilots, and the proportion of veterans is dropping, special accident preventive steps are being taken.

Rigid regulations and flying practices are being substituted for experience, and an organization has been set up to study and enforce rigidly the safety rules.

Lieut. Col. Samuel R. Harris has been named director of flying safety for the Army Air Forces, a new post. He will be assisted by former Civil Aviation Authority safety experts.

25-Gallon Gasoline Ration A Month Believed 'Likely'

ican seamen "so someone will have gasoline to go to a bridge party or a ball game." Ickes joined Henderson, Donald M. Nelson, WPB chairman; Emory S. Land, Maritime Commission chairman, and Joseph B. Eastman, defense transportation director, in a statement that "motoring as usual—is out" in the East, possibly for the duration of the war.

"Already hundreds of men have lost their lives at sea trying to bring in oil needed for war," their statement said. "No patriotic American can or will ask men to risk their lives to preserve motoring-as-usual."

A price war was predicted by Sol A. Herzog, counsel to the Eastern States gasoline conference, who said filling stations would have to rely upon volume of customers to show a profit, adding:

"Obviously, the gasoline men will vie with the volume by slashing prices, and subsequently many dealers wil be forced out of business."

Resorts Face Ruin

New England's half million resort business faces ruin as a result of the limitation, Millard H. Davis, managing editor of the Hotel and Railroad News, publication of hotel and associated industries said. Southern Maryland resorts face a like situation.

Spokesmen for the major railways serving Washington, said that there was little they could do to ease the transportation crisis foreseen as a result of the gas shortage.

"We have already taken on an additional load as a result of tire rationing," a Pennsylvania official told The Post last night. "We are straining our facilities to the utmost in war transportation as it is. We simply don't have any more rolling stock available.

He added that the potentialties of railroads as commuter transportation for Washington suburbanites were not for the railroad but for the public to explore.

"It's not a question of putting on more commuter trains, even if it were possible, but for the public to fill the ones now in operation," he said.

The American Automobile Association and the Keystone Automobile Club, two organizations to whom the end of long automobile trips would probably be a death blow, accepted the Henderson order stoically.

Washington I. Cleveland, A. A. A. manager, and George Keneipp of the Keystone club, said that their clubs' attitude is that "we must have confidence in our Government and believe the leaders know what is best." Keneipp added that his organization had addressed letters to all its members reminding them that the rationing was "still not definite."

Rules Suggested

Motorists throughout the East were asked by the Government to observe the following rules to conserve gasoline:

1—Eliminate all unnecessary driving.
2—Form car-sharing pools with neighbors who work in the same general area.
3—Drive under 40 miles an hour.
4—Don't idle the motor unnecessarily.
5—Keep your car in good mechanical condition.
6—Align wheels properly. This also will help reduce wear on tires.
7—Lubricate your car regularly with proper oils and greases.
8—Drive at steady speeds.
9—Start slowly. Don't attempt quick get-aways, and avoid spurting.
10—Keep braking to a safe minimum.
11—Inflate tires properly.
12—Don't round curves at speeds that "pull" your car.

William A. Van Duzer, District traffic director, also advocated the sharing of autos as the only remedy for the convenience of Washington motorists. Estimating that nearly 80,000 Government employes, living in Maryland and Virginia have to drive about seven miles a day, he said their only recourse is to ride four or five miles in a car, since there is no chance of increasing the mass transportation facilities to meet this new emergency.

"We've just got to make one gallon of gas do what ten did before," he said, amplifying the slogan which Ickes adopted last summer for the first gas shortage.

that ladies with 32-inch waistlines can only have 30 square inches of elastic for gores, gussets and give. For adjustment to the figure, the lady in this class will have to depend on "front, back or side lacing."

The "class 2 garments," built for the average American woman, have a stern set of specifications. Each foundation in this class of light heavyweights may have no more than one elastic panel of not more than 20 inches in length and 8 in width. A grand total of no more than 27 square inches may be used for gores in any size foundation.

Girdles or pantie-girdles can no longer be made of pretty elasticized lace or any elastic fabric entirely, but must confine their up and down and sidewise stretch abilities to panels, gussets and gores of power net, warp knit, elastic batiste, elastic satin and all variations thereof.

According to the WPB gentlemen, all American women will look a lot better with less elastic give and more firmly restraining cloth.

Brassieres will probably not be as comfortable as old shoes with restriction of nylon, elastic nets, and other lightweight "easy-going" fabrics, but, consoled the brassiere experts, sweaters will be far more becoming.

Plane Zooms, Warns Vessel Of Torpedo

By the Associated Press

Norfolk, Va., April 23.—Crewmen who brought an American cargo ship limping into port the day after it was attacked by an enemy submarine off the Atlantic Coast on April 18 said their skipper was warned of the approaching torpedo by a Navy plane zooming low over the water.

Capt. John D. Baldwin, of Brooklyn, N. Y., master of the medium-sized vessel, barely had time to shout "Hard aport" and give the alarm before the torpedo from the unseen raider struck forward on the starboard side. The explosion tore a gaping hole, buckled deck plates, made a shambles of the wheel house and caused minor injuries to the captain and a crewman.

The Fifth Naval District public relations office, in announcing the torpedoing today, quoted crew members as saying that vessels and planes in the vicinity dropped a number of depth charges in the area where the attack occurred.

Chief Mate Matthew T. Hannan, of Paterson, N. J., and Chief Engineer Andrew H. McGarigle, of Cliffwood, N. J., told naval officers they saw the wake of the torpedo.

"I saw the torpedo break water twice about 30 seconds before she hit," McGarigle said, adding that the explosion "felt like we had hit a tremendous sea."

Second Mate Lars Olen, a naturalized Norwegian, whose home is in Brooklyn, said he had been torpedoed twice during the first World War.

"But they warned us then and gave us time to get off in the lifeboats," he added.

Two Other Cripples Saved

Brunswick, Ga., April 23 (AP).—Two merchant vessels, torpedoed off the coast on April 8 with the loss of 21 lives, were brought into port here by salvage boats and will be sent to another port for reconditioning.

Sixteen bodies were recovered from one of the boats and two were missing. Two bodies were found aboard the other vessel and one was still missing. Thirty-five men were rescued from one of the boats and 19 from the other at the time of the attack.

Editor Warns Against 'Blacking Out' Bill of Rights

New Haven, Conn., April 23 (AP).—Grove Patterson, editor of the Toledo Blade, asserted today that "anything like autocratic censorship or restriction bearing upon the first ten amendments to the Constitution would be a blackout of the very purposes for which we fight this war."

"Total war means that we must all be enlisted in one way or another," said Patterson in a prepared lecture under the Block Foundation at Yale. "But all this does not mean we are to accept the slavery of silence which the masters of totalitarian nations impose upon their subjects.

"No, come whatever blackouts there may, we shall be alert to keep alive and alight our facilities for free expression.

"We shall not do this principally for ourselves, for our aggrandizement. We shall do it as a major contribution to the only way of life which can give dignity and nobility to mankind."

Patterson asserted that editors must "impose a censorship upon ourselves—the censorship of our most careful and honest judgment, the censorship of the public welfare, the censorship of good taste.

Van Mook Praises U. S. Flying Fortresses' Defense of Java

TELL OF JAVA'S FALL—Charles O. van der Plas (left), former Governor of East Java, sat complacently by yesterday while Hubertus J. Van Mook, lieutenant governor general of the Netherlands East Indies, talked to the press at the Dutch Legation

Dr. H. J. Van Mook, Lieut. Gov. Gen. and "the strong man of the Dutch Indies" paid a glowing tribute here yesterday to the "magnificent job" done by American pilots of flying fortresses and liberator Bombers against the Japanese invaders of Java.

Heavy set, bespectacled, phlegmatic, Van Mook, en route to London to confer with his exiled home government, told of a Japanese air preponderance in the Indies of five to one and fixed the number of oppesing American planes at 40.

These, he said, did "a magnificent job, more than was thought possible."

Proof of how bitterly they fought showed up in the fact that three-fourths of the defending fighter craft were destroyed and the remaining one-fourth was damaged, he said.

In the Indies fighting, Dr. Van Mook said, were about 3000 English speaking troops, principally Australians.

Throughout, they were hampered by an absence of fighter plane protection, he said. He said "a number" of British planes, partly fighters and medium bombers were brought in after the fall of Singapore and "did a very good job." He remembered some of the British planes as being old with low speeds and almost no armament, but taken up anyway in the nighttime to bomb the Japanese lines.

Asked at a press conference, held in the Netherlands Legation, if the Dutch because of the loss of so much of their navy might ask for ships now as part of their aid from Allied sources, Dr. Van Mook said he was not in touch immediately with that aspect. How much of the Dutch navy remained he declined to say, but affirmed that "we got out most of our men." The question had arisen of whether these might not be employed on Allied fighting vessels, or of whether the Dutch had plans for another navy of their own.

He believed that from four to six months would be required for the Japanese to utilitze their seized oil fields in the Indies.

Applies to Some Fields

Such a time limit he put on the fields easiest of repair and took into consideration how much manpower the Japanese could spare for the work.

He minimized fifth column activities in the Indies ahead of the invasion, declined to discuss what effects he believed the bombings of the Japanese islands had on the population there and, otherwise, did not anticipate a full-scale invasion of Australia, though he saw a possibility of attacks on the northern areas of the continent. Van Mook was in Australia when Gen. Douglas MacArthur arrived there. He and a party of officials left by plane early in March. Asked about possible Japanese atrocities in the Indies, Van Mook said he had no specific information, that news was difficult to get after the invaders took over. All in the official party left their families behind. No word has come from them.

With Van Mook were H. J. J. Lovink, head of the division of East Asiatic affairs; Dr. M. S. Blom, director of justice, and Charles O. Van der Plas, former governor of East Java.

Democratic Ideals Will Be Preserved, President Pledges

New York, April 23 (AP).—President Roosevelt today pledged America's armed forces that the Nation would "preserve for them, wherever they may be, and without regard to race, creed or color, the moral and spiritual values of the democratic ideals and freedoms for which they are fighting."

In a letter to Harper Sibley, president of the United Service Organizations, indorsing the U. S. O.'s 32-million-dollar war fund campaign opening May 11, the President wrote:

"Not by machines alone will we win this war.

"Unitedly, unstintingly and without interruption or delay, we have solemnly promised to give our men a mounting tide of guns, tanks, planes and ships.

"We shall keep that promise, and one promise more—that we shall preserve for them, wherever they may be, and without regard to race, creed or color, the moral and spiritual values of the democratic ideals and freedoms for which they now are fighting.

"Because the U. S. O. is unitedly dedicated to that high purpose, and because that high purpose is a vital part of the job of winning this war, the U. S. O. should be supported by everybody—cheerfully, generously, and now."

Price Ceilings Put on China, Cotton Goods

By Sterling F. Green
Associated Press Staff Writer

The Government carried its campaign against rising living costs into the kitchen, cupboard and closet yesterday by placing price ceilings on china and pottery and a long list of cotton products including sheets, blankets, diapers, towels and ginghams.

In addition, a permanent price lid was put on used egg crates, an element in the cost of eggs.

The two major orders affected prices at the manufacturers' level and, in the case of cotton, should bring about "considerably lower" prices than those prevailing, OPA said. The chinaware order, covering hundreds of china and pottery items, including cups, saucers, dishes, plates and bowls, was in effect a denial of a price boost requested in February.

The cotton products action, supplementing seven existing price orders on cotton yarns and goods, brought practically every product of the cotton textiles industry under price control, Price Administrator Leon Henderson said.

It is effective May 4 and bases prices on the levels prevailing July 21 to August 15, 1941. The ceiling is a flexible one, designed to let prices fluctuate with raw cotton quotations.

Additional finished articles affected include bedspreads, tablecloths, napkins, corduroys, flannels, cottonades and chambrays, and among the unfinished goods covered are shirting, sateens, gabardine, industrial fabrics, ducks, and wide goods of 42 inches and over.

The china and pottery order imposes on manufacturers of vitreous ware a ceiling at the price levels of October 1-15, 1941, but allows producers of semi-vitreous ware to charge 5 per cent above the October 1-15 quotations.

OPA said this would allow a "fair margin of profit." Manufacturers, who granted two 10 per cent wage increases to employes last year, had scheduled a 10 per cent price boost last February, but voluntarily withdrew it in order to give OPA time to complete a study of costs in the industry. Stoneware and art pottery were not covered by the new action.

Even under price control the industry, which enjoyed sales of almost 50 million dollars last year, is expected to obtain more favorable dollar profits than in prewar years, OPA said, because of increased purchasing power already reflected in mounting sales of china and pottery articles.

The price order for used egg cases replaces a temporary order and fixes prices substantially at the levels prevailing from October 1 to 15, 1941.

U.S. Signs Peru Pact to Obtain War Materials

By Michael Chinigo
International News Service Staff Writer

The United States and Peru yesterday agreed on a four-point program of all-out wartime collaboration. It will be a model for forthcoming agreements with all South American nations which severed relations with the Axis and Japan.

The accord was concluded one hour before President Roosevelt, meeting for the first time with the Board of Economic Warfare, ordered it to "get clicking" in the procurement of strategic materials vital to the successful prosecution of the war.

Secretary of State Hull participated in the White House session during which, according to Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones, "everyone understood what he's supposed to do."

Peru, like Mexico and Haiti, by yesterday's agreement understood a complete mobilization of its national resources to produce war materials needed by the United States.

Rubber Included

The terms of the accord, fixed in an exchange of notes between Peruvian Minister of Finance and Commerce David Dasso and Secretary of State Hull, specifically establish:

1. The creation of a Peruvian Amazon Valley Corporation "to develop the production and encourage the collection of wild rubber and other tropical products.

2. Arrangements for the acquisition by the United States Rubber Reserve Co. of all surplus rubber produced in Peru during the next five years.

3. The extension of a 25 million dollars credit by the Export-Import Bank to finance purchases in the United States of equipment needed to develop Peru's industrial structure and another of $1,123,000 by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to increase Peru's production of wild rubber.

4. That the United States will purchase all surplus Peruvian cotton for the war's duration, participate in the creation of an agricultural experiment station and lend United States experts to help develop Peru's highway, erosion control, coal mining and tea processing projects.

Hull Hails Action

Peru's envoy further pledged his country to resume payment of the "dollar debt" and enter into consultation with Washington to prevent enemy elements from deriving benefits from the agreements.

Secretary Hull in his note stated that he was convinced "the decision taken will contribute in important degree to the security of the hemisphere."

Hull pointed out, however, that "the exigencies of war" make it imperative that American equipment be granted to other nations "only after careful study and determination that the establishment of the industry for which they are needed will contribute directly in important measure to the war effort of the United States and the security of the hemisphere."

Jones Denies Plant Unit 'Malfeasance'

Charges by Truman Subcommittee And Sen. Bunker Are Called False

Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones yesterday turned on Congressional critics of the conduct of his Defense Plant Corporation in a contract for construction and operation of a magnesium plant at Las Vegas, Nev., and in a seven-page statement characterized as "without foundation" charges made on the floor of the Senate and by a Senate investigating subcommittee.

"We do not object to honest or fair criticism, but unwarranted charges tend to discredit honest officials and destroy confidence in our Government at the most crucial period of its existence," Jones asserted.

The statement was filed for the record of the Senate War Investigating Committee by its chairman, Senator Truman (Democrat), Missouri. The charges to which the statement replied were made by a subcommittee of the Truman committee and by Senator Bunker (Democrat) of Nevada.

"False and Misleading"

Jones recalled that on April 9, Mr. Bunker, in a Senate speech, "made the very serious charge of malfeasance against officials of DPC."

"These charges are completely refuted by the facts, are false and misleading and are, as I have publicly stated, unworthy of a United States Senator," Jones declared.

Built Economically

Jones stated that, "of course," he agreed with "that part of the subcommittee's report which states that Government plants should be built as economically as possible."

"This is a Government plant, and is being built as economically as possible," the Secretary said. "The criticism of the subcommittee is without foundation."

Jones declared that the War Department and the OPM recommended "the plant, its process, its capacity, its location, its builder, and its operator." He quoted a War Department report praising the "outstanding" speed with which plans for the projected plant were set up by Basic Refractories, Inc., parent concern of Basic Magnesium, Inc., the company which holds the Defense Plant Corporation contract.

Jones considered in order and made replies to six charges made by the subcommittee and eight charges leveled by Bunker.

To the charge that DPC is paying "tremendous fees for 'know how,'" Jones asserted that fees to be paid to 10 contracting and engineering firms engaged on the project aggregate less than 2 per cent of the $73,500,000 cost of the plant.

Operating Fees Called Low

The Secretary also calculated at 2 per cent of the estimated cost of the plant, operating fees to be paid to Basic Magnesium, Inc., which the subcommittee said would equal $560,000 a year, at capacity production of 112 million pounds of magnesium annually. He described this fee as "low," and declared that the contract is to run for 10 years, rather than 30 years as stated by the subcommittee.

Observing that the plant was scheduled to start magnesium production this June and predicting that this operation will start in August, Jones cited a personal inspection of the factory last Sunday by Lieut. Gen. William S. Knudsen in refutation of a subcommittee charge that "miserable progress" has been made in construction. Knudsen, Jones declared, found portions of the plant from 60 to 40 per cent complete.

Jones cited the need for speed in responding to the contention that DPC should have delayed construction until the terms of the operating license were settled. He characterized as "just another use of superlatives," the charge that the magnesium firm proposes "exorbitant royalty terms" for the magnesite ore deposits it proposes to lease to the Government.

British Experts Defended

Senator Bunker's charge that DCP is paying Basic Refractories $211,000 for "promotion" of the enterprise met with a categorical denial from Jones. The secretary also defended payment of salaries of English technicians in this country in connection with the operation on the ground that the technical knowledge of the men is "indispensable."

Countering the contention of Mr. Bunker that the Government is paying twice for plans for housing at the Las Vegas plant, Jones contrasted the $28,000 to be paid the housing contractor with $175,000, or 5 per cent of total cost, which would be the customary fee on a $3,500,000 undertaking.

Any profit from sale of magnesium produced at the plant, said Jones, will go to the Government, rather than to the contractor, as charged by the Senator. Jones called "amazing" and "entirely incorrect" Mr. Bunker's charge that the magnesium concern stands to make $2,140,000 in one year.

The firm's commitments and disbursements are subject to prior approval of DPC auditors and engineers, Jones asserted in reply to Mr. Bunker's charge that the firm was given a "carte blanche" agreement to act in behalf of DPC. As for Mr. Bunker's assertion that the magnesium corporation has no obligation to make repayments to DPC, Jones declared that "anyone even remotely interested" in the truth would be able to ascertain "that the situation is not one involving a loan."

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up nights. Frequent or scanty passage with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may also cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Fix Labor Policy Now, Land Urges

the question of lengthening the work week at regular wages from 40 to 48 hours involved some economic phases he didn't want to pass upon.

When Senator Ball (Republican) of Minnesota, predicted that suspension of the requirement for time and one-half pay for work in excess of 40 hours a week would be followed by demands for wage increases, Land replied:

"I believe the labor people are so loyal and so patriotic that if they were assured that the resulting gains would go into the United States Treasury and not into the pockets of the shipbuilding firms, they would be ready to make such sacrifices."

While land was testifying, Representative Engel (Republican), of Michigan, told the House he believed suspension of the 40-hour law would "mark the end of the democracy and the beginning of totalitarianism."

Engel said workers had a property right in wage contracts with employers that ought not to be destroyed. Beyond that, he contended that time-and-a-half pay spurred production efforts of the individual.

House to Consider 4 Bills Affecting District Monday

The House will take up four District bills Monday, including a measure to exempt out-of-town corporations from paying a 5 per cent tax on net profits earned in Washington.

Purposes of other measures scheduled for consideration are:

To permit custodians of District public schools to accept overtime pay for work performed as the result of the Selective Service and civilian defense programs.

To exempt ambulance and funeral car drivers from required knowledge of public places in Washington, which is now required of taxi and ambulance and funeral car drivers.

To allow the District Alley Dwelling Authority to borrow funds from private and public sources to carry out its projects.

Dr. Thomas Parran, director of the United States Public Health Service, will appear before the District Committee at 10 a. m. to testify on a bill requiring physicians practicing in Washington to be American citizens.

Marines Training As Glider Troops

play an important role in the coming struggle between the Allies and Japan for the possession of countless strategic islands in the vast Pacific area.

The Marines, specially trained land-sea fighters, will lead the way in this amphibious fighting. They are expected to have glider operations in their bag of tricks when the time comes for the United States to take the offensive against Japan.

Organization of glider troops has been delayed until now because the development of such craft had to start practically from scratch after Crete. The largest glider built in the United States prior to then held but four people.

Months of experimentation was necessary before a successful large glider was devised. Last fall contracts were let for the construction of a large craft able to carry 24 fully armed Marines.

This experimental craft, forerunner of the fleet of Marine-carrying gliders expected to be in service before many months are past, was built by the firm of Snead and Co. in nearby Orange, Va.

A smaller glider, carrying 12 Marines, was ordered from the Allied Aviation Corp. of Baltimore. It has a wing span of 88 feet and its gross weight is about 6500 pounds.

Planes Can Tow Both

Both can be towed by any type of Navy or Marine Corps fighting plane and can land either on land or in the water. According to reports, the Germans used ordinary outboard motors to propel the gliders to the beach once they were landed in the water off Crete.

It should take little time to drill trained Marines in the essentials of glider operations. They merely ride to battle in a different sort of craft.

Nor should the training of the glider pilots take long, as only qualified aviators will be allowed at the controls of the big gliders.

Norwegian Urges Front in Homeland

abundant and easily accessible, one company (Dow Chemical) has monopolized its production in the United States between 1927 and 1941," Arnold told the committee.

"Moreover, a German company (I. G. Farben) through a patent pooling arrangement, has held the right to limit the production of magnesium in the United States while Germany was steadily expanding her production."

Arnold gave the committee a step-by-step outline of the rise of the Dow, Alcoa and I. G. Farben partnership. He showed how Alcoa abandoned the magnesium-production field to Dow from which it purchased the metal for fabrication by its subsidiary, American Magnesium Corp., at prices from five to ten cents a pound below prices available to competitors.

Production 30,000 Tons

At no time prior to antitrust indictment of the companies—prelude to the consent decree—did Dow's magnesium production in the United States exceed 6000 tons a year, Arnold stated. In 1940, "the year which saw the fall of France," he said, Germany was manufacturing almost one-half of the world's production (19,000 metric tons), while the United States was producing "but 14 per cent."

(Congressional sources yesterday estimated the country's 1941 magnesium production at 30,000 tons toward a goal of 362,000 tons.)

Hitler, said Arnold, refused to tolerate price-controlling cartels in Germany. Germany, he stated, had a "boom in six months" after Hitler "broke" the German cartel system.

Frankly, Arnold responded, "No," when asked by LaFollette if he considered the magnesium consent decree as "good" as that entered several weeks ago which freed synthetic rubber patents held by Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey. He explained that the decree was obtained in the face of controversy over whether antitrust action was interfering with the war effort and at a time when the Administration was anxious to release basic materials patents.

To the committee, which for nearly two weeks has been conducting hearings on legislative proposals for revision of patent laws, Arnold urged that Congress give "the Government the right to cancel any patent which has been used as an instrument to create a domestic or international cartel."

Sarah Roosevelt Leaves $$1,089,812

only two items, the James R. Roosevelt Memorial Library at Hyde Park, $6,000, and a Hyde Park residence, $2250.

The proceedings show a $5000 bequest to St. James' Church at Hyde Park, which is known as the President's church, and establishment of trust funds for Mrs. Anna Eleanor Roosevelt, the President's wife, and the Roosevelt's five children. They also show the only other grants are $5000 each for the three executors in lieu of fees and commissions, after which the residuary estate passes outright to the President.

Mrs. Roosevelt's will, dated September 20, 1928, directed one-tenth of the estate be set aside for the trust funds, each grandchild being granted one-sixteenth of the residue.

Of the five trust funds for the grandchildren, only two will be established, according to the proceedings. These are for Lieut. Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., East Norwich, N. Y., and Ensign John A. Roosevelt, Coronado, Calif.

The others, Mrs. Anna R. Boettiger, Seattle, Wash.; Capt. James Roosevelt, Coronado, and Capt. Elliott Roosevelt, Fort Worth, Tex., having passed the age of 30, receive their bequests outright, as will Franklin, jr., and John A., now aged 27 and 25 respectively, when they arrive at that age.

The appraisal cites the most valuable jewelry owned by Mrs. Roosevelt as a necklace of 69 pearls, valued at $1800.

One item of deduction is a 1941 Federal income tax of $12,482.

The bond holdings include:

Twenty thousand dollars in Memphis Union Station Co., first mortgage 5s, appraised at $23,200; New York Corporation stock for supply of water, $19,000 of 4.5 per cent of 1960, $23,465; $20,000 of United States Treasury 3.25 per cent, $21,275.

Principal stock holdings

Three thousand shares General Electric, common, appraised at $96,186; 100 shares American Can, $8,243; 100 shares American Circle Co., $11,100; 500 shares American Telephone & Telegraph common $77,875; 400 shares American Tobacco Co., common, $28,300; 68 shares Bank of New York, $23,120; 100 shares Celanese Corporation of America, $12,687; 200 shares cumulative preferred, Consolidated Edison Co. of New York, $19,850; 200 shares Douglas Aircraft Co., Inc., $15,075; 300 shares E. I. duPont de Nemours, $46,668.

One hundred Eastman Kodak Co., common, $13,832; 100 shares Fulton Trust Co., $20,000; 200 shares General Motors, preferred, $25,300; 150 shares Guaranty Trust Co., $42,975; 300 shares Pennsylvania Railroad Co., common, $6956.10.

Biddle Issues New Warning on Sedition; Grand Jury Starts Probe of Social Justice

of Social Justice, the grand jurors yesterday apparently turned further attention to David Baxter, leader in the secret, armed revolutionist Social Republic Society, which plans to seize control of an American revolt. Baxter and others of the "Soci" hidden leadership say that their chance will come soon, although they claim they themselves do not advocate violence.

Four Reporters Called

Called in by Foreman John S. Gorrell and his colleagues were four newspaper reporters to whom Baxter explained his plans and his philosophy at a press conference Tuesday. They were Adele Burstein, Bill Hickey, Betsy Jager and Dillard Stokes.

The grand jury also examined Representative Clare E. Hoffman for a third time. Hoffman was first called when The Post disclosed that copies of his "Roosevelt Is a Judas" speech had been mailed in the same envelope with a seditious postcard and in the same wrapper with the "buy arms" bulletin sent by the "Soci" leaders to their followers.

Hoffman had 143,000 copies of the "Roosevelt Is a Judas" speech produced by the Government Printing Office and sent them to people who distributed them and sold them wholesale. When first summoned he called Prosecutor Maloney a "smear artist." But yesterday Hoffman had nothing to say.

Meanwhile, two Senators issued statements concerning their indorsement of the magazine The Cross and the Flag, started recently by Gerald L. K. Smith, once a henchman of Huey P. Long, later a collaborator of William Dudley Pelley, who is now in jail on a charge of sedition, and afterward the head of an isolationist "committee of one million."

Nye Offers No Apologies

Said Senator Gerald Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, who declared Smith's first issue was "excellently done:"

"I haven't any apologies to offer at all for having written these lines."

Said Senator Robert R. Reynolds (Democrat) of North Carolina, chairman of the Military Affairs Committee:

"He (Smith) is against communism, nazism and fascism, is against 'union now' with Britain . . . I have no apologies to offer for indorsing the program of any individual or group standing for the things I have stood for for many years."

Reynolds did not mention The Cross and the Flag's slurs of Winston Churchill and President Roosevelt, or Smith's agitation to have the United States call home its fleet, to fight a defensive war, leaving the seas clear for Japanese and Nazi submarines.

Malta Knocks Out Six Axis Raiders

Valetta, Malta, April 23 (AP).—Six enemy planes were destroyed and four damaged over Malta today. The raiders were shot down in two heavy raids on this island fortress. Antiaircraft was credited with downing four bombers in the first raid alone, with results still to be checked on the second.

One German flier who bailed out of his plane was shot at by his fellow fighters both during his descent and after he got into a dinghy, the British announced.

Pope Renamed To TVA Board By Roosevelt

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt yesterday renominated James P. Pope, former Democratic Senator of Idaho, for a nine-year term as a member of the Tennessee Valley Authority board of directors.

Senator McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, whose recent differences with TVA directors over the construction of Douglas Dam aroused speculation whether he would oppose Pope's confirmation, declined to commit himself today.

"I will look into the nomination," he commented.

Pope was appointed a few years ago to complete the unexpired term of Arthur E. Morgan, who was removed by President Roosevelt as a result of differences the latter had with Chairman David E. Lilienthal. The Morgan term expires May 18.

Isolationists Don't Change, Flynn Warns

Special Dispatch to The Post

The records of men before December 7 should serve as the basis for voting on candidates for election to the Senate and House this fall, Edward J. Flynn, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, asserted last night in a speech before the Women's National Democratic Club here.

If they were isolationists before the war, Flynn said, it is pretty safe to assume that they will be isolationists again after it is all over, and as such would make impossible the signing of a lasting peace.

Flynn said that the Republicans were to be commended for their support of the President and the war effort, which they demonstrated at their recent meeting in Chicago, but he added that in giving the Government this support they were doing only their duty as Americans. If they did not do it, he added, they would be "traitors."

It is fair and entirely just, in electing members of Congress, and particularly Senators, to take into consideration their attitude before December 7, Flynn continued, because what their attitude before December 7 was, most likely will be their attitude after the war is over.

Flynn praised the League of Nations and expressed regret that the United States had rejected it after the World War. The vote on the League of Nations was the result of the opposition of a political party, to embarrass President Wilson and the Democratic Administration at that time.

"Don't let us win this war in vain," Flynn said. "Let us see to it that we win a peace that will prevent all future wars."

School Recital To Raise Funds For Symphony

For the benefit of the National Symphony Orchestra's sustaining fund drive, Howard Mitchell, first cellist and nationally known concert artist, will give a recital for the students of Friends School, 3901 Wisconsin Avenue Northwest, at 9 o'clock this morning. He will be accompanied by Willa Semple, piano instructor at Friends.

Proceeds from the concert will be contributed to the National Symphony's campaign for $114,000, which closes tomorrow.

According to Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith, chairman of educational committee, Washington's entire educational forces have been solidly behind the drive since its inception nine days ago as an expression of their appreciation for the National Symphony's annual series of students' concerts.

In spite of the fact that active solicitation is not permitted in the public schools, all schools are cooperating to the utmost of their ability and using all possible means of raising money for the orchestra, Mrs. Smith said.

For the subcommittee under Mrs. Edward Keating and Miss Mary L. McQuade covering private and parochial Catholic schools, Mitchell will give three benefit recitals before the end of the school term, the proceeds to be donated to the symphony fund.

Several of the public high schools, which are covered by a committee headed by Mrs. Miriam B. Hilton, are using entertainments as a method of raising money.

In some of the elementary schools, which come under a committee headed by Mrs. Edna Ellis Hilton, luncheons have been arranged.

According to Mrs. Slocum Kingsbury, chairman of the private schools committee, their drive consists both in asking the schools to contribute and in musical education programs.

Colleges and universities are covered by a committee headed by Mrs. L. Corrin Strong, with Miss Betsy Winter as vice chairman. Student representatives have been selected in each institution and contributions are made through them.

Senate Approval Asked for O'Hare Rise on Navy List

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt asked the Senate yesterday to approve his advancement of Lieut. Comdr. Edward H. O'Hare, flying hero, 30 numbers on the Navy promotion list.

At the same time, Lieut. Col. James W. Doolittle, outstanding speed flier, was nominated by the President for advancement to brigadier general.

Doolittle, winner of numerous trophies and one-time holder of the world high speed record for land planes, has been on active Army duty for nearly two years. He was an Army flier in 1917-30. Doolittle is 45 and his home is in Detroit. His present assignment was not disclosed.

O'Hare shot down five Japanese bombers and damaged a sixth in one five-minute engagement over the Pacific. The President conferred the Congressional Medal of Honor on him last Tuesday and at the same time promoted him from lieutenant to lieutenant commander.

District Drafts New Bill to Curb Tax Sale Speculators

At the request of a House District subcommittee, Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech today will begin drafting a bill designed to eliminate tax sale of property to individuals described by Keech as "shake-down artists."

At the same time, he was requested to seek the views of District officials on a way for the local government to buy property on which payment of taxes has lapsed. The property would be resold by the District.

Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, acting chairman of the judiciary subcommittee, made the requests as the group considered a bill to amend existing tax sales law.

The amendment provides that property sold for nonpayment of taxes can be redeemed in two years by payment of the tax plus 1 per cent interest per month. The person buying the property would have to obtain a tax deed within the next three years. If he failed to get the tax deed, all he would then be entitled to would be the amount paid to the District plus interest at 6 per cent per year for the last three years.

Under present law there is no limitation on the time of interest, and persons losing their property because they fail to pay their taxes are exposed to "shake-down artists," Keech told the subcommittee.

Mrs. Burnita S. Matthews, an attorney, and George H. O'Connor, president of the Washington Title Insurance Co., told the subcommittee they favored the amendment.

Rufus S. Lusk, president of the Washington Taxpayers Association, declared that while the amendment is "highly desirable," it "does not get to the heart of the problem."

Selling of a tax indebtedness by the District to a private individual for "profit and exploitation is a vicious practice," Lusk said.

"The only excuse for this procedure is to supply the District with needed cash, but our government in recent years has not been short of operating funds. Hundreds of thousands of dollars in interest on delinquent real estate have gone to private speculators instead of into our own local treasury.

"These speculators buy in only the choice properties that are delinquent; all the lemons have to be bought in by the District. The professional tax buyers soak up the cream and leave the skim milk to the local government to collect the best it can."

Fear of Theft Holds Up Use Of Silver Wires

By the Associated Press

Fear that someone might steal them, Secretary Morgenthau disclosed yesterday that he is holding up the use of silver wires for carrying electric power to war plants.

The Treasury head explaining to a press conference that although the Treasury recently agreed to lend approximately one billion ounces of silver to war industries for wiring to free copper for other uses, none of the silver has been borrowed yet, because of the theft problem.

Morgenthau said WPB Chairman Donald Nelson figured it would be a pretty neat trick to steal silver wires carrying a deadly current through them.

But the Defense Plant Corporation, said Morgenthau, wants the question of liability for the metal settled before any silver goes into plans for which it is responsible.

'Song of the Islands' Is A Tuneful, Comic Number

Grable, Oakie and Mature Capitol's Costars In a Gay Color Job Set in Prewar Hawaii; Al Trahan Tops Entertaining Stage Revue

"SONG OF THE ISLANDS." Twentieth Century-Fox Technicolor picturization of an original screen play by Joseph Schrank, Robert Ellis and Helen Logan, costarring Betty Grable, Victor Mature and Jack Oakie, with Thomas Mitchell, George Barbier, Billy Gilbert, Hilo Hattie, Lillian Porter and Hal K. Dawson. Directed by Walter Lang. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

A PREWAR HAWAIIAN TRAVEL FOLDER, printed in gay tropical colors, comes to life on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater this week.

The Twentieth Century-Fox Technicolor production of "Song of the Islands" goes even further than that. It tosses in a bit of a love story, a large order of extremely tuneful music and something about cattle-raising on the ranges we always thought were set aside for the breeding of longhorn pineapples. We don't recall anything in any Polynesian pamphlet about the rivalry between Texas and Hawaiian ranching, but that is what is plopped in here to lend necessary parental controversy to the sandy-beach-hula-skirt romance that sprouts in the lives of Eileen O'Brien, daughter of the Celtic beachcomber, and young Jefferson Harper, son of the Chicago millionaire, who must own most of the world's acreage not in the hands of the Axis. And that reminds me. This is all strictly prewar stuff, right off the boat. Not an aggressive gun is fired and the war isn't even mentioned. "Song of the Islands" is an echo of a glamorous and glorious past—not a battle hymn.

As far as that unobtrusive plot is concerned, there is nothing to worry about, either for or against. It merely furnishes the pegs on which to hang all those solo and ensemble songs and hulas, some pretty volcanic comedy and nostalgic memories of a Lotus Land that abhorred industry and glorified indolence. Brilliant Technicolor lends it all a brightly-hued, kaleidoscopic beauty that makes the whole thing as pleasant a featherweight implement with which to kill a couple of hours agreeably as has made us homesick for the tropics since the last coconut fell on our head.

When Betty Grable isn't engaged in her solo songs and grass-skirt gyrations, she is being made not-so-mad love to by Victor Mature, which is almost a career in itself. When Mr. Mature is not pursuing Miss Grable through the thickets, he is being roundly—and I mean roundly—upbraided by Jack Oakie, the senior Harper's Texas foreman, a few miles off his regular beat. When Mr. Oakie isn't trying to elude Hilo Hattie and her papa, whose pappy was a cannibal, he is trying to dip into their niece's pot. When Thomas Mitchell isn't picking a scrap with the predatory elder Harper, he is trying to nurture the one George Barbier, the predatory elder Harper, picked with him. And when all those natives aren't singing, or dancing, or throwing a feast, in honor of something or other, they are listening to Harry Owens and His Royal Hawaiian Orchestra, which is no mean way to pass the time, either. And that's the way it goes—briskly, breezily and buoyantly. Not a principal in the cast, but turns in a slap-happy-go-lucky mess of exuberance.

Mr. Trahan and Miss Andrews Triumph

The new stage bill at the Capitol is on a par with the screen feature in the matter of diversified and lively entertainment. That old wheelhorse of the varieties, Al Trahan, and his new partner, Margaret Adams, perpetuated precedent by stealing the show at yesterday's first performance. A pianist and baritone of concert caliber in either department and a one-man comedy troupe all by himself, the Trahan is at the top of his form in an act that improves with long familiarity. Miss Adams not only is an able foil for his boisterous clowning, but a soprano of rare endowments that eventually are beautifully and bountifully displayed.

Sharing interest and enthusiasm with the headliners, Lois Andrews, the "extra added attraction," proves to be a young artiste of exceptional beauty and poise, with a deep, rich voice that lends itself perfectly to a group of the most popular of the current ballads. For a surprise finale to her long succession of curtain calls, George Jessel, her husband, came out of the audience to join her on the stage and climax her too-brief cycle of songs with a burst of spontaneous comedy. Miss Andrews need not be disturbed about her professional future. She is already "in," as the saying goes.

Adriana and Charley, trampoline artists, and the Mulcays, Jim and Mildred, with their musicianly harmonicas, are at the head of their classes, too. And those Rhythm Rockets are in there hitch-kicking, too.

The Fox Movietone News, Gandy Goose in "Lights Out," one of the best of the Paul Terry color cartoons; Sam Jack Kaufman's two-part overture, with Lynn Allison singing "A Heart That's Free" in fine voice, and Art Brown's community singing-bee complete an elegant entertainment to usher in the "silly season."

It Still Doesn't Run Smooth!

BETTY GRABLE, THOMAS MITCHELL, VICTOR MATURE trying to whip up an effective love potion in the Twentieth Century-Fox Technicolor production of "Song of the Islands," now on view in all its varicolored splendor on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater. Jack Oakie is the comedy mainstay of the goings-on, along with Hilo Hattie and George Barbier, more apoplectic than ever as a crotchety Croesus

HEDDA HOPPER

What! No 'Yoo-Hoos?'

Hollywood, Calif., April 23. That hectic Army tour certainly left its mark on Ann Sheridan. She started "George Washington Slept Here" minus 7 pounds of pertinent femininity, and says maybe stage should be labeled "Ann Sheridan—and not General George—Slept Here." She was very weary, but quarts of cream and ginger ale whipped up together are putting the pounds and energy back. Ann wouldn't take the world for that visit with the boys. Says she, "A more regular, gentlemanly group of fellows I have never met in my life. During the whole trip, not a single wisecrack was thrown my way . . . They didn't even mention 'oomph!'"

ANN SHERIDAN

At Fort Riley she was taken on the antitank-gun range. The boys insisted she yank a trigger, and gunner got so excited with Ann there, he raised the barrel too high. First tracer bullet went half a mile over target—set a hill on fire! Trucks had to be called out to extinguish flames—but boys still didn't mention "oomph."

William Saroyan begins to look like Metro's triple threat to Orson Welles. While waiting for Mickey Rooney to complete "A Yank at Eton" so that he can direct him in his own story, "The Human Comedy," Saroyan's put in his spare time writing and directing a short.

Studio executives are so impressed, rumor is they've given him the go-ahead on another full-length feature, "Talking to You" (also original) to keep him busy, and he says he'll have it wrapped up in 20 days! He probably will at that—he wrote "The Human Comedy" in four weeks.

Saroyan's even got a protege lined up—a new actor named Peter Hagopian, who did a part in his short.

Michele Morgan got off to rather a slow start, since she spent her first year with R. K. O., mastering the English language. But now that "Joan of Paris" is released, Warners are after her for "Casa Blanca," after which she goes to Universal for a third.

Meantime, Producer David Hempstead is readying still another story for her, so it looks as if Michele was coming up on the home stretch.

Dean Jagger's up for the role of Father Mealey in "Keys of the Kingdom." Incidentally, did you know that Joe Cotten, Dan Tobin, Van Heflin, all of whom had the principal male roles with Katharine Hepburn in "Philadelphia Story" on stage have been tested for the role of Father Chisholm in that picture?

When Rita Chase arrived for "Now, Voyager," a producer, remembering those vicious cracks she took at Hollywood in her book, "Past Imperfect," said, "Now you can do another—and call it 'Present Vindicative!'"

After Joan Crawford and Allen Jenkins put on that jitterbug routine in "He Kissed the Bride," Allen was approached by a local hep-cat who wanted to team up with him for the coming Southern California jitterbug contests. Allen declined with a groan—said he didn't want to go on tour in a wheel chair.

Don Castle's been given one of the leads in "Wake Island" on the strength of his performance in Harry Sherman's "Tombstone."

When the Mayor of Marineland, Fla., was called to war, citizens ganged up and elected Bob Benchley to his office. Arriving here to do a part in "The Major and the Minor," Bob said, "I'm mayor not only of 25 good citizens, but 400,000 fish in the local hatchery!"

Rudy Vallee has set aside a corridor in his Hilltop home for his collection of photographs, clippings, and memorabilia, compiled through the years by his secretary. The only item lacking is a scrapbook of clippings that Rudy collected personally when he was a 14-year-old, tooting his saxophone at home-town socials—and doggone if he hasn't got that in a safety deposit vault!

New York, April 23.

Because of what he calls "the rapid advance of history," Jay Allen is revealing his off-the-record interview with Marshal Petain. In that interview, Petain disclosed the manner in which he had discharged Pierre Laval in December, 1940 . . . When Laval returned from Paris and heard Petain request the formal resignations of the Cabinet ministers, he suspected only that this was a normal gesture—in the same manner that members of the Roosevelt Cabinet formally tendered their never-accepted resignation at the beginning of each term. Laval submitted his resignation, along with the others. Petain then asked them to leave the room. When they returned, the chief of state told Pierre Laval: "I hereby accept your resignation. You are finished!"

"It would not be exactly propitious to our war effort," they ruled, "to put a camera in the hands of a Japanese."

Bonita May Quit Youthful Roles

Bonita Granville may say goodby to adolescent roles once and for all. Bonita's portrayal in William Dieterle's RKO-Radio production, "Syncopation," is expected to establish her as one of the top young dramatic actresses of the screen, and it is unlikely that any future commitments will be made until the effect of this role on her career is known.

Playing opposite Jackie Cooper, Bonita, who celebrated her nineteenth birthday in February, appears throughout a considerable portion of the picture as a woman in her mid-thirties.

Gig Is Entitled to Big Giggle!

Hollywood, April 23 (INS).—If Gig Young, born Bryant Fleming, doesn't believe there's luck in a change of names, he should! I've never known a career to move as fast as Gig's since Warners rechristened him with the name of the character he plays in "The Gay Sisters."

VERA ZORINA

Gig has been handed one of the best roles ever written for a young actor, that of the boy violinist in Fanny Hurst's "Humoresque"—that's certainly getting to the top of the ladder in one jump. In the silent version, it was one of the great hits of its time and the story of the Jewish youth who becomes a great violinist is still sure fire in the Hearts and Flowers School.

I have always thought Zorina was sealed, signed and all but delivered for Mark in "For Whom the Bell Tolls." But, according to Buddy de Sylva, no contract will be signed until leads are made with Gary Cooper. If Zorina and Gary are well matched as Mark and Robert Jordan, the part is hers. But if Director Sam Wood feels that some other actress emotes better with the tall, lanky former cowboy, Zorina will be given another picture. Whispers are that Olivia de Havilland, Laraine Day and Margo will also make tests with Cooper. I wonder about Olivia, since she has the Selznick picture. It wouldn't surprise me if Bette Davis, Greta Garbo, Katharine Hepburn and others asked for a test.

Judy Garland is beginning to realize that a famous movie star cannot even enjoy poor health without being heckled. Judy hasn't been well for the last few months and, because she has been run down and thin, rumors have been gathering fast and furious that she and Dave Rose, her musician-husband, had reached a parting of the ways.

"Gosh," said Judy with characteristic frankness, "I wish I knew who started that gossip. Honestly, Dave and I haven't had any trouble and I am just starting to feel better. I wish people wouldn't try and separate us."

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Irene Manning, Warner lovely, and Het Manheim, New York literary agent, were married over the weekend. The bridegroom left next day for the Army; Robert Young startled the natives and the M.-G.-M. gang when he appeared at work on a motorcycle. He rode 25 miles from his Tarzana Ranch.

Mary Astor has been very, very sick with the flu and is still out of the cast of "Across the Pacific;" Gene Tierney showed up at a night club in a blue and black creation designed by Oleg Cassini that knocked the customers for a loop.

THOSE DEBONAIR DEBONAIRES, newest attraction in Cafe Caprice, have all the smooth sparkle that attaches to their names. Their music is strictly frothy, exactly the sort of thing approved by night-spotters. They vocalize in quartet, trio and solo, do parody specials on such numbers as "Cinderella" and "On the Alamo," in addition to their dance rhythms. The Debonaires include leader-guitarist Jack Farrell, accordionist-pianist Arnold Adler, bassist Al Stecker and clarinetist-saxist Billy De.

The Victory Room's Sunday afternoon tea dance also will mark the Washington debut of Will Bradley's orchestra. It's certain to attract the collegiates in droves, hordes and regiments.

COOKIES FOR SOLDIERS. Violinist Jane Marlow of Restaurant "823" and Hostess "Mamma" Carla spent a whole day last week in baking 40 pounds of cookies for Jane's b. f. at a camp in Arizona. They received a letter of thanks about 6 feet long—signed by all the soldier lads who munched the cookies.

"BUTTONS" AND JOSEPHINE are the unstarred stars of the Casino Royal revue. They're the Charley and Charlotte McCarthy of Walter Waters, clever young ventriloquist who looks like a high school boy. But he had a running start on "voice throwing" because his parents had a famous ventriloquial act in the days when vaudeville was vaudeville.

LOVE BUYS AIR FARES. Singer Marianne of Hi Hat flew to Georgia Sunday before last to see her one 'n' only. And last Sunday the boy friend debarked at Washington Airport to visit Marianne. They shudder when you mention the rumor that the Government will limit their travel.

Lili Barbour, billed as "Eighty Pounds of Dynamite from Fifty-second Street," will open at Paul Young's next Tuesday. Air raid wardens had better stick around.

BUSIEST BOYS. Bob Seidell of Paul Kain's Glen Echo Band, makes arrangements when he isn't singing or playing sax and clarinet, spends his spare time playing his huge collection of swing and classical records . . . Bill Strickland of the Lotus is the busiest invalid ever. Feeling "off his feed" the other eve, he took Mrs. Strickland under his arm and undertook a tour of the Willard Room, Del Rio, Mayflower Lounge and Crossroads, winding up at the Spotlight. Sezzee, "I felt like a new man the next day." . . . Ray Richardson, former saxist in the Rainbow Room, writes from Parris Island, "I'm busy 16 hours a day learning to be a Marine and during the other eight hours I dream I'm chasin Japs" . . . Sid Willoughby, who plays novachord at Burt's Trans-Lux in the evenings, spends his days selling novachords. . . . Leo, Mayfair's looker-into-the-future, gives an average of 50 or more readings a day. He's the most successful entertainer of his type ever to come to Washington.

DELIGHTFULLY DIFFERENT. Refreshingly contrasted in dance style are the Di Gatanos and Clarissa, both at the Troika. The Di Gatanos are the last word in sophistication, whirl as delicately as a dream. Pigtailed Clarissa, natural as a buttercup, gives the true peasant touch to her Pan-Am dances.

We saw four ladies who have the biggest housekeeping jobs in town having a little dove party at the Lounge Riviera. They were the managing housekeepers of the Wardman Park, Shoreham, Broadmoor and Hotel 2400 Sixteenth Street.

STYLISH GALS. Paulette Goddard, nominated Hollywood's best garbed, was recently in the Cosmos Room. But she looked no smarter than Singer Ann Judson in white tulle with a crimson midriff . . . Warbler Mary La Marr of Restaurant "400," is looking neat and sweet in a cocoa-colored suit accented with a Mexican necklace . . . Alla Moscova, mistress of ceremonies at the Balalaika, is Slavically attractive in black, with heavy encrustations of turquois at the neck and wrists.

YOU'LL LIKE "Amor, Amor," new beguine being played by the Copocabana's rumba band . . . Russ Cullen's tenoring of "Tangerine" in the Pall Mall Room . . . The way Evelyn Scott and Texas play every request, be it classical or popular, at Lee's Stables . . . The 1001 smart show tunes that Andy Padova's Streamliners are reeling off regularly at the Neptune Room . . . The way that Roberta of the Mayflower Lounge fits the season to her songs by giving out on "April in Paris" and "April Showers."

BICYCLING AT KAVAKOS. Hal Hamilton and his sister, unicyclists terrific, head the floor show at Kavakos' Grill. Other smart performers are Barney Long, emcee-tap dancer; Dixie Senton, hula stepper; Singer June La Monte. And don't forget the Sunday afternoon country dance.

Jack Maggio's Orchestra at the Nightingale is an all-Washington band, won its spurs at various resorts and college dates before it was booked into the 'Gale, biggest dancery hereabouts.

NEW ENGLAND SPECIALS. The Burlington Hotel's food manager, Mrs. Pearl Best, has corralled some rare and authentic New England dishes for the weekend. They include Rhode Island clam chowder, Gloucester codfish cakes and Vermont cream pie.

English Children's Art Exhibit Opens Here Tomorrow

Lady Halifax, wife of Viscount Halifax, Ambassador from Great Britain, is scheduled to open an exhibit of children's paintings from England tomorrow at 3:30 p. m. at the Phillips Art Gallery, 1600 Twenty-first Street Northwest.

Sponsored by the Children's Art Gallery of this city, the exhibit of 52 paintings, expressing slight war significance, will remain at the Phillips Art Gallery until April 30. The exhibit was brought to this country through the collaboration of the Museum of Modern Art, New York City, and the British Ministry of Information.

Mrs. Clark Foreman, chairman of the reorganization committee of the local Children's Gallery, formerly under direction of the WPA Art Project, is directing the showing.

56 Women Accuse N. Y. Attacker

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, April 23.—A 30-year-old automobile wrecker who used his own and his wife's night out from home to prey on Brooklyn women whom he usually trapped in self-service elevators was charged with assault, robbery and attempted rape this afternoon after 56 women had identified him as their assailant.

Police, who described the man as "the worst sex criminal in Brooklyn in years," said he candidly admitted 88 attacks, most of them within the last four months. The prisoner, Eugene Levine, who is six feet tall and weighs 220 pounds, had a nod of recognition for each of his accusers.

Former Patient At St. Elizabeths Ends His Life

Apparently despondent because of ill health, Richard Daugherty, 41, a paroled patient from St. Elizabeths Hospital, shot and killed himself at his home, 2316 Nicholson Street Southeast, yesterday.

He fired a bullet from a .22-caliber rifle into his left temple about 8:30 a. m., police said. His mother, Mrs. Effie Kenner, found him lying on the floor of a basement garage. He was dead when a doctor arrived from Casualty Hospital.

Detectives were told that the man had threatened to kill himself several times since being paroled from St. Elizabeths two years ago. A certificate of suicide was issued by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald.

Physicians Will Register Here May 12

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

May 12 will be registration day for Washington's physicians in the Nation-wide campaign to expand the Army Medical Corps and effect a safe distribution of doctors among civilian communities, it was revealed yesterday.

Dr. Francis X. McGovern, procurement and assignment chairman for the District, announced that every practitioner will be requested to register. While plans are not completed, it is likely that booths will be set up in the hospitals and at D. C. Medical Society headquarters, among other places, said Dr. McGovern.

Meantime, the Procurement and Assignment Service, a unit of the War Man Power Commission, disclosed that a two-day meeting will be opened here today to perfect arrangements for recruiting 16,000 physicians for the Army. Five thousand must be signed up within 60 days.

State procurement chairmen—including Dr. McGovern—from every State east of the Mississippi River, will attend the session; to be held in the Social Security Board Building. Their task will be outlined by Paul V. McNutt, head of the War Man Power Commission, and Maj. Gen. James C. Magee, Army surgeon general.

The system to be followed may be described briefly as follows:

An Army surgeon and a representative of the Adjutant General's Office will be assigned to each of the States. The procurement-assignment chairman will turn over to them the available list—physicians who can be spared by their respective communities for services in the armed forces.

These doctors, provided they are physically acceptable and ready to volunteer, will be sworn in as commissioned officers by the War Department representatives. Candidates will not have to be passed upon by the surgeon general unless they are past the age of 45. The maximum age limit is 54.

A conference similar to the one being held in Washington today and tomorrow will be called for Omaha, Nebr., at a later date preparatory to marshaling physicians west of the Missippi for Army service.

Out of an estimated 1200 private practitioners of medicine in the District, approximately 100 have given up their offices to enter the military.

Dr. McGovern pointed out that, while the Capital in peacetime had a comfortably large number of physicians, in proportion to population, changing conditions—notably the city's spiraling growth and the continuing march of doctors into uniform—are threatening to reverse the trend.

"While I believe Washington can spare some more physicians for the armed forces, we should remember that this is a war city, even if it has no heavy war industries, and its medical needs must be appreciated," said Dr. McGovern.

U. S. Lowers Age Limit on Girls In War Industry

Manufacturers furnishing certain products under Government contract may employ girls as young as 16, under a Labor Department ruling made public yesterday.

Secretary Perkins, at the request of the War Department, granted an exemption from a provision in the Walsh-Healey Public Contracts Act, lowering the age minimum from 18 to 16 in about 15 manufacturing lines. Girls under 18, however, may not be employed more than eight hours a day nor between 10 p. m. and 6 a. m.

Industries to which exemption applies include food processing, arms and ammunition, electrical manufacturing, plastic products, safety appliances, machinery and allied products, converted paper products, fabrication of metal products, chemicals, drug and allied products.

Ickes' Farmhand, Hurt in Mishap, Spurned Life Job

Clarence Walker, farmhand who sued Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes for $20,000 as a result of injuries suffered in an explosion on the Ickes farm at Olney, Md., refused an offer of a life-time job, it was asserted yesterday in a statement issued by Joseph and Vivian Simpson, Rockville (Md.) attorneys.

"After the injured man was able to resume his usual duties he was given $100 in cash and promised a job for life on the Secretary's farm," according to the statement issued by Joseph and Vivian Simpson, Rockville (Md.) attorneys.

Walker's suit was settled Wednesday out of court for $825. It was to have been tried at Rockville yesterday.

Heat Makes X-Ray Treatment Of Cancer More Effective

By the Associated Press

St. Paul, April 23.—Good results in treating 50 cases of human cancer with combined artificial fever of 104 to 108 degrees and with X-rays was announced to the American College of Physicians today.

The 50 were Negroes, supposedly hopeless. Thirty-nine have improved. In a few all signs of the cancers have disappeared. Eleven of the patients had absolutely no benefits.

The experiment has been under way for about two years at Meharry Medical College, Nashville, Tenn., and was reported by Drs. Edward L. Turner, dean of medicine; Heddy S. Shoulders, professor of radiology, and Lawrence D. Scott, assistant professor of radiology.

They said they believed the results were better than use of X-rays alone. X-rays provide one of the standard methods of curing cancer, with success in a certain percentage of cases. Where X-rays fail the reason is held to be lack of sensitivity of the malignant growth to the rays.

The purpose in adding the fever was to increase the sensitivity of the cancers. For years there have been medical speculations that heat might somehow enable the rays to attack cancer more effectively.

Economists Open 3-Day Meeting

The twentieth meeting of the Academy of World Economics and the annual Washington meeting, National Social Science Honor Society, will open three-day sessions here today on the general subject "Victory and the Social Order."

Sessions today will involve discussions of "Historical Aspects," 8:30 p. m., Hall of Government, George Washington University; "Political Aspects," 8:15 p. m., Copley Lounge, Georgetown University; "Economic Aspects," 8 p. m., Maloney Building, Catholic University, and "Sociological Aspects," 8 p. m., at the president's residence, American University. A session on "International Economic Aspects" will begin at 2:15 p. m. tomorrow at the Brookings Institution.

AT THE NATIONAL FOLK FESTIVAL!

From India itself comes one group, bearing the name of Indian as a matter of age-old right. From New Mexico comes another group, carrying the name of Indian as a result of Columbus' error in thinking that the new world he had discovered was the old world of India! And from both groups—and from the many, many others represented at the National Folk Festival—comes entertainment, entertainment of a new, different, and delightfully varied kind.

Jemez Indians from New Mexico! Kiowa Indians from Oklahoma! Original Indians from Calcutta, India! Folk dances of the English, the Irish, the Scots, the Filipinos, the French Canadians, the Czechs, the Ukranians, the Poles, the Russians, Lithuanians, Rumanians, Norwegians, the French! Ballads, fiddle tunes, spirituals, folk songs, Navy songs, harmonica tunes, Marine songs, sea chanties, Army songs! Cowboys! Square dances! You'll hear and see them all at the National Folk Festival May 6th, 7th, 8th and 9th, at Constitution Hall. Matinees 55c, 85c, box seats $1.10. Evenings 55c, 85c, $1.10, box seats $1.65. Regulation Of Milk

Secretary Wickard has shown good judgment in approving the milk marketing order worked out by Roy F. Hendrickson. This action is an encouraging sign that the Department of Agriculture is considering the interests of milk consumers in Washington as well as those of the producers. It is difficult to see how the producers can refuse to go along with this reasonable policy.

The ingenious device worked out by the department to avoid an increase in milk prices here, while granting relief to the producers because of higher costs of production, is merely consolidation of fluid milk and the milk used for cream into one class at the price of $3.57 a hundred pounds to the producer. The effect is to raise the price of milk used for cream, which is now only $2.10 a hundredweight. Undoubtedly that increase will be passed along to consumers, but since cream is a luxury product, its retail price is of far less concern to the public than the price of milk. The department merely says that those who buy cream should pay as much in proportion for it as those who buy fluid milk of the same grade. That is eminently reasonable. In no circumstances should the consumers of an essential food be asked to subsidize a luxury food from the same source.

Nevertheless, there appears to be sharp opposition to the milk marketing order on the part of organized dairy farmers. It is reported that they may reject the order and thus upset all regulation of prices paid to farmers for milk in this area. Such action could scarcely improve the outlook for either farmers or distributors, and it would probably lead to direct regulation of the milk industry as a public utility. The dairy farmers ought to keep this in mind.

Air Offensive

Day after day during recent weeks, with only an occasional interruption because of exceptionally bad weather, the R. A. F. has waged unrelenting war on the Nazis. Both the number of planes engaged in this aerial assault and the total weight of bombs dropped on German and German-held targets make these raids the greatest which the R. A. F. has ever carried out. Indeed, it is fair to say the situation with respect to Anglo-German air warfare is now almost the reverse of what it was during the Battle of Britain.

In the Battle of Britain great fleets of German bombers crossed the Channel from the Continent to ravage British cities. The British were unable to reply in kind. They had to employ their strength, for the most part, in beating off the Luftwaffe, and they heroically succeeded in doing so. Now the shoe is on the other foot. Actually, it is said, the raids which the R. A. F. is carrying out on the Continent are far greater in scope—and possibly in destructiveness—than those which the German air force is attempting.

It is still uncertain what damage the British bombers are doing to German military objectives. There was a time when, because of British experience, the tendency was to scoff at the effectiveness of air bombardment of enemy cities. Certainly the damage done by the Luftwaffe to civilian life and property in Britain was greatly in excess of the damage done to factories, dock installations, airfields, ammunition dumps, etc. And the prevailing school of thought is still firmly of the opinion that such aerial offensives, no matter what the scale, cannot of themselves bring victory. For victory can only be achieved through the destruction of the enemy army and the occupation of the enemy nation. In other words, if Germany is to be defeated, she must first be invaded—which means a large army must be landed on the Continent.

Such aviation enthusiasts as Alexander P. de Seversky scoff at that idea, however. In his much-discussed book, "Victory Through Air Power," Seversky argues that our enemies, Germany no less than Japan, can be bombed to defeat, provided we gain control of the air and provided the aerial offensive then launched against enemy objectives is sufficiently great in scope.

Be that as it may, the fact is apparent that whether a land invasion of the European Continent is attempted by the Allies or not, the aerial offensive against the Reich will be continued and intensified. Its effectiveness at the present time is not limited to physical damage. There is the additional factor to be considered that the more air power Germany has to withdraw from the east to defend herself against the air attack from the west, the less she has for the execution of her own offensive plans in the Russian and other sectors. In other words, the R. A. F.'s daily sweeps of the German areas in Europe belong in the category of offensive operations, whether ultimately accompanied by a land invasion or not.

That being so, it is easy to understand why any reinforcements of air power, particularly in the category of bombers, that can be rushed to Britain would prove enormously helpful in balking Hitler's plans to win a victory in 1942. There is no part of German or German-occupied territory that is now outside the range of our heavy bombers. They have the additional virtue that they can be flown to the British base on their own power. Certainly when the combined American-British aerial offensive against Hitler is launched, what has happened so far in the field of air warfare will be as child's play. The bombing of Luebeck which the Germans say was "worse than Coventry" will happen to many other German cities as well.

Hitler's Babies

A smuggled copy of a Polish underground newspaper tells of the latest and in some ways most horrible of the Nazi eugenic experiments. It has to do with a kind of human stud in which "healthy Polish boys and girls between 15 and 18 years old" are being coupled with German girls and boys of the same ages at a camp in Helenow near Lodz with a view to arresting a decline in the German birth rate. Even two years ago such a report might have been classified as a crude and clumsy atrocity yarn. We certainly cannot vouch for its truth. Yet it is no more incredible than the campaigns of sterilization and "mercy killings" undertaken by the Gestapo which were first reported to this country about a year ago and which have since been abundantly corroborated.

Some implications of this latest bit of biological Schreklichkeit, whereby the Nazis have debased even their own youth to an ethical and psychological level far below that of even the most primitive human beings, are a little too terrible to contemplate. Still the story, if true, has two points of considerable interest and significance. First, it suggests that the campaign of extermination against the Poles has been abandoned, or at any rate modified. Second, that the Nazi doctrine of racial purity has been revised to suit the ever-increasing requirements of the Nazi military and industrial machine. Under the Nazi scale of racial values the Poles until recently occupied a place scarcely above that of the Jews. Now, it appears, necessity has made Polish boys and girls suitable fathers or mothers of "Aryan" children. There is nothing inconsistent about this reversal if one keeps in mind Dr. Ley's axiom that "truth is anything which is beneficial to the state, and that fallacy is anything which is not beneficial to it."

The hint of a declining German birth rate is also significant. Hitler is apparently confronted with a man-power shortage not only for his present needs but also for future needs. The reckless and unscientific program of sterilization pursued in Germany for several years before the war, the subsequent absence of many soldiers from their homes, the decimation of young German manhood on the Eastern Front, and the continued absorption of German women and girls into war industries have certainly not helped matters. In the end we may discover that by some wonderful irony the very theory of the master race has been a means of dooming the master race itself to ultimate extinction. Is it not written that "the meek shall inherit the earth?"

Mexico Likes It

The Mexicans are reported to be highly gratified with the terms of the oil settlement. They should be. It awards the puny sum of $24,000,000 to the American oil companies for expropriated properties worth many times that figure. The companies are not even certain that the agreement may not put them in debt to the Mexican Government, since the award is subject to deductions for pending private claims. It would certainly be ironical if the demands of former company workers for payment of some $25,000,000 were to be allowed by the Mexican courts as a generous offset to the amount of damages conceded. Then the companies actually would have to pay for the privilege of having their properties expropriated! Moreover, the Government of the United States will provide the dollars which Mexico has agreed to pay the oil companies—by advancing loans and credits to the Mexican Government and purchasing Mexican silver. Yes, the Mexicans have every reason to be gratified.

About all that can be said in favor of this one-sided settlement is that it will remove a cause of perennial friction that constituted a threat to maintenance of friendly relations with Mexico. In these turbulent times it is particularly important to follow the good neighbor policy in deeds as well as words. The price paid in this instance is not high if it serves to draw Mexico more closely to us. But on that score we harbor doubts, being inclined to think that Mexico would like us even better if our Government had stood up more strongly for the rights of American investors. According to John W. White, writing from Mexico on the page opposite, the Mexican workers, who have since suffered a wage reduction, and who are grumbling about the new operation of the properties, must themselves be of two minds.

Gas Rationing

An acute and growing shortage of tankers for transportation of oil to the Eastern seaboard accounts for the spectacular introduction of gas rationing in this part of the country. It is a drastic order—too drastic according to Secretary Ickes. But even his alternative suggestion would entail an immense reduction in consumption by the average motorist. Certainly the rationing order, whatever the weekly allowance may be, will be very helpful to the war effort. Transport will be economized. Special provision for taxis and cars belonging to those engaged in essential work is made possible by putting a stop to lavish non-essential consumption of gasoline. Tires and cars will also last longer. We shall thus have much larger reserves of both that can be drawn upon in case of need to supplement inadequate commercial transport facilities.

If it invokes the virtue which is inherent in all communities, the rationing order, in point of fact, should entail little hardship. Good neighborliness should take the place of many gallons of gasoline. If neighbors cooperate by pooling their gas rations and by making joint use of their cars and by filling them to capacity, there need be no tribulation. Society, moreover, will be the gainer. In Britain, where necessity has broken down a tradition of individual and family aloofness, the war seems to be producing a revolution of social adjustments that in the end will make for a happier Britain. Probably this is what Edmund Burke meant when he said that "war brings out the best in the hearts of a people." Sacrifice made in common makes for better living. We could do with some of the community tonic in our domestic relations that the British appear to have used in liberal measure.

The success of the rationing system is not assured by just clamping down on pleasure driving. Care must be taken to see that the most effective possible use is made of transportation facilities suddenly called upon to carry many thousands of persons deprived of their customary means of transport. For instance, the railroads, already feeling the effects of wartime passenger travel, will be further handicapped by gas rationing. Unless the public voluntarily cuts down on summer-time travel, or agrees to take vacations in off seasons, serious congestion of the train services is likely to result.

With private cars laid up all or part of the time, it will be necessary, too, to utilize taxicab services more effectively than in the past. That would relieve public bus and trolley lines. Some variant of the pickup service which Washington has tried with ill success, based on compulsion rather than voluntary arrangements, might serve. At any rate, it is against the public interest to permit taxis to be used simply for pleasure travel, or by only one or two persons, after they have been put in a favored class as gasoline users.

The rationing order not only provides for better utilization of limited gasoline supplies. It will release tanker space for carriage of fuel oil for heating homes, offices and factories. Inadequacy of fuel oil supplies during the coming winter is, in any case, a certainty, with consequent inconvenience and even suffering for thousands of persons dependent on oil for heating. The rationing order should not, therefore, be regarded simply as a plan to conserve gasoline. It is part of a larger program to keep our war plants going full blast, by supplying them with necessary fuel oil; and to assure gas for the transportation of workers in war industries and necessary civilian industries.

ILL MET BY MOONLIGHT

This is the bomber's moon—the same
That once in Eden rose and set,
And filled the breaches with her fame
Along Troy's ruined parapet.

The seas and isles remembered well
Her rising and her going down;
By her the wizard set his spell,
And when the April corn was sown,
The farmer with appraising eye,
Watching the greening of the grain
Discerned, as now, hung on the sky
A silver ring, foretelling rain.

Oh, she is punctual as a star!
A lamp for lovers, lit for them;
Night's incorruptible calendar,
Telling what hour love's requiem
Chimes from the bough at dawn. The lark
Young Juliet heard still soars to sing;
The nightingale, denied the dark,
Sleeps in the twilight of his wing.

(But halt, beyond meridians,
Informing moon, delay your flight!
Let no fell gleam, no wanton glance,
Betray the bastions of our night!)

Hospital Facts

To the end that we as a community might avoid the making of a basic error and a tragic error in our future planning designed to meet a critical hospitalization emergency against which The Post has repeatedly warned, this writer suggests a realistic study of the facts and figures available to any student, which are provided in the Hospital Number of The Journal of the A. M. A. March 28, 1942.

A study of these statistics indicates that in 1941, the two tax-subsidized general hospitals, Freedmen's and Gallinger, serving the community had a total bed capacity of 1468 beds as compared to the 1899 total beds provided by the nine privately operated or eleemosynary general hospitals performing the same function for those patients paying or partly paying their own way or being provided it as a gift of private philanthropy. But the same statistical studies show that whereas the tax-subsidized general hospitals were only 69.8 per cent occupied in 1941, privately operated hospitals had an 82.2 per cent occupancy.

Two inferences logically follow: First, dependable statistics indicate that there is no present need to enlarge the total number of general hospital beds available to those whose hospitalization is subsidized by tax funds, unless it is felt that the immediate future will adversely change existing ratios between the indigent and those able to subsidize in part at least, their own medical care. Second, that unless privately operated hospitalization facilities are immediately enlarged with the financial aid provided by the Lanham Act, patients who are able to make some contribution in subsidizing their medical care must be transferred during the emergency to tax-subsidized institutions, not yet saturated, where, most unfairly to the community, they are not permitted or required to pay. In other words, unless present policies are radically changed, there is a very definite threat that our present hospital shortage and the contemplated remedy (the not too urgently needed increase of tax-subsidized hospital beds) will react to the community's financial and social-welfare disadvantage, by compelling those who can pay or partly pay for their hospitalization, to accept it for nothing. Such a stupid policy might be justified in times of widespread unemployment and economic depression, but no sane thinker could justify it at present. The crying need of the hour, as The Post has repeatedly warned, is to immediately increase the number of general hospital beds available to those who urgently need them and can pay. The funds available under the Lanham Act is a logical means to this urgent and desirable end.

Giving Lifts

"Major D." asks what has happened to the motorists who used to give a "lift" to a man in uniform and says, "Now, apparently, nobody thinks of doing it."

Sorry to disagree, Major, but I'm one of those motorists—and we motorists do think of it. However, that thinking is influenced by thought of guests in an automobile having sued and recovered damages for some real or fancied injury; by such things as recently happened to a taxi driver in Washington (shot by a man in uniform in his cab); by the fear of permitting an unknown person to sit behind the driver.

I'm no coward, Major, but after dark, unless I know a man, that man walks as far as I am concerned, whether in uniform or not. Therefore, as a motorist, may I suggest that you consider the motorist's side before you criticize the lack of hospitality of motorists here?

The Irish Bases

The Germanized regime of unoccupied France stresses a vital flaw in the United Nations' European armament.

The attitude of Ireland, unreasonable as unheroic in denying to the liberal peoples the vital bases from which Germany's oceanic piracy can best be defeated, if persisted in, will only erect against the race the condemnation of history. These nations, acting as the mandataries of civilization and with the implied mandate of the lawful spheric community, might any instant be compelled to exercise the right of international eminent domain in the universal interest.

Such an action, if by England only and intended for the single nation's advantage, would be unpermissible. However, the forces engaged in the supression of an insurrection against the law and the society of nations must act in consonance with the fundamental sanction inherent in public law quite as individuals would act for the protection of society at the common law's command.

In the existing situation, the Irish are nonvolitional defenders of the lawless nations, and being undefended themselves except by the American expeditionary force, and some British, in the extreme north, seem not to appreciate the corollary of rights. They seem to be unaware that Ireland's independence, which is menaced by German and French collaboration, can be guaranteed only by America and England, whose fleets are prohibited access to the ports from which the German piracy at the approaches to Europe can best be exterminated. Such exclusion reduces by hundreds of miles the effective fighting radius of American and British vessels.

The Irish must realize that any scheme of the Reich for the control of Europe includes the forcible seizure and permanent possession of Irish bases from which the Germans would enforce a German law of the sea. Constitutionally, the Irish republic is a democracy, but the position of the nation in this war is disastrously injurious to the peoples fighting for a final vindication and permanent bulwarking of the concepts of right to which the Irish are celebratedly attached. Certainly the thesis could not be sustained that the Irish people would exclude the Eternal from the reformation of the society of nations.

The English government in justly granting independence to Ireland was negligent in not providing against a foreign menace to Ireland, and so, to the British Isles, by stipulations in the treaty respecting an emergency resort to the relinquished Irish bases for the community's protection. The legal right of forces of the United Nations to go to them is real: a community can repair a fault in a dam regardless of the owner's disinterestedness.

Lest We Forget

I believe that our Postoffice should cause to be issued soon in denominations of 1, 2 3 and 5 cents, postage stamps with appropriate emblems of a "Victory Stamp."

Since millions write letters every day, such a stamp would constantly remind them of the great need for American solidification and unity so that liberty and free men, women and children can endure here, there and everywhere.

Hours Of Labor

Unhappily we have abundant proof that in war supremacy in the air is essential to victory. Even great battleships are at the mercy of bombing planes.

Japan boasts that it is making and can continue to make planes faster than the United States. Does Japan work only six and a fraction hours a day? It does not. It works nearer 16 than 6, and its factories are never idle. Do Japanese strike, slow down and quit at pleasure? Never.

Does Germany in making planes work only six and a fraction hours a day? It does not. Its good neighbors, victims of its perfidious wars, are mercilessly driven nearer 16 than 6 and a fraction hours a day. Do they strike, slow down, and quit at pleasure? Never.

How, then, will we ever outstrip our enemies in making planes if our workers do these things and also work only six and a fraction hours a day? The answer is "we never will." With eight hours a day as a basis, our five million workers have already lost seven and one-half million work hours a day. This, continued, means certain defeat.

The time has come when we must end our pernicious appeasement, stop sacrificing our Nation's freedom at the altar of "social gains," have no favored classes but all sacrifice all things necessary to save our native land. Our Government has the right to commandeer, the right to dictate, the right to enforce obedience. Let it exercise these rights; put all subversives, all obstructionists in concentration camps, the "high ups" with their abortive promises and efforts to maintain present destructive conditions, as well as the "small fry," and act promptly with vigor, resolution and wisdom. Extreme danger demands extreme measures.

Women Over 35

In reply to letters appearing in your column, I want to say a good word for the Civil Service Commission in regard to taking women over 35 years of age.

During my year with the Government in Washington I have come in contact with many women over 35 who have been recently appointed. I am past 45 and live west of the Mississippi and believe my application was considered exactly the same as any other.

Of course I do not approve of the commission bringing girls under 21 to Washington, D. C., but it does seem the young girl is favored. However, I doubt if the older woman is neglected for age alone.

Parasitic Workers

I do believe Congress should appropriate a sum of money to employ some reputable psychiatrists to weed out the mediocrities and parasites in all departments of the Government.

Competent men and women are wanted. Letters from politicians in this crisis should be frowned upon.

Plenty of work is to be had at everything and anything in line of labor. Everyone is bound to sacrifice and accept the sacrifice willingly. All of us must pay taxes. But there is a privileged clique here wearing the right fraternity ring. This clique predominates, particularly in the navy yard. Washington is infested with artificial, deceitful handshakers, with the smile of Judas.

All of us remember Pearl Harbor, but don't forget, my fellow citizens, we have our Calvary, and Pearl Harbor right here in Washington.

Pacific Names

Ever wonder about the names, the place names, that play so prominent a part in the news from the Pacific war zone? In particular, I mean the original meanings of the names. This geographical etymology, as it is called, is exceedingly interesting. Consider, for instance, the name Corregidor. Specifically, the word is the title of a Spanish magistrate, but aside from that it has its own meaning—namely, he who punishes and corrects. "It is altogether fitting and proper" that this defiant fortress should be so named.

China (it might be spelled T-s-i-n-a) is named after the founder of one of her greatest dynasties, the Emperor Tsin. It was during his reign that news of this fabulous land was first brought to the Western World—thus the name. Chinese provinces are named with due respect for topography. Thus, Shantung is east of the mountain; Shansi is west of the mountain; Honan is south of the river. About the same thing happens to natural formations—the Hoangho is the yellow river, and the yellow mud it brings with it seems to clutter up the Hoanghai, the yellow sea. Those fantastic mountains we see in Chinese prints, the ones that seem to go straight up and down, are the Tian Shan—celestial mountains. They are the real thing, too!

Occasionally, several names have almost identical original meanings. Thus Asia and Japan both mean land of the dawn. Asia comes from the Sanskrit Ushas. Japan came through Portuguese from an original word which is more closely approximated by Nippon.

Once, a good many centuries ago, an Asiatic chieftain decided he would attach a word meaning pure to his newly founded clan. And so it was, and the tribe flourished, and it produced a dynasty that ruled China for 300 years. The name—Manchu; it supplied us with the name Manchuria—the land of the Manchus.

There are, to be sure, a great many names which are not particularly interesting. Hawaii, for instance, means homeland; Formosa means beautiful. But, on the other hand, there is something significant in Vladivostok—it means lord of the Orient. Rangoon means end of war. Maybe the decisive defeat of the Japanese armies will be the Battle of Rangoon—probably not, but it is fun to speculate.

One of the English-army-in-India movies a few years back paid particular attention to the goddess Kali. On the Hooghly River in India are steps, or ghauts, by the side of the river for the worship of Kali. They are the Kali-ghauts—Calcutta, nowadays.

Alaska means great land, but it has not always been called thus. Seward's purchase of the place was rather unpopular, despite the bargain price. There were those who suggested names like Polario, Zero Islands, and, finest of all, Walrusia.

Etymologically speaking, Canada is merely a group of wigwams. The United States are a union of sovereign States. Washington, one of those States, is named after a well-known surveyor of some years back. The origin of the name Oregon is obscure. It may have reference to big-eared Indians, to a hurricane, to beautiful water, or to any of a half dozen other things. California comes from a few Spanish words, calienta fornalia—hot furnace. Apparently, the name was originally applied to what is now Lower California—that desolate piece of Mexico south of Hollywood.

The fact that Pearl Harbor is known for its pearls should clear up any mystery about derivation. New Zealand, 7000 miles west of Panama, is merely a second edition of the Dutch province of Zeeland—the sea country. Australia, appropriately enough, means south.

The Philippines remind us that the islands were discovered in the reign of Philip II of Spain. Java, invaded by the Japanese, is the island of nutmegs; Pulo Penang, the big British naval base lost early in the war, is the island of betel nuts. Singapore means city of the lion, but those who named some native village at the base of the Malay Peninsula certainly had no thought of the British lion, nor any idea that in the idiom of some remote language, brave men would fight like lions.

As for the countless other names in the Pacific and elsewhere, all of which have derivations, there are books on the subject. The libraries catalog the information under "Name—Geographical—Etymology." The few given here, then, are merely a sample of the names of the quiet ocean.

Compulsory Saving

I among many am willing and would do much more to see this war go on the offensive. We all want to see victory come.

With all our help in cash and cooperation we still find our shores menaced by the enemy and there has been practically no retaliation.

Still the Government is asking all to invest 10 per cent of income in bonds.

If the Government or anyone else can lay out a budget that will enable a family to invest to that extent, which is making 65 cents per hour on a 40-hour week, and paying $35 for an apartment, $24 for groceries and keeping gas and clothing bills paid besides other necessary bills around the average home, I for one am willing to accept. I have a car to keep up or I have no employment. About 10 miles a week is used for pleasure. Who could be closer?

The Government had asked people to purchase their coal for next winter. When they began to cooperate they were taken advantage of by a raise to winter prices.

Remember Mr. Government, you have taxed everything, but is it necessary to demand more? Remember, other leaders have done this, and are they winning the war or the confidence of their people?

If these things are necessary at this stage of the war, our country is then in a terrible condition.

Let's keep the symbol "V" for victory, not for victim.

American Offensive

By Ernest Lindley

Political As Well As Military

HINTS come from Europe of a Nazi peace offensive. So far they have been scattered and vague, except perhaps for Laval's speech.

LINDLEY

Laval said, in effect, that the French have quit resisting, that they will now collaborate actively with the Nazis. Laval is reported to have persuaded the Nazis that he can serve as a broker of peace between them and the United States.

Archibald MacLeish, director of the Office of Facts and Figures, evinced concern, in his speech to the Associated Press luncheon this week, as to the susceptibility of the American people to a peace offensive. He said that Nazi propagandists had "turned the famous common sense of the French people against the people of France and from that moment the cause of France was lost." So, he concluded, "it would be a mistake to rely too heavily upon the saving power of American common sense alone, or to assume too easily that because the Americans do not really believe in propaganda they will prove to be immune to it."

Mr. MacLeish's concern is shared, in greater or less degree, by some others in the national administration. How much Nazi propaganda had to do with the defeat of France is a debatable point. When the showdown came, the Nazis had, by far, the superior military machine.

PRIOR to Pearl Harbor, this country was divided on foreign policy, although the big turn came with the fall of France in June, 1940. After that, sentiment for an immense Air Force and Navy and well-equipped Army was overwhelming, even though the debate as to where they should be used continued to rage. Even today there are pernicious lingering internal quarrels, especially between organized labor and management. There is a fringe of defeatism—and it may be a wider fringe than is apparent at first glance.

But certainly there is nothing to indicate that this country is not overwhelmingly determined to fight this war to a successful conclusion. On the contrary, one sees and hears on all sides an impatience to take the offensive against our enemies—a state of mind which, if it existed in France, was not reflected in its military policies.

Before Russia was brought into the war, when England's ability to hold was doubtful, and the United States was only in the early stages of rearmament, the defeat of the Nazis seemed to many to be a military impossibility. The Nazis energetically spread this notion. As the Association for the Advancement of Psychoanalysis recently has pointed out in a bulletin: "Whatever we do is done superbly and inimitably—you are licked before you start, so be sensible and accept our terms."

BUT THE LEGEND of Nazi invincibility has worn pretty thin on the plains of Russia. A Nazi peace offensive now could be read only as proof of Nazi weakness, and almost certainly would reinforce the determination, widely evinced in this country, to clean up our No. 1 enemy at the earliest possible moment.

Except for what the bulletin quoted above refers to as "boisterous boasting and devaluation of everyone else," what is there to Nazi propaganda? Not much. Earlier there was a second important line: that the Nazis had only limited objectives, that they harbored no designs on any nation, except the one which they were pouncing on at that particular moment. This was effective for a time. But it is difficult to believe that more than a tiny percentage of American citizens would ever swallow it again.

Both themes—"we don't mean any harm to you" and "you might as well give up because you're going to get licked anyway"—have become threadbare. But, as the psychoanalysts' bulletin points out, "the German propaganda groups have tried to disseminate the same aroma of invincibility about their psychologists as they have about their military forces." To a Washington observer it sometimes appears that Mr. MacLeish and some of his propaganda-minded colleagues remain somewhat under the influence of the German legend.

As Mr. Walter Lippmann has pointed out, the Germans did not invent political warfare. If it was not invented in the United States, at least it was practiced successfully on the grand scale in the first World War by Woodrow Wilson. Wilson's 14 points gripped the imagination of the Western world, including the people of Germany.

IN POLITICAL, as in military warfare, the best defense is a powerful offense. In political warfare, we have many times the striking power of the Nazis and Japanese. For we have to offer what the captive people of the world want.

President Roosevelt is skillful in the use of propaganda weapons. The Nazis long have feared him more than any other man in the world. But the President has not yet organized and pressed home great political offensives. He may feel that the psychological moment has not arrived—that the grand political offensive must be preceded by or coincide with military victories.

But the offensive in both political and military warfare is in the American tradition. Now that we are gathering our full strength, it is inconceivable that we can be dissuaded from using it.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Pegler's Labor Fight

IT SHOULD not be necessary for the staunchest friend of American labor and the first man to challenge and attack the worst enemies of the worker to answer the cry of "labor baiter" which has been raised by the now frightened and desperate corruptioneers, parasites, fakers and brown shirts. However, I think this had better be done because there really is something to the Hitlerian proposition that a lie, if big enough and told often enough, presently begins to numb the people's judgment and, in time, will convince them of something which they know to be false. Up to now I have just scorned the accusation that I am anti-labor, not only because it is too obviously false and too obviously intended to divert attention from rogues caught in the act, but also because I have been too busy verifying countless instances of brazen rascality and shouting up the terrible danger to the freedom of every American man and woman which is written into some of our laws and most union constitutions and several Supreme Court decisions.

At the risk of seeming immodest I will say that there are very few persons in the United States who know as much as I do about the organization, the constitutions and by-laws, the practices, the revenues and the personalities of unions. There isn't much that anyone can fault me on in this field because I have studied my stuff diligently, including the fine print and the hidden meanings, the court decisions and the sinister implications of the Clayton and Norris-LaGuardia Acts for years and I know what I am talking about.

I AM CHALLENGED sometimes on the ground that I don't tear into war profiteers and some corrupt practices of business, and thus, even to some honest men and women, seem to condone by silence evils which deserve the enmity of all conscientious citizens. The reason is not condonation at all. The reasons are several. For one, business is responsible and subject to restraining laws and regulations. For still another, the ground is very well covered by a number of competent journalists who know their subject as well as I know the subject of unionism. And, finally, I ventured into this controversy when mine was a very unpopular cause, and do not intend to quit now that the real enemies of American labor are on the defensive and on the run.

Through my efforts American labor has now learned that unions, as now constituted and conducted under the existing laws, are a menace to the freedoms and the form of government that this country is fighting to preserve against Hitler and the Japs. Congress also has stirred slightly. In fact, the lower house has given two violent twitches, as the members, subject to election every two years, and therefore less complacent politically than the Senators, realized what the unions were up to and observed the growth of the arrogant, leering power of the political unioneer over the life of the American worker. And, no doubt about it, notwithstanding the pernicioueness of the decisions and the reasoning behind them in the carpenters' and teamsters' cases, the courts in a number of other decisions have begun to reclaim from the boss unioneer some of the natural rights of millions of human beings which had been seized away in the tumult of the New Deal's so-called and miscalled social program.

Am I anti-union, then? Let nobody tell you that. I believe in the stated purpose of the Wagner Act to enable workers to bargain collectively through agents of their own choice. The closed shop and its variations, which are only disguises, forbid freedom of choice and compel American workers to accept representation by agents whom they would reject if they were allowed to.

I AM against coercion by employers, which is forbidden by the act, and equally opposed to coercion by union agents, which commonly consists of plain thuggery and physical terrorism, and which pointedly is not forbidden. I am against extortion of money from the workers and the common practice of slugging men in union meetings for daring to ask questions about the disposal of their own funds. The extortion of money from employers also must be stopped, not only because it is wrong, but because this graft comes out of the workers in increased prices.

Unions have got to stand aside for progress where now they use their power to prevent the employment of new inventions and methods, and they must forfeit the racket, but recently blessed by the Supreme Court, known as the stand-by system which is brigandage in modern dress.

It must be established that no alien nor anyone with a criminal record may hold office in any union, all accounts must be reported to the Government, union funds must not be used in the interest of any candidate or political issue except by unanimous vote of the entire membership and in the event of such consent and contribution the treasury of that union must forfeit its exemption from the income tax.

Given these and a few other reforms, the American worker will be rescued from the clutches of those cunning and dictatorial exploiters and enemies of free labor who have the gall to call themselves his leaders and his friends.

Mexican Oil Conflict

By John W. White

War Spurs U. S. Settlement

Mexico City.

IT IS expected here that the settlement of the oil conflict will open the way for a much larger output of Mexican petroleum and gasoline as part of this country's production of vital war materials now being made available to the United States. While in Washington recently, Foreign Minister Padilla announced that among the several arrangements being negotiated between Mexico and the United States was one for the production in Mexico of high octane gasoline for airplanes.

Whether or not the American oil companies are to be invited to take over the operation of their old properties on a royalty basis, as is being persistently rumored and just as persistently denied, Foreign Minister Padilla's announcement is believed here to indicate at least that American experts will be engaged to take over the more technical phases of production and refining.

OPERATION of the petroleum industry by the autonomous organization "Petroleos Mexicanos," which the Mexican government set up after the expropriation of the foreign-owned wells and refineries in March 1938, has not been entirely satisfactory, either from the viewpoint of production or the situation of the workmen. It is understood that the workmen, at least, would welcome the intervention of private interests in the operation of the industry, although it was their labor conflict with the foreign companies that was made the excuse for the expropriation.

In 1937, the last year that the industry was operated under private ownership, there were 1039 wells in operation, with an annual production of 47 million barrels. By 1940, only 807 wells were producing and the annual output had dropped to 38 million barrels. But the number of workmen had increased from 15,750 to 21,115 and the annual payroll had risen from 36 million pesos to 97 million.

When the American and other foreign oil properties were expropriated, the government charged that the companies were making a profit of 56 million pesos a year, although the books of the companies showed profits of only 10 million pesos a year over the 10-year period preceding the expropriation. The Mexican government at the time of the expropriation expected to pay for the properties out of the profits which the companies had been making. But the statement has been published repeatedly and not refuted that the government operations of the industry has been losing in the neighborhood of 100 million pesos a year.

THE PETROLEUM workers' unions, which were the most enthusiastic supporters of the expropriation of the companies' properties, have recently been the most bitter critics of government operation. On the occasion last month of the fourth anniversary of the expropriation they published full-page newspaper advertisements addressed to the President of the republic and to the general public, charging that their position is much worse under government ownership than it was under the foreign companies. The advertisements set forth particularly that instead of receiving the 26 million pesos a year increase in wages which the companies had agreed to pay, their wages have been cut from 8 to 15 per cent in an effort to cut down the losses of government operation.

The decline in Mexican production since the expropriation is blamed on the boycott set up by the American companies. Since distribution of petroleum products in the United States is controlled by the companies whose properties were expropriated, Mexico was unable to continue selling its oil in the United States because the companies refused to handle it. Mexico also was unable to get machinery and other equipment which is needed to keep the industry up to a high pitch of efficiency because the American companies which manufacture this machinery and equipment refused to sell to Mexico after the expropriation.

Consequently, Mexico had no choice except to sell its exportable production to Germany and Italy at much lower prices than had been paid by the United States, agreeing at the same time to take German and Italian machinery and equipment in payment. As happened in the Axis barter deals throughout Latin America, the Axis powers got Mexico's petroleum and gasoline, but Mexico did not get the promised machinery and equipment.

IT IS expected that Mexico's offer to pay 24 million dollars to the American companies will remove the boycott and permit Mexico to resume selling its production in the United States on a much larger scale than formerly. The agreement signed between the two governments admits of no appeal and puts the companies in the position of having to accept what has been offered them or get nothing, with the added condition that the United States Government will make no further efforts on their behalf. Therefore, it is confidently expected in Government circles here that the companies will accept the settlement.

The settlement of the American angle of the conflict has renewed speculation here as to how the similar conflict with the British and Dutch owned companies will be settled. The British and Dutch properties have a much higher value than the American properties and the operating companies have flatly refused even to discuss a possible settlement, demanding the outright return of the expropriated properties to the companies.

When the British and Mexican governments renewed diplomatic relations last November after a three years hiatus, it was with the clear understanding that the petroleum controversy would not be discussed until the termination of the war. Authoritative Mexican sources feel that the Mexican government's position regarding the expropriated British and Dutch properties has been greatly strengthened by American settlement, especially as it specifically recognizes the legality of the expropriation of the oil properties by President Cardenas and also recognizes the Mexican government's ownership of the subsoil rights, which the companies claimed belonged to them.

Mexicans believe that in view of the American settlement, the British companies will have no choice except a similar settlement based on a proportional valuation of their properties.

The British and Dutch refusal to discuss a settlement has been based on their contention that the Mexican government was not financially able to pay for the expropriated properties. Mexican sources feel that this allegation has been destroyed by the payments arrangements made with Washington.

When the oil properties were expropriated the Royal Dutch group consisted of 11 companies and three subsidiary shipping companies. This group was producing 60 per cent of Mexico's total output and also owned three of the largest refineries in the country.

2 Army Fugitives Caught in W. Va.

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charles Town, W. Va., April 23.—State police yesterday recaptured the two Army deserters who broke out of Jefferson County Jail here about ten days ago.

The men, Privates Ray Mumaw and Charles McDonald, were taken by the State police near Mumaw's father's home on the Henry Dutrow farm near Charles Town. They offered no resistance and were returned to the jail.

Mumaw, of Jefferson County, and McDonald, of Berkeley County, were picked up several weeks ago by Jefferson authorities after Fort Meade Army officials reported them absent without leave and asked that they be held.

They broke jail by overpowering the jailer while he was bringing in a new mattress for their cell.

Wage Control

By Mark Sullivan

To Check Inflation

NEXT WEEK—Monday is the expected day—President Roosevelt will send a message to Congress. That evening he will address the country by radio. The following day, Price Administrator Leon Henderson will issue orders putting a ceiling, a top limit, on the price of practically everything. Later in the week, several steps will be taken to carry out the program which President Roosevelt is to announce.

The central aim of all this is "anti-inflation." To this, the other parts of the program are accessory. The other subjects to be treated include price control, wage and salary control, profits control, installment selling control, credit control, and, finally, defense bonds. That these should be united in one address and one program is appropriate, for they belong together in fact. If the Administration deals wisely with all these, this country may escape inflation—and by that escape much harm and distress.

Let us start with defense bonds. This week a drive is on to sell them to literally every adult in the country, and to as many children as have a few pennies to buy the small denomination stamps. The drive is Nation-wide, and door to door. It is quite successful. One of the force of volunteer sellers, in a community I am familiar with, sold to 15 out of 19 families he called on. Practically every American family is going to be an owner of defense bonds.

The people buy these bonds gladly, in most cases with a sense of pleasure, almost exaltation. They buy because they feel they thus help fight war. If they think their money is used for purposes other than war, or extravagantly, the people become a little sour on buying bonds. Purchases were at their peak in January, reflecting patriotic emotion over Pearl Harbor. They fell off nearly 50 per cent in February. One quite natural reason was use of funds to pay income taxes. Other reasons, psychological, were three widely publicized conditions—extravagant frills in the Office of Civilian Defense under Mrs. Roosevelt; pensions to Congressmen; the 40-hour-week with time and a half and double time for extra hours. It was a crude way of criticizing conduct of the war—but it worked. The first two conditions were ended promptly, and the labor leaders have surrendered double time.

The thing to apprehend now about defense bonds, and to prevent, is inflation. That is the central reason President Roosevelt speaks next week. Inflation would mean prices of goods rising much higher—doubling, or trebling, or more. If that should happen, the real value of defense bonds would shrivel in their owners' hands. The dollar paid for a defense bond today will buy, for example, some 15 pounds of sugar. If inflation comes, the dollar which the defense holder gets back some years from now might buy only 10 pounds, or 5, or less. Such a depreciation in the real value of defense bonds would destroy the people's faith. No President, no person in authority, would willingly be responsible for that. It would be a tragedy second only to losing the war.

Preventing inflation means preventing excessive rise in prices. Rise in prices begins, mainly, with rise in price of food. Toward preventing that, President Roosevelt has already acted promptly, decisively, and with success thus far. He stood firm against further rise in prices of farm crops, when farm spokesmen in Congress insisted upon further rise—when indeed some farm politicians demanded no limit on that rise. Today, farmers generally are fairly content with present prices of their crops (regardless of what farm politicians may say). What farmers now want is that the prices of what they buy—of goods generally—be kept down. That is also the wish of the public generally.

For keeping down prices generally, prices of all sorts of goods, there is an agency and a law. It is the Price Control Administration, under Mr. Leon Henderson. He has power to set ceilings on practically everything (except wages). He has already set ceilings on many lines of goods. Next week he is expected to set ceilings on nearly everything, a more or less universal price ceiling—except over wages.

There remains wages. What Mr. Roosevelt says about wages will be the most carefully watched point in his address next week.

The history of Administration policy about wages began last fall. When, in writing the general price control bill, it was proposed to include wages, many Administration authorities said never, no never. This, it is necessary to assume, was a political attitude rather than an economic one. After price control got under way, it became apparent that unless wages were restrained, nothing else could be. Dawning light began to emerge from some quarters of the Administration. Mrs. Roosevelt wrote in her newspaper column that there had been a discussion in the White House. Reflecting the discussion, Mrs. Roosevelt emitted a glimmer of economic light: "It seems to me there should be an immediate freezing of prices, of profits, and of wages; no one can be frozen without freezing all."

The attitude of labor leaders has been one of firm resistance to wage control. Whether Mr. Roosevelt assents, or dissents, or tries to devise some compromise course, we shall know next week.

Commando Raid

New Phase In The War Of Nerves

THERE WAS A time when Hitler won every battle in the war of nerves, won them hands down. Now the technique he employed with such devastating force against his successive victims is being turned against him. It is the Germans rather than their enemies who are now on the receiving end of this strategy of terror.

NOVER

This change in the war's psychological climate of opinion is of tremendous importance. In some respects it marks a major turning point in the conflict. But the change has been so gradual that its full significance has often been lost to sight.

After all, it was not so very long ago that we and the British and others were endlessly preoccupied with the question of where Hitler would next strike. Every speech he made was minutely examined for barometric readings. Every time he met Mussolini at Brennero or elsewhere tremors of alarm ran up and down the spines of European statesmen.

There was never, in those days, a question of where we would strike. The attitude of the opponents of the Third Reich was invariably defensive. That fact Hitler realized and capitalized. He knew his intended victims lacked the willingness even when they possessed the capacity to strike first.

WHAT IS the situation today? Now as in the past there is considerable speculation as to the direction in which Hitler will next move. During these last months every possibility of offensive action by the Axis has been thoroughly canvassed. This is as it was in the past. The difference is, first of all, that the rumors of Germany's offensive moves are no longer capable of striking terror and paralyzing Hitler's victims and, secondly, that Hitler can no longer assume that his enemies will act only after the Nazi blow has been struck.

It is no longer possible for Hitler to deploy his major forces exclusively on an offensive front of his own choosing, leaving only a thin screen of reserve troops to protect his flank. He was able to do that as late as last summer and winter when he was able to attack Russia without fear that this would lead to the creation of a second European front. He cannot safely do, so now, although circumstances compel him to throw everything he has into the effort to smash the Red army.

HE CANNOT safely do so because the attitude of the British has changed from the defensive, as it was in the days following Dunkerque, to a determination to carry the war to the enemy and because this willingness to wage offensive war is coupled with increasing indications that they have the capacity to wage it.

This is the significance of the stepped-up aerial attacks on Germany and German-held points in occupied Europe. It is, par excellence, the significance of the commando raids such as that so brilliantly carried out at Boulogne the other day.

IT IS an open question whether Germany could be brought to her knees by aerial bombardments alone. Military opinion, in general, takes the negative view. It is pointed out, for instance, that the devastation wrought on British cities by the Luftwaffe stiffened rather than weakened Britain's determination to fight on. Yet, as Alexander de Seversky argues with considerable force in his book, "Victory Through Air Power," Germany and Japan can be beaten through air power alone, provided that the air power is good enough. And the fact remains that at the time Britain was going through her fearful ordeal by air she did not have a vast army attacking her flank, as Germany has in the Red army.

Be that as it may, the present aerial offensive of the R. A. F. cannot be considered as the substitute for a second European front, but as something of importance in itself, since it forces the enemy to divide his air power at a time when that air power may have to be employed to the full against Russia. And at the very least the air attacks on German cities, on the scale at which they are today being carried out, do tend to hamper German production, interfere with German transport, add to the already severe strain on German man power.

WHAT IS not of least importance is that Hitler cannot assume, as he may have done last year, that the British will limit their offensive operations to those which the R. A. F. is capable of carrying out.

Since last March there have been innumerable commando raids on the coast of the European continent, seven of major importance. And these seven have ranged geographically from Lofoten Islands in northern Norway to St. Nazaire on the Bay of Biscay.

Because of these raids Hitler cannot assume that the coast defenses of occupied Europe are invulnerable, even at so heavily defended a point as Boulogne. Nor can he guess at the direction in which the commandoes will next strike nor whether the next raid or some future raid will not be in such force as to make possible the establishment of a real Allied bridgehead in Western Europe.

The Gallup Poll

Large Majority in Canada Favors Freeing Of Government on Overseas Draft Ban

Princeton, N. J., April 23.—The issue which has torn Canada since its entrance into the war over two years ago will be submitted to a vote of the people next Monday in the second plebiscite in Canada's history.

The voters of Canada will go to the polls to decide whether the government of Mackenzie King should be freed from its election pledge promising no conscription for overseas duty.

Semi-final returns of a Dominion-wide poll by the Canadian Institute of Public Opinion indicate that a substantial majority will vote to free the government's hand. At the present time only one province—the French-Canadian Province of Quebec—shows a vote against freeing the government's hand. All the other provinces show a substantial vote in favor.

Official Vote Monday

The Canadian Institute, using research methods developed by the American Institute of Public Opinion, has polled the voters of Canada on the same question as will appear on the official plebiscite ballot next Monday, as follows:

"Will you vote for or against freeing the government from any pledges it has made on restricting the methods of raising men for military service?"

The vote of those who, up to this week, had made up their minds on the issue is shown below:

ALL CANADA

Yes	65%
No	35

A final poll is now in progress to measure changes in sentiment which may come in the final days of the present Dominion-wide discussion of the issue.

It is interesting to note that sentiment on the plebiscite issue has not varied substantially since February when the Canadian Institute found 71 per cent in favor, 29 per cent opposed.

King's Election Pledge

Canada has had conscription for home service ever since the war began, and has likewise sent a large number of volunteer troops overseas to England as well as to the Orient. But the government of Mackenzie King when it was elected in 1940 promised that there would be no attempt to draft Canadian man power for duty outside Canada.

While the plebiscite vote will determine the fate of this pledge, it will not necessarily mean that conscription goes into effect. Technically, it will only free the hand of the government to make any decision it sees fit with respect to conscription.

Prime Minister King has said that if the plebiscite vote is in the affirmative, the question of conscription for overseas duty will then be taken up in Parliament.

If the people themselves were to vote directly on the overseas conscription issue itself, a substantial majority would be in favor of it. The Canadian Institute recently found 60 per cent in favor of conscription for overseas service, to 40 per cent opposed.

Canada's only other national plebiscite was held in September, 1898, on the issue of prohibition. It came out 51 per cent in favor of prohibition, 49 per cent opposed.

Regulation Of Milk

Secretary Wickard has shown good judgment in approving the milk marketing order worked out by Roy F. Hendrickson. This action is an encouraging sign that the Department of Agriculture is considering the interests of milk consumers in Washington as well as those of the producers. It is difficult to see how the producers can refuse to go along with this reasonable policy.

The ingenious device worked out by the department to avoid an increase in milk prices here, while granting relief to the producers because of higher costs of production, is merely consolidation of fluid milk and the milk used for cream into one class at the price of $3.57 a hundred pounds to the producer. The effect is to raise the price of milk used for cream, which is now only $2.10 a hundredweight. Undoubtedly that increase will be passed along to consumers, but since cream is a luxury product, its retail price is of far less concern to the public than the price of milk. The department merely says that those who buy cream should pay as much in proportion for it as those who buy fluid milk of the same grade. That is eminently reasonable. In no circumstances should the consumers of an essential food be asked to subsidize a luxury food from the same source.

Nevertheless, there appears to be sharp opposition to the milk marketing order on the part of organized dairy farmers. It is reported that they may reject the order and thus upset all regulation of prices paid to farmers for milk in this area. Such action could scarcely improve the outlook for either farmers or distributors, and it would probably lead to direct regulation of the milk industry as a public utility. The dairy farmers ought to keep this in mind.

Air Offensive

Day after day during recent weeks, with only an occasional interruption because of exceptionally bad weather, the R. A. F. has waged unrelenting war on the Nazis. Both the number of planes engaged in this aerial assault and the total weight of bombs dropped on German and German-held targets make these raids the greatest which the R. A. F. has ever carried out. Indeed, it is fair to say the situation with respect to Anglo-German air warfare is now almost the reverse of what it was during the Battle of Britain.

In the Battle of Britain great fleets of German bombers crossed the Channel from the Continent to ravage British cities. The British were unable to reply in kind. They had to employ their strength, for the most part, in beating off the Luftwaffe, and they heroically succeeded in doing so. Now the shoe is on the other foot. Actually, it is said, the raids which the R. A. F. is carrying out on the Continent are far greater in scope—and possibly in destructiveness—than those which the German air force is attempting.

It is still uncertain what damage the British bombers are doing to German military objectives. There was a time when, because of British experience, the tendency was to scoff at the effectiveness of air bombardment of enemy cities. Certainly the damage done by the Luftwaffe to civilian life and property in Britain was greatly in excess of the damage done to factories, dock installations, airfields, ammunition dumps, etc. And the prevailing school of thought is still firmly of the opinion that such aerial offensives, no matter what the scale, cannot of themselves bring victory. For victory can only be achieved through the destruction of the enemy army and the occupation of the enemy nation. In other words, if Germany is to be defeated, she must first be invaded—which means a large army must be landed on the Continent.

Such aviation enthusiasts as Alexander P. de Seversky scoff at that idea, however. In his much-discussed book, "Victory Through Air Power," Seversky argues that our enemies, Germany no less than Japan, can be bombed to defeat, provided we gain control of the air and provided the aerial offensive then launched against enemy objectives is sufficiently great in scope.

Be that as it may, the fact is apparent that whether a land invasion of the European Continent is attempted by the Allies or not, the aerial offensive against the Reich will be continued and intensified. Its effectiveness at the present time is not limited to physical damage. There is the additional factor to be considered that the more air power Germany has to withdraw from the east to defend herself against the air attack from the west, the less she has for the execution of her own offensive plans in the Russian and other sectors. In other words, the R. A. F.'s daily sweeps of the German areas in Europe belong in the category of offensive operations, whether ultimately accompanied by a land invasion or not.

That being so, it is easy to understand why any reinforcements of air power, particularly in the category of bombers, that can be rushed to Britain would prove enormously helpful in balking Hitler's plans to win a victory in 1942. There is no part of German or German-occupied territory that is now outside the range of our heavy bombers. They have the additional virtue that they can be flown to the British base on their own power. Certainly when the combined American-British aerial offensive against Hitler is launched, what has happened so far in the field of air warfare will be as child's play. The bombing of Luebeck which the Germans say was "worse than Coventry" will happen to many other German cities as well.

Hitler's Babies

A smuggled copy of a Polish underground newspaper tells of the latest and in some ways most horrible of the Nazi eugenic experiments. It has to do with a kind of human stud in which "healthy Polish boys and girls between 15 and 18 years old" are being coupled with German girls and boys of the same ages at a camp in Helenow near Lodz with a view to arresting a decline in the German birth rate. Even two years ago such a report might have been classified as a crude and clumsy atrocity yarn. We certainly cannot vouch for its truth. Yet it is no more incredible than the campaigns of sterilization and "mercy killings" undertaken by the Gestapo which were first reported to this country about a year ago and which have since been abundantly corroborated.

Some implications of this latest bit of biological Schreklichkeit, whereby the Nazis have debased even their own youth to an ethical and psychological level far below that of even the most primitive human beings, are a little too terrible to contemplate. Still the story, if true, has two points of considerable interest and significance. First, it suggests that the campaign of extermination against the Poles has been abandoned, or at any rate modified. Second, that the Nazi doctrine of racial purity has been revised to suit the ever-increasing requirements of the Nazi military and industrial machine. Under the Nazi scale of racial values the Poles until recently occupied a place scarcely above that of the Jews. Now, it appears, necessity has made Polish boys and girls suitable fathers or mothers of "Aryan" children. There is nothing inconsistent about this reversal if one keeps in mind Dr. Ley's axiom that "truth is anything which is beneficial to the state, and that fallacy is anything which is not beneficial to it."

The hint of a declining German birth rate is also significant. Hitler is apparently confronted with a man-power shortage not only for his present needs but also for future needs. The reckless and unscientific program of sterilization pursued in Germany for several years before the war, the subsequent absence of many soldiers from their homes, the decimation of young German manhood on the Eastern Front, and the continued absorption of German women and girls into war industries have certainly not helped matters. In the end we may discover that by some wonderful irony the very theory of the master race has been a means of dooming the master race itself to ultimate extinction. Is it not written that "the meek shall inherit the earth?"

Mexico Likes It

The Mexicans are reported to be highly gratified with the terms of the oil settlement. They should be. It awards the puny sum of $24,000,000 to the American oil companies for expropriated properties worth many times that figure. The companies are not even certain that the agreement may not put them in debt to the Mexican Government, since the award is subject to deductions for pending private claims. It would certainly be ironical if the demands of former company workers for payment of some $25,000,000 were to be allowed by the Mexican courts as a generous offset to the amount of damages conceded. Then the companies actually would have to pay for the privilege of having their properties expropriated! Moreover, the Government of the United States will provide the dollars which Mexico has agreed to pay the oil companies—by advancing loans and credits to the Mexican Government and purchasing Mexican silver. Yes, the Mexicans have every reason to be gratified.

About all that can be said in favor of this one-sided settlement is that it will remove a cause of perennial friction that constituted a threat to maintenance of friendly relations with Mexico. In these turbulent times it is particularly important to follow the good neighbor policy in deeds as well as words. The price paid in this instance is not high if it serves to draw Mexico more closely to us. But on that score we harbor doubts, being inclined to think that Mexico would like us even better if our Government had stood up more strongly for the rights of American investors. According to John W. White, writing from Mexico on the page opposite, the Mexican workers, who have since suffered a wage reduction, and who are grumbling about the new operation of the properties, must themselves be of two minds.

Gas Rationing

An acute and growing shortage of tankers for transportation of oil to the Eastern seaboard accounts for the spectacular introduction of gas rationing in this part of the country. It is a drastic order—too drastic according to Secretary Ickes. But even his alternative suggestion would entail an immense reduction in consumption by the average motorist. Certainly the rationing order, whatever the weekly allowance may be, will be very helpful to the war effort. Transport will be economized. Special provision for taxis and cars belonging to those engaged in essential work is made possible by putting a stop to lavish non-essential consumption of gasoline. Tires and cars will also last longer. We shall thus have much larger reserves of both that can be drawn upon in case of need to supplement inadequate commercial transport facilities.

If it invokes the virtue which is inherent in all communities, the rationing order, in point of fact, should entail little hardship. Good neighborliness should take the place of many gallons of gasoline. If neighbors cooperate by pooling their gas rations and by making joint use of their cars and by filling them to capacity, there need be no tribulation. Society, moreover, will be the gainer. In Britain, where necessity has broken down a tradition of individual and family aloofness, the war seems to be producing a revolution of social adjustments that in the end will make for a happier Britain. Probably this is what Edmund Burke meant when he said that "war brings out the best in the hearts of a people." Sacrifice made in common makes for better living. We could do with some of the community tonic in our domestic relations that the British appear to have used in liberal measure.

The success of the rationing system is not assured by just clamping down on pleasure driving. Care must be taken to see that the most effective possible use is made of transportation facilities suddenly called upon to carry many thousands of persons deprived of their customary means of transport. For instance, the railroads, already feeling the effects of wartime passenger travel, will be further handicapped by gas rationing. Unless the public voluntarily cuts down on summer-time travel, or agrees to take vacations in off seasons, serious congestion of the train services is likely to result.

With private cars laid up all or part of the time, it will be necessary, too, to utilize taxicab services more effectively than in the past. That would relieve public bus and trolley lines. Some variant of the pickup service which Washington has tried with ill-success, based on compulsion rather than voluntary arrangements, might serve. At any rate, it is against the public interest to permit taxis to be used simply for pleasure travel, or by only one or two persons, after they have been put in a favored class as gasoline users.

The rationing order not only provides for better utilization of limited gasoline supplies. It will release tanker space for carriage of fuel oil for heating homes, offices and factories. Inadequacy of fuel oil supplies during the coming winter is, in any case, a certainty, with consequent inconvenience and even suffering for thousands of persons dependent on oil for heating. The rationing order should not, therefore, be regarded simply as a plan to conserve gasoline. It is part of a larger program to keep our war plants going full blast, by supplying them with necessary fuel oil; and to assure gas for the transportation of workers in war industries and necessary civilian industries.

ILL MET BY MOONLIGHT

This is the bomber's moon—the same
That once in Eden rose and set,
And filled the breaches with her flame
Along Troy's ruined parapet.

The seas and isles remembered well
Her rising and her going down;
By her the wizard set his spell,
And when the April corn was sown,
The farmer with appraising eye,
Watching the greening of the grain
Discerned, as now, hung on the sky
A silver ring, foretelling rain.

Oh, she is punctual as a star!
A lamp for lovers, lit for them;
Night's incorruptible calendar,
Telling what hour love's requiem
Chimes from the bough at dawn. The lark
Young Juliet heard still soars to sing;
The nightingale, denied the dark,
Sleeps in the twilight of his wing.

(But halt, beyond meridians,
Informing moon, delay your flight!
Let no fell gleam, no wanton glance,

Hospital Facts

To the end that we as a community might avoid the making of a basic error and a tragic error in our future planning designed to meet a critical hospitalization emergency against which The Post has repeatedly warned, this writer suggests a realistic study of the facts and figures available to any student, which are provided in the Hospital Number of The Journal of the A. M. A. March 28, 1942.

A study of these statistics indicates that in 1941, the two tax-subsidized general hospitals, Freedmen's and Gallinger, serving the community had a total bed capacity of 1468 beds as compared to the 1899 total beds provided by the nine privately operated or eleemosynary general hospitals performing the same function for those patients paying or partly paying their own way or being provided it as a gift of private philanthropy. But the same statistical studies show that whereas the tax-subsidized general hospitals were only 89.6 per cent occupied in 1941, privately operated hospitals had an 82.2 per cent occupancy.

Two inferences logically follow: First, dependable statistics indicate that there is no present need to enlarge the total number of general hospital beds available to those whose hospitalization is subsidized by tax funds, unless it is felt that the immediate future will adversely change existing ratios between the indigent and those able to subsidize in part at least, their own medical care. Second, that unless privately operated hospitalization facilities are immediately enlarged with the financial aid provided by the Lanham Act, patients who are able to make some contribution in subsidizing their medical care must be transferred during the emergency to tax-subsidized institutions, not yet saturated, where, most unfairly to the community, they are not permitted or required to pay. In other words, unless present policies are radically changed, there is a very definite threat that our present hospital shortage and the contemplated remedy (the not too urgently needed increase of tax-subsidized hospital beds) will react to the community's financial and social-welfare disadvantage, by compelling those who can pay or partly pay for their hospitalization, to accept it for nothing. Such a stupid policy might be justified in times of widespread unemployment and economic depression, but no sane thinker could justify it at present. The crying need of the hour, as The Post has repeatedly warned, is to immediately increase the number of general hospital beds available to those who urgently need them and can pay. The funds available under the Lanham Act is a logical means to this urgent and desirable end.

Giving Lifts

"Major D." asks what has happened to the motorists who used to give a "lift" to a man in uniform and says, "Now, apparently, nobody thinks of doing it."

Sorry to disagree, Major, but I'm one of those motorists—and we motorists do think of it. However, that thinking is influenced by thought of guests in an automobile having sued and recovered damages for some real or fancied injury; by such things as recently happened to a taxi driver in Washington (shot by a man in uniform in his cab); by the fear of permitting an unknown person to sit behind the driver.

I'm no coward, Major, but after dark, unless I know a man, that man walks as far as I am concerned, whether in uniform or not. Therefore, as a motorist, may I suggest that you consider the motorist's side before you criticize the lack of hospitality of motorists here?

The Irish Bases

The attitude of Ireland, unreasonable as unheroic in denying to the liberal peoples the vital bases from which Germany's oceanic piracy can best be defeated, if persisted in, will only erect against the race the condemnation of history. These nations, acting as the mandataries of civilization and with the implied mandate of the lawful spheric community, might any instant be compelled to exercise the right of international eminent domain in the universal interest.

Such an action, if by England only and intended for the single nation's advantage, would be unpermissible. However, the forces engaged in the supression of an insurrection against the law and the society of nations must act in consonance with the fundamental sanction inherent in public law quite as individuals would act for the protection of society at the common law's command.

In the existing situation, the Irish are nonvolitional defenders of the lawless nations, and being undefended themselves except by the American expeditionary force, and some British, in the extreme north, seem not to appreciate the corollary of rights. They seem to be unaware that Ireland's independence, which is menaced by German and French collaboration, can be guaranteed only by America and England, whose fleets are prohibited access to the parts from which the German piracy at the approaches to Europe can best be exterminated. Such exclusion reduces by hundreds of miles the effective fighting radius of American and British vessels.

The Irish must realize that any scheme of the Reich for the control of Europe includes the forcible seizure and permanent possession of Irish bases from which the Germans would enforce a German law of the sea. Constitutionally, the Irish republic is a democracy, but the position of the nation in this war is disastrously injurious to the peoples fighting for a final vindication and permanent bulwarking of the concepts of right to which the Irish are celebratedly attached. Certainly the thesis could not be sustained that the Irish people would exclude the Eternal from the reformation of the society of nations.

The English government in justly granting independence to Ireland was negligent in not providing against a foreign menace to Ireland, and so, to the British Isles, by stipulations in the treaty respecting an emergency resort to the relinquished Irish bases for the community's protection. The legal right of forces of the United Nations to go to them is real: a community can repair a fault in a dam regardless of the owner's disinterestedness.

Hours Of Labor

Unhappily we have abundant proof that in war supremacy in the air is essential to victory. Even great battleships are at the mercy of bombing planes.

Japan boasts that it is making and can continue to make planes faster than the United States. Does Japan work only six and a fraction hours a day? It does not. It works nearer 16 than 6, and its factories are never idle. Do Japanese strike, slow down and quit at pleasure? Never.

Does Germany in making planes work only six and a fraction hours a day? It does not. Its good neighbors, victims of its perfidious wars, are mercilessly driven nearer 16 than 6 and a fraction hours a day. Do they strike, slow down, and quit at pleasure? Never.

How, then, will we ever outstrip our enemies in making planes if our workers do these things and also work only six and a fraction hours a day? The answer is "we never will." With eight hours a day as a basis, our five million workers have already lost seven and one-half million work hours a day. This, continued, means certain defeat.

The time has come when we must end our pernicious appeasement, stop sacrificing our Nation's freedom at the altar of "social gains," have no favored classes but all sacrifice all things necessary to save our native land. Our Government has the right to commandeer, the right to dictate, the right to enforce obedience. Let it exercise these rights; put all subversives, all obstructionists in concentration camps, the "high ups" with their abortive promises and efforts to maintain present destructive conditions, as well as the "small fry," and act promptly with vigor, resolution and wisdom. Extreme danger demands extreme measures.

Women Over 35

In reply to letters appearing in your column, I want to say a good word for the Civil Service Commission in regard to taking women over 35 years of age.

During my year with the Government in Washington I have come in contact with many women over 35 who have been recently appointed. I am past 45 and live west of the Mississippi and believe my application was considered exactly the same as any other.

Of course I do not approve of the commission bringing girls under 21 to Washington, D. C., but it does seem the young girl is favored. However, I doubt if the older woman is neglected for age alone.

Parasitic Workers

I do believe Congress should appropriate a sum of money to employ some reputable psychiatrists to weed out the mediocrities and parasites in all departments of the Government.

Competent men and women are wanted. Letters from politicians in this crisis should be frowned upon.

Plenty of work is to be had at everything and anything in line of labor Everyone is bound to sacrifice and accept the sacrifice willingly. All of us must pay taxes. But there is a privileged clique here wearing the right fraternity ring. This clique predominates, particularly in the navy yard. Washington is infested with artificial, deceitful handshakers, with the smile of Judas.

All of us remember Pearl Harbor, but don't forget, my fellow citizens, we have our Calvary, and Pearl Harbor right here in Washington.

Pacific Names

Ever wonder about the names, the place names, that play so prominent a part in the news from the Pacific war zone? In particular, I mean the original meanings of the names. This geographical etymology, as it is called, is exceedingly interesting. Consider, for instance, the name Corregidor. Specifically, the word is the title of a Spanish magistrate, but aside from that it has its own meaning—namely, he who punishes and corrects. "It is altogether fitting and proper" that this defiant fortress should be so named.

China (it might be spelled T-s-i-n-a) is named after the founder of one of her greatest dynasties, the Emperor Tsin. It was during his reign that news of this fabulous land was first brought to the Western World—thus the name. Chinese provinces are named with due respect for topography. Thus, Shantung is east of the mountain; Shansi is west of the mountain; Honan is south of the river. About the same thing happens to natural formations—the Hoangho is the yellow river, and the yellow mud it brings with it seems to clutter up the Hoanghai, the yellow sea. Those fantastic mountains we see in Chinese prints, the ones that seem to go straight up and down, are the Tian Shan—celestial mountains. They are the real thing, too!

Occasionally, several names have almost identical original meanings. Thus Asia and Japan both mean land of the dawn. Asia comes from the Sanskrit Ushas. Japan came through Portuguese from an original word which is more closely approximated by Nippon.

Once, a good many centuries ago, an Asiatic chieftain decided he would attach a word meaning pure to his newly founded clan. And so it was, and the tribe flourished, and it produced a dynasty that ruled China for 300 years. The name—Manchu; it supplied us with the name Manchuria—the land of the Manchus.

There are, to be sure, a great many names which are not particularly interesting. Hawaii, for instance, means homeland; Formosa means beautiful. But, on the other hand, there is something significant in Vladivostok—it means lord of the Orient. Rangoon means end of war. Maybe the decisive defeat of the Japanese armies will be the Battle of Rangoon—probably not, but it is fun to speculate.

One of the English-army-in-India movies a few years back paid particular attention to the goddess Kali. On the Hooghly River in India are steps, or ghauts, by the side of the river for the worship of Kali. They are the Kali-ghauts—Calcutta, nowadays.

Alaska means great land, but it has not always been called thus. Seward's purchase of the place was rather unpopular, despite the bargain price. There were those who suggested names like Polario, Zero Islands, and, finest of all, Walrussia.

Etymologically speaking, Canada is merely a group of wigwams. The United States are a union of sovereign States. Washington, one of those States, is named after a well-known surveyor of some years back. The origin of the name Oregon is obscure. It may have reference to big-eared Indians, to a hurricane, to beautiful water, or to any of a half dozen other things. California comes from a few Spanish words, caliente fornalia—hot furnace. Apparently, the name was originally applied to what is now Lower California—that desolate piece of Mexico south of Hollywood.

The fact that Pearl Harbor is known for its pearls should clear up any mystery about derivation. New Zealand, 7000 miles west of Panama, is merely a second edition of the Dutch province of Zeeland—the sea country. Australia, appropriately enough, means south.

The Philippines remind us that the islands were discovered in the reign of Philip II of Spain. Java, invaded by the Japanese, is the island of nutmegs; Pulo Penang, the big British naval base lost early in the war, is the island of betel nuts. Singapore means city of the lion, but those who named some native village at the base of the Malay Peninsula certainly had no thought of the British lion, nor any idea that in the idiom of some remote language, brave men would fight like lions.

As for the countless other names in the Pacific and elsewhere, all of which have derivations, there are books on the subject. The libraries catalog the information under "Name—Geographical—Etymology." The few given here, then, are merely a sample of the names of the quiet ocean.

Compulsory Saving

I among many am willing and would do much more to see this war go on the offensive. We all want to see victory come.

With all our help in cash and cooperation we still find our shores menaced by the enemy and there has been practically no retaliation.

Still the Government is asking all to invest 10 per cent of income in bonds.

If the Government or anyone else can lay out a budget that will enable a family to invest to that extent, which is making 63 cents per hour on a 40-hour week, and paying $35 for an apartment, $34 for groceries and keeping gas and clothing bills paid besides other necessary bills around the average home, I for one am willing to accept. I have a car to keep up or I have no employment. About 10 miles a week is used for pleasure. Who could be closer?

The Government had asked people to purchase their coal for next winter. When they began to cooperate they were taken advantage of by a raise to winter prices.

Remember Mr. Government, you have taxed everything, but is it necessary to demand more? Remember, other leaders have done this, and are they winning the war or the confidence of their people?

If these things are necessary at this stage of the war, our country is then in a terrible condition.

Let's keep the symbol "V" for victory, not for victim.

American Offensive

By Ernest Lindley

Political As Well As Military

HINTS come from Europe of a Nazi peace offensive. So far they have been scattered and vague, except perhaps for Laval's speech.

LINDLEY

Laval said, in effect, that the French have quit resisting, that they will now collaborate actively with the Nazis. Laval is reported to have persuaded the Nazis that he can serve as a broker of peace between them and the United States.

Archibald MacLeish, director of the Office of Facts and Figures, evinced concern, in his speech to the Associated Press luncheon this week, as to the susceptibility of the American people to a peace offensive. He said that Nazi propagandists had "turned the famous common sense of the French people against the people of France and from that moment the cause of France was lost." So, he concluded, "it would be a mistake to rely too heavily upon the saving power of American common sense alone, or to assume too easily that because the Americans do not really believe in propaganda they will prove to be immune to it."

Mr. MacLeish's concern is shared, in greater or less degree, by some others in the national administration. How much Nazi propaganda had to do with the defeat of France is a debatable point. When the showdown came, the Nazis had, by far, the superior military machine.

PRIOR to Pearl Harbor, this country was divided on foreign policy, although the big turn came with the fall of France in June, 1940. After that, sentiment for an immense Air Force and Navy and well-equipped Army was overwhelming, even though the debate as to where they should be used continued to rage. Even today there are pernicious lingering internal quarrels, especially between organized labor and management. There is a fringe of defeatism—and it may be a wider fringe than is apparent at first glance.

But certainly there is nothing to indicate that this country is not overwhelmingly determined to fight this war to a successful conclusion. On the contrary, one sees and hears on all sides an impatience to take the offensive against our enemies—a state of mind which, if it existed in France, was not reflected in its military policies.

Before Russia was brought into the war, when England's ability to hold was doubtful, and the United States was only in the early stages of rearmament, the defeat of the Nazis seemed to many to be a military impossibility. The Nazis energetically spread this notion. As the Association for the Advancement of Psychoanalysis recently has pointed out in a bulletin: "Whatever we do is done superbly and inimitably—you are licked before you start, so be sensible and accept our terms."

BUT THE LEGEND of Nazi invincibility has worn pretty thin on the plains of Russia. A Nazi peace offensive now could be read only as proof of Nazi weakness, and almost certainly would reinforce the determination, widely evinced in this country, to clean up our No. 1 enemy at the earliest possible moment.

Except for what the bulletin quoted above refers to as "boisterous boasting and devaluation of everyone else," what is there to Nazi propaganda? Not much. Earlier there was a second important line: that the Nazis had only limited objectives, that they harbored no designs on any nation, except the one which they were pouncing on at that particular moment. This was effective for a time. But it is difficult to believe that more than a tiny percentage of American citizens would ever swallow it again.

Both themes—"we don't mean any harm to you" and "you might as well give up because you're going to get licked anyway"—have become threadbare. But, as the psychoanalysts' bulletin points out, "the German propaganda groups have tried to disseminate the same aroma of invincibility about their psychologists as they have about their military forces." To a Washington observer it sometimes appears that Mr. MacLeish and some of his propaganda-minded colleagues remain somewhat under the influence of the German legend.

As Mr. Walter Lippmann has pointed out, the Germans did not invent political warfare. If it was not invented in the United States, at least it was practiced successfully on the grand scale in the first World War by Woodrow Wilson. Wilson's 14 points gripped the imagination of the Western world, including the people of Germany.

IN POLITICAL, as in military warfare, the best defense is a powerful offense. In political warfare, we have many times the striking power of the Nazis and Japanese. For we have to offer what the captive people of the world want.

President Roosevelt is skillful in the use of propaganda weapons. The Nazis long have feared him more than any other man in the world. But the President has not yet organized and pressed home great political offensives. He may feel that the psychological moment has not arrived—that the grand political offensive must be preceded by or coincide with military victories.

But the offensive in both political and military warfare is in the American tradition. Now that we are gathering our full strength, it is inconceivable that we can be dissuaded from using it.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Pegler's Labor Fight

IT SHOULD not be necessary for the staunchest friend of American labor and the first man to challenge and attack the worst enemies of the worker to answer the cry of "labor baiter" which has been raised by the now frightened and desperate corruptioneers, parasites, fakers and brown shirts. However, I think this had better be done because there really is something to the Hitlerian proposition that a lie, if big enough and told often enough, presently begins to numb the people's judgment and, in time, will convince them of something which they know to be false. Up to now I have just scorned the accusation that I am anti-labor, not only because it is too obviously false and too obviously intended to divert attention from rogues caught in the act, but also because I have been too busy verifying countless instances of brazen rascality and shouting up the terrible danger to the freedom of every American man and woman which is written into some of our laws and most union constitutions and several Supreme Court decisions.

At the risk of seeming immodest I will say that there are very few persons in the United States who know as much as I do about the organization, the constitutions and by-laws, the practices, the revenues and the personalities of unions. There isn't much that anyone can fault me on in this field because I have studied my stuff diligently, including the fine print and the hidden meanings, the court decisions and the sinister implications of the Clayton and Norris-LaGuardia Acts for years and I know what I am talking about.

I AM CHALLENGED sometimes on the ground that I don't tear into war profiteers and some corrupt practices of business, and thus, even to some honest men and women, seem to condone by silence evils which deserve the enmity of all conscientious citizens. The reason is not condonation at all. The reasons are several. For one, business is responsible and subject to restraining laws and regulations. For still another, the ground is very well covered by a number of competent journalists who know their subject as well as I know the subject of unionism. And, finally, I ventured into this controversy when mine was a very unpopular cause, and do not intend to quit now that the real enemies of American labor are on the defensive and on the run.

Through my efforts American labor has now learned that unions, as now constituted and conducted under the existing laws, are a menace to the freedoms and the form of government that this country is fighting to preserve against Hitler and the Japs. Congress also has stirred slightly. In fact, the lower house has given two violent twitches, as the members, subject to election every two years, and therefore less complacent politically than the Senators, realized what the unions were up to and observed the growth of the arrogant, leering power of the political unioneer over the life of the American worker. And, no doubt about it, notwithstanding the perniciousness of the decisions and the reasoning behind them in the carpenters' and teamsters' cases, the courts in a number of other decisions have begun to reclaim from the boss unioneer some of the natural rights of millions of human beings which had been seized away in the tumult of the New Deal's so-called and miscalled social program.

Am I anti-union, then? Let nobody tell you that. I believe in the stated purpose of the Wagner Act to enable workers to bargain collectively through agents of their own choice. The closed shop and its variations, which are only disguises, forbid freedom of choice and compel American workers to accept representation by agents whom they would reject if they were allowed to.

I AM against coercion by employers, which is forbidden by the act, and equally opposed to coercion by union agents, which commonly consists of plain thuggery and physical terrorism, and which pointedly is not forbidden. I am against extortion of money from the workers and the common practice of slugging men in union meetings for daring to ask questions about the disposal of their own funds. The extortion of money from employers also must be stopped, not only because it is wrong, but because this graft comes out of the workers in increased prices.

Unions have got to stand aside for progress where now they use their power to prevent the employment of new inventions and methods, and they must forfeit the racket, but recently blessed by the Supreme Court, known as the stand-by system which is brigandage in modern dress.

It must be established that no alien nor anyone with a criminal record may hold office in any union, all accounts must be reported to the Government, union funds must not be used in the interest of any candidate or political issue except by unanimous vote of the entire membership and in the event of such consent and contribution the treasury of that union must forfeit its exemption from the income tax.

Given these and a few other reforms, the American worker will be rescued from the clutches of those cunning and dictatorial exploiters and enemies of free labor who have the gall to call themselves his leaders and his friends.

Mexican Oil Conflict

By John W. White

War Spurs U. S. Settlement

Mexico City.

IT IS expected here that the settlement of the oil conflict will open the way for a much larger output of Mexican petroleum and gasoline as part of this country's production of vital war materials now being made available to the United States. While in Washington recently, Foreign Minister Padilla announced that among the several arrangements being negotiated between Mexico and the United States was one for the production in Mexico of high octane gasoline for airplanes.

Whether or not the American oil companies are to be invited to take over the operation of their old properties on a royalty basis, as is being persistently rumored and just as persistently denied, Foreign Minister Padilla's announcement is believed here to indicate at least that American experts will be engaged to take over the more technical phases of production and refining.

OPERATION of the petroleum industry by the autonomous organization "Petroleos Mexicanos," which the Mexican government set up after the expropriation of the foreign-owned wells and refineries in March 1938, has not been entirely satisfactory, either from the viewpoint of production or the situation of the workmen. It is understood that the workmen, at least, would welcome the intervention of private interests in the operation of the industry, although it was their labor conflict with the foreign companies that was made the excuse for the expropriation.

In 1937, the last year that the industry was operated under private ownership, there were 1039 wells in operation, with an annual production of 47 million barrels. By 1940, only 907 wells were producing and the annual output had dropped to 38 million barrels. But the number of workmen had increased from 15,750 to 21,115 and the annual payroll had risen from 36 million pesos to 97 million.

When the American and other foreign oil properties were expropriated, the government charged that the companies were making a profit of 56 million pesos a year, although the books of the companies showed profits of only 10 million pesos a year over the 10-year period preceding the expropriation. The Mexican government at the time of the expropriation expected to pay for the properties out of the profits which the companies had been making. But the statement has been published repeatedly and not refuted that the government operations of the industry has been losing in the neighborhood of 100 million pesos a year.

THE PETROLEUM workers' unions, which were the most enthusiastic supporters of the expropriation of the companies' properties, have recently been the most bitter critics of government operation. On the occasion last month of the fourth anniversary of the expropriation they published full-page newspaper advertisements addressed to the President of the republic and to the general public, charging that their position is much worse under government ownership than it was under the foreign companies. The advertisements set forth particularly that instead of receiving the 26 million pesos a year increase in wages which the companies had agreed to pay, their wages have been cut from 8 to 15 per cent in an effort to cut down the losses of government operation.

The decline in Mexican production since the expropriation is blamed on the boycott set up by the American companies. Since distribution of petroleum products in the United States is controlled by the companies whose properties were expropriated, Mexico was unable to continue selling its oil in the United States because the companies refused to handle it. Mexico also was unable to get machinery and other equipment which is needed to keep the industry up to a high pitch of efficiency because the American companies which manufacture this machinery and equipment refused to sell to Mexico after the expropriation.

Consequently, Mexico had no choice except to sell its exportable production to Germany and Italy at much lower prices than had been paid by the United States, agreeing at the same time to take German and Italian machinery and equipment in payment. As happened in the Axis barter deals throughout Latin America, the Axis powers got Mexico's petroleum and gasoline, but Mexico did not get the promised machinery and equipment.

IT IS expected that Mexico's offer to pay 24 million dollars to the American companies will remove the boycott and permit Mexico to resume selling its production in the United States on a much larger scale than formerly. The agreement signed between the two governments admits of no appeal and puts the companies in the position of having to accept what has been offered them or get nothing, with the added condition that the United States Government will make no further efforts on their behalf. Therefore, it is confidently expected in Government circles here that the companies will accept the settlement.

The settlement of the American angle of the conflict has renewed speculation here as to how the similar conflict with the British and Dutch owned companies will be settled. The British and Dutch properties have a much higher value than the American properties and the operating companies have flatly refused even to discuss a possible settlement, demanding the outright return of the expropriated properties to the companies.

When the British and Mexican governments renewed diplomatic relations last November after a three years hiatus, it was with the clear understanding that the petroleum controversy would not be discussed until the termination of the war. Authoritative Mexican sources feel that the Mexican government's position regarding the expropriated British and Dutch properties has been greatly strengthened by American settlement, especially as it specifically recognizes the legality of the expropriation of the oil properties by President Cardenas and also recognizes the Mexican government's ownership of the subsoil rights, which the companies claimed belonged to them.

Mexicans believe that in view of the American settlement, the British companies will have no choice except a similar settlement based on a proportional valuation of their properties.

The British and Dutch refusal to discuss a settlement has been based on their contention that the Mexican government was not financially able to pay for the expropriated properties. Mexican sources feel that this allegation has been destroyed by the payments arrangements made with Washington.

When the oil properties were expropriated the Royal Dutch group consisted of 11 companies and three subsidiary shipping companies. This group was producing 60 per cent of Mexico's total output and also owned three of the largest refineries in the country.

2 Army Fugitives Caught in W. Va.

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charles Town, W. Va., April 23.—State police yesterday recaptured the two Army deserters who broke out of Jefferson County Jail here about ten days ago.

The men, Privates Ray Mumaw and Charles McDonald, were taken by the State police near Mumaw's father's home on the Henry Dutrow farm near Charles Town. They offered no resistance and were returned to the jail.

Mumaw, of Jefferson County, and McDonald, of Berkeley County, were picked up several weeks ago by Jefferson authorities after Fort Meade Army officials reported them absent without leave and asked that they be held.

They broke jail by overpowering the jailer while he was bringing in a new mattress for their cell.

Wage Control

By Mark Sullivan

To Check Inflation

NEXT WEEK—Monday is the expected day—President Roosevelt will send a message to Congress. That evening he will address the country by radio. The following day, Price Administrator Leon Henderson will issue orders putting a ceiling, a top limit, on the price of practically everything. Later in the week, several steps will be taken to carry out the program which President Roosevelt is to announce.

The central aim of all this is "anti-inflation." To this, the other parts of the program are accessory. The other subjects to be treated include price control, wage and salary control, profits control, installment selling control, credit control, and, finally, defense bonds. That these should be united in one address and one program is appropriate, for they belong together in fact. If the Administration deals wisely with all these, this country may escape inflation—and by that escape much harm and distress.

Let us start with defense bonds. This week a drive is on to sell them to literally every adult in the country, and to as many children as have a few pennies to buy the small denomination stamps. The drive is Nation-wide, and door to door. It is quite successful. One of the force of volunteer sellers, in a community I am familiar with, sold to 13 out of 19 families he called on. Practically every American family is going to be an owner of defense bonds.

The people buy these bonds gladly, in most cases with a sense of pleasure, almost exaltation. They buy because they feel they thus help fight war. If they think their money is used for purposes other than war, or extravagantly, the people become a little sour on buying bonds. Purchases were at their peak in January, reflecting patriotic emotion over Pearl Harbor. They fell off nearly 50 per cent in February. One quite natural reason was use of funds to pay income taxes. Other reasons, psychological, were three widely publicized conditions—extravagant frills in the Office of Civilian Defense under Mrs. Roosevelt; pensions to Congressmen; the 40-hour-week with time and a half and double time for extra hours. It was a crude way of criticizing conduct of the war—but it worked. The first two conditions were ended promptly, and the labor leaders have surrendered double time.

The thing to apprehend now about defense bonds, and to prevent, is inflation. That is the central reason President Roosevelt speaks next week. Inflation would mean prices of goods rising much higher—doubling, or trebling, or more. If that should happen, the real value of defense bonds would shrivel in their owners' hands. The dollar paid for a defense bond today will buy, for example, some 15 pounds of sugar. If inflation comes, the dollar which the defense holder gets back some years from now might buy only 10 pounds, or 5, or less. Such a depreciation in the real value of defense bonds would destroy the people's faith. No President, no person in authority, would willingly be responsible for that. It would be a tragedy second only to losing the war.

Preventing inflation means preventing excessive rise in prices. Rise in prices begins, mainly, with rise in price of food. Toward preventing that, President Roosevelt has already acted promptly, decisively, and with success thus far. He stood firm against further rise in prices of farm crops, when farm spokesmen in Congress insisted upon further rise—when indeed some farm politicians demanded no limit on that rise. Today, farmers generally are fairly content with present prices of their crops (regardless of what farm politicians may say). What farmers now want is that the prices of what they buy—of goods generally—be kept down. That is also the wish of the public generally.

For keeping down prices generally, prices of all sorts of goods, there is an agency and a law. It is the Price Control Administration, under Mr. Leon Henderson. He has power to set ceilings on practically everything (except wages). He has already set ceilings on many lines of goods. Next week he is expected to set ceilings on nearly everything, a more or less universal price ceiling—except over wages.

There remains wages. What Mr. Roosevelt says about wages will be the most carefully watched point in his address next week.

The history of Administration policy about wages began last fall. When, in writing the general price control bill, it was proposed to include wages, many Administration authorities said never, no never. This, it is necessary to assume, was a political attitude rather than an economic one. After price control got under way, it became apparent that unless wages were restrained, nothing else could be. Dawning light began to emerge from some quarters of the Administration. Mrs. Roosevelt wrote in her newspaper column that there had been a discussion in the White House. Reflecting the discussion, Mrs. Roosevelt emitted a glimmer of economic light: "It seems to me there should be an immediate freezing of prices, of profits, and of wages; no one can be frozen without freezing all."

The attitude of labor leaders has been one of firm resistance to wage control. Whether Mr. Roosevelt assents, or dissents, or tries to devise some compromise course, we shall know next week.

Commando Raid

By Barnet Nover

New Phase In The War Of Nerves

THERE WAS A time when Hitler won every battle in the war of nerves, won them hands down. Now the technique he employed with such devastating force against his successive victims is being turned against him. It is the Germans rather than their enemies who are now on the receiving end of this strategy of terror.

NOVER

This change in the war's psychological climate of opinion is of tremendous importance. In some respects it marks a major turning point in the conflict. But the change has been so gradual that its full significance has often been lost to sight.

After all, it was not so very long ago that we and the British and others were endlessly preoccupied with the question of where Hitler would next strike. Every speech he made was minutely examined for barometric readings. Every time he met Mussolini at Brennero or elsewhere tremors of alarm ran up and down the spines of European statesmen.

There was never, in those days, a question of where we would strike. The attitude of the opponents of the Third Reich was invariably defensive. That fact Hitler realized and capitalized. He knew his intended victims lacked the willingness even when they possessed the capacity to strike first.

WHAT IS the situation today? Now as in the past there is considerable speculation as to the direction in which Hitler will next move. During these last months every possibility of offensive action by the Axis has been thoroughly canvassed. This is as it was in the past. The difference is, first of all, that the rumors of Germany's offensive moves are no longer capable of striking terror and paralyzing Hitler's victims and, secondly, that Hitler can no longer assume that his enemies will act only after the Nazi blow has been struck.

It is no longer possible for Hitler to deploy his major forces exclusively on an offensive front of his own choosing, leaving only a thin screen of reserve troops to protect his flank. He was able to do that as late as last summer and winter when he was able to attack Russia without fear that this would lead to the creation of a second European front. He cannot safely do so now, although circumstances compel him to throw everything he has into the effort to smash the Red army.

HE CANNOT safely do so because the attitude of the British has changed from the defensive, as it was in the days following Dunkerque, to a determination to carry the war to the enemy and because this willingness to wage offensive war is coupled with increasing indications that they have the capacity to wage it.

This is the significance of the stepped-up aerial attacks on Germany and German-held points in occupied Europe. It is, par excellence, the significance of the commando raids such as that so brilliantly carried out at Boulogne the other day.

IT IS an open question whether Germany could be brought to her knees by aerial bombardments alone. Military opinion, in general, takes the negative view. It is pointed out, for instance, that the devastation wrought on British cities by the Luftwaffe stiffened rather than weakened Britain's determination to fight on. Yet, as Alexander de Seversky argues with considerable force in his book, "Victory Through Air Power," Germany and Japan can be beaten through air power alone, provided that the air power is good enough. And the fact remains that at the time Britain was going through her fearful ordeal by air she did not have a vast army attacking her flank, as Germany has in the Red army.

Be that as it may, the present aerial offensive of the R. A. F. cannot be considered as the substitute for a second European front, but as something of importance in itself, since it forces the enemy to divide his air power at a time when that air power may have to be employed to the full against Russia. And at the very least the air attacks on German cities, on the scale at which they are today being carried out, do tend to hamper German production, interfere with German transport, add to the already severe strain on German man power.

WHAT IS not of least importance is that Hitler cannot assume, as he may have done last year, that the British will limit their offensive operations to those which the R. A. F. is capable of carrying out.

Since last March there have been innumerable commando raids on the coast of the European continent, seven of major importance. And these seven have ranged geographically from Lofoten Islands in northern Norway to St. Nazaire on the Bay of Biscay.

Because of these raids Hitler cannot assume that the coast defenses of occupied Europe are invulnerable, even at so heavily defended a point as Boulogne. Nor can he guess at the direction in which the commandoes will next strike nor whether the next raid or some future raid will not be in such force as to make possible the establishment of a real Allied bridgehead in Western Europe.

The Gallup Poll

Large Majority in Canada Favors Freeing Of Government on Overseas Draft Ban

Princeton, N. J., April 23.—The issue which has torn Canada since its entrance into the war over two years ago will be submitted to a vote of the people next Monday in the second plebiscite in Canada's history.

The voters of Canada will go to the polls to decide whether the government of Mackenzie King should be freed from its election pledge promising no conscription for overseas duty.

Semi-final returns of a Dominion-wide poll by the Canadian Institute of Public Opinion indicate that a substantial majority will vote to free the government's hand. At the present time only one province—the French-Canadian Province of Quebec—shows a vote against freeing the government's hand. All the other provinces show a substantial vote in favor.

Official Vote Monday

The Canadian Institute, using research methods developed by the American Institute of Public Opinion, has polled the voters of Canada on the same question as will appear on the official plebiscite ballot next Monday, as follows:

"Will you vote for or against freeing the government from any pledges it has made on restricting the methods of raising men for military service?"

The vote of those who, up to this week, had made up their minds on the issue is shown below:

ALL CANADA

Yes	65%
No	35

A final poll is now in progress to measure changes in sentiment which may come in the final days of the present Dominion-wide discussion of the issue.

It is interesting to note that sentiment on the plebiscite issue has not varied substantially since February when the Canadian Institute found 71 per cent in favor, 29 per cent opposed.

King's Election Pledge

Canada has had conscription for home service ever since the war began, and has likewise sent a large number of volunteer troops overseas to England as well as to the Orient. But the government of Mackenzie King when it was elected in 1940 promised that there would be no attempt to draft Canadian man power for duty outside Canada.

While the plebiscite vote will determine the fate of this pledge, it will not necessarily mean that conscription goes into effect. Technically, it will only free the hand of the government to make any decision it sees fit with respect to conscription.

Prime Minister King has said that if the plebiscite vote is in the affirmative, the question of conscription for overseas duty will then be taken up in Parliament.

If the people themselves were to vote directly on the overseas conscription issue itself, a substantial majority would be in favor of it. The Canadian Institute recently found 60 per cent in favor of conscription for overseas service, to 40 per cent opposed.

Canada's only other national plebiscite was held in September, 1898, on the issue of prohibition. It came out 51 per cent in favor of prohibition, 49 per cent opposed.

Nazidom: An Anthill Atop a Volcano, Says Writer Who Escaped

This is the third chapter of Kurt Kokorniak's story of his escape from Nazi Germany.

By Kurt Kokorniak

(Distributed by International News Service with Special Permission of "London Calling." Copyright, 1942.)

London, April 23.—I made up my mind as I started on my long trek to freedom to travel mainly at night and not to stop if a guard challenged me. To shoot and hit at night is more difficult than is generally believed. And besides the only thing I cared about was not being taken back to prison camp alive. I think it was this absolute determination that brought me safely across Europe.

Until the evening of the first day I rode about in Magdeburg. Near the central market, women were standing in a long food line. Just before closing time there was a scuffle among the women. A policeman intervened. Afterwards he muttered: "It's a scandal. They ask a whole mark for a kilo of cabbage and then you don't get it."

After 10 o'clock at night, I started out of the town on my stolen bicycle. I did the first 100 kilometers, as far as Brunswick, at a snail's pace. It took three nights.

I was afraid of meeting a guard around every corner.

Guards Everywhere

And there were guards particularly frequent on that stretch—the district is full of secret armament works. But I soon discovered that they were only guarding and were not controlling the traffic.

I gradually became more confident. I still had something to eat, but drinking water was a difficult problem. I didn't dare to go into a house and ask for a glass of water; when it rained I lay down and lapped the water out of puddles. It often tasted of petrol, tar, and asphalt. It rained a lot. During the day I lay down in pouring rain between trees, and slept.

I went through the town of Fallersleben where I heard practically nothing but Italian spoken. The population, especially the women, hated these imported workers who had come into the warm nest while their sons were bleeding in Russia.

The Italians, for their part—in the Bussing Works at Brunswick, for instance, there are more than 25,000 of them—hated the native German population. They felt unhappy in a foreign country; and their special working conditions meant that they were practically in the position of prisoners of war.

Hitler on a Volcano

I had seen a good many of these unfortunate Italians in concentration camps and prisons; as well as a large number of French, Spanish, and Dutch workers, and, above all, Poles. Again and again I had the feeling that every one of these hundreds of thousands, who had been enticed or forcibly carried off to Germany, was being systematically made an enemy. The new order of Europe, it seemed to me, was like an ant-hill on a volcano.

From Brunswick I went on, via Hildesheim, to Hameln. So far no guard had halted me. I became more confident and now cycled during the daytime too. In Hildesheim my supplies came to an end. On the 40 kilometers to Hameln I got hungrier and hungrier. I didn't want to spend my ten marks—They were my capital, and, besides, I couldn't have bought anything without ration cards.

Shortly after Hameln I passed a farm. An old farmer was sitting in front of the house, smoking a pipe. I wondered whether to ask him for something to eat. He had a good, cunning peasant's face. But I didn't have the courage. I had never yet begged for food; but finally I did decide to ask. I asked him if he could give me something to eat.

He looked me up and down thoroughly in his farmer's way and then said he didn't have anything. For some reason that I couldn't explain, even to myself, I felt that I could trust the old man—I had formed the habit of trusting to my instinct about people.

"Where do you come from?" he asked. I told him I was a German Spaniard, that I wanted to get back to my family. I finally threw myself on his mercy and admitted I had been carried off to Germany against my will, and had escaped from the Gestapo camp near Sueplingen.

Befriended By Farmer

At first he said nothing, then he said his wife had made some semolina pudding the day before, that there might be a spoonful left over, and that I was to come inside. He watched me while I was eating, then suddenly he got up and brought me some white bread, butter and ham.

"Now eat all you can," he said in his Westphalian dialect.

He didn't have to tell me twice. We started talking. He lived on the farm with his wife and daughter-in-law. His son-in-law had recently been killed in Russia. His son had been shot in the abdomen and was lying in a hospital. He showed me a letter his son had written from the hospital, enclosing photographs. The son said that his battalion had taken part in an attack at Kiev and that only eight men had been left of the battalion of full strength—and they were wounded.

Later, on my travels, I heard the same story again and again, of battalions and regiments wiped out, of divisions that simply didn't come back, which had perished on the murderous Russian Steppes for the greater glory of Hitler.

Throws Out Italians

The farmer went on to tell me that the authorities had sent him three Italians to help him, but he had thrown them out.

"Let them give me back my son and son-in-law, I don't want foreigners on my farm," he said.

When I thanked him and got on my bike, the farmer suddenly became suspicious.

"Here I have been feeding you," he said, "and now it will turn out that you are a spy."

I tried to reassure him and told him that even if I did want to denounce him I couldn't bring anything against him because I had no witnesses.

"That doesn't make any difference," he said. "A spy is always believed."

From Hildesheim through the Rhineland to the Saar frontier there were no special incidents. One anti-Fascist family gave me a letter of recommendation to another in the next town. How smoothly it worked! I had the impression that I was not the first who had been helped in this way. And I learned once more that the Gestapo is powerful, but not all-powerful.

Finds Old Friend

My bike carried me through Saarbrucken to Forbach. In Forbach I looked up a friend who had helped me to escape the first time, in 1936. Although Forbach had meantime become German, I found him in his old home. He saved me again.

I had had no idea that there was a new frontier post 1000 meters beyond Forbach, blocking the way to Alsace. Although Alsace has now been brought back into the Reich, apparently the new Germans are not altogether trusted.

I was taken across during a cloudburst, in broad daylight. That was the first frontier crossed; there were four more to come.

Beaverbrook Text Calling for Western Front to Help Settle War This Year

1942 Could Be Decisive, Briton Says

By the Associated Press

A text of Lord Beaverbrook's speech tonight before the fifty-sixth annual dinner of the American Newspaper Publishers Association follows:

Never, never, has any race fought so hard, so furiously as the British people in the last two years.

Now I know this view is not generally held in the United States. And I ask you to hear me, a citizen of the Empire, and just as free to criticise Britain in the past as any other man in this room.

It was just two years ago that we lost everything we possessed, save only our soldiers. We had to begin all over again. Nothing left to us but a portion of our army. All the weapons gone. The cupboard was bare. Not even a rifle.

Guns we lost in thousands, vehicles by the 50,000. Almost all our tanks and many airplanes.

Supply Sources Cut Off

And remember, too, that many valuable and essential raw materials were cut off when our sources of supply fell under the power of Germany. Three-quarters of our imports of iron and steel, all the raw materials of our aluminum output, most of our wood products, including newsprint raw materials. This vast disturbance made necessary the most bold and vigorous plans of reorganization. You can have no idea of the expedients we were compelled to adopt at that time to make good these losses.

Now this was a harsh misfortune. But just the same the loss of the raw materials was not fatal to us. For we diverted our demands to other sources of supply. We retrieved the situation at some considerable expense to ourselves in the reorganization of our shipping lines.

But the biggest disaster was our naval losses. Forty-seven warships were sunk in the operation off Norway and Dunkirk. And when the evacuation was over half our destroyer fleet lay awaiting repairs in our shipyards.

Then the Battle of Britain

Hardly had we emerged from this peril when we were called upon to fight the Battle of Britain. And I must tell you that when that struggle began we had in reserve only five fighter aircraft in the storage units.

What did this mean? That if an airplane was lost, but the pilot reached safety, still he could not be used again, for we did not have another mount for him. By improvisation, by invention, by every form of makeshift, we managed to keep the fighting front supplied with aircraft. Every human being worked all-out. There was no need for clocks or other timekeepers during the Battle of Britain.

In the early spring of 1941, we went to the aid of the Greeks. And I do not hesitate to tell you that the British prime minister ordered this expedition in the full knowledge of the sacrifices it would entail. He made the decision because he believed no other course was possible. We were committed to the Greeks, and we fulfilled our promise.

Crete "A Weary Burden"

We were defeated in Greece. Crete was a weary burden and cost us many valuable warships and transports too. Other events followed swiftly and before the year was out the British army had fought major engagements on seven separate fronts in the Middle East.

Two big years for Britain, 1940 and 1941. Victory or defeat? Victory certainly. The German plan of campaign was destroyed. Hard fighting, brave deeds and vast powers of endurance was the record of the British army in two years of battle.

Then came the Japs. They caught us unawares in Malaya and Singapore. We have little to say in defense of our errors. We cannot explain our failures. We can only resolves to profit by our punishment and strive after higher efficiency and greater resource in the days to come.

Now the Cry is "Attack"

But that is the story of the past. Now the day has come when in almost every quarter in Britain the cry goes up, "Attack." Attack in support of Russia." For the passion to set up a western fighting front in aid of the Russians is deep in the hearts of all our people.

We know that the Russians kill more Germans every day than all the Allies put together. We know they destroy more enemy tanks, bring down more enemy planes than any of us or all of us. Russia is the fighting front. That is the opportunity, the chance to bring the Germans to battle.

No Racial Persecution

Ever since a journey to Russia in October last I have been in favor of a second front. The British and American supply missions at that time provided our Ally with aircraft and tanks, and antiaircraft guns, and with antitank guns. And some shortsighted people complained that we did wrong to put weapons in the hands of Communists.

I don't understand the complaint. Communism under Stalin has produced the most valiant fighting army in Europe. Communism under Stalin has provided us with examples of patriotism equal to the finest annals of history. Communism under Stalin has won the applause and admiration of all the western nations. Communism under Stalin has produced the best generals in this war. I was always impressed by Lincoln's answer when Grant was charged with taking too much drink.

Persecution of Christianity? Not so. There is no religious persecution. The church doors are open. And there is complete freedom to practice religion, just as there is complete freedom to reject it.

Racial persecution? Not at all. Jews live like other men. There are many races in the Soviet Union and not even a color bar.

Political urges? Of course. But it is now clear that the men who were shot down would have berayed Russia to her Germany enemy.

Then again, it is said by one of my neighbors: "Don't give any more supplies to the Russians lest they use their weapons against us the next time they change sides."

That is not possible. There is no crossing that river of martyrs' blood. Maybe more than a million men and women have died to save Russia. The peace will come, not from negotiation, but from subjugation. Russia or Germany must be destroyed.

He Believes Stalin

Besides, Stalin has pledged his word to make war and peace with Great Britain and America. He will respect his promise. Stalin accepts the Atlantic Charter.. The President has given us this momentous declaration, and for my part I shall strive for it always, with faith and confidence in his leadership. He will bring us to the fulfillment of the charter. He sure of it. And fulfillment provides that all nations shall dwell in security.

Stalin accepted the Atlantic Charter. He did so in my presence. He expressed no dissent, but entire agreement. He asked many questions, but then he is a curious man. He wants to know all about public men and national aspirations. He asked about our women, too, or rather, I should say, your women. He asked about Lady Astor. She had called on him at the Kremlin a few years ago. So I asked Stalin what did Lady Astor talk about? And he said "the Bible." "What did you talk about," said I. "Churchill," Stalin replied. I knew there was no chance for agreement on either subject on either side.

Stalin the Tactician

Now Stalin has a vast knowledge of war as well as politics. He is a master of tactics and in the end he will defeat the enemy. He is convinced that the best form of defense is to attack. That was his decision at the very moment when the enemy had reached the suburbs of Moscow.

What then? In the midst of disaster, Stalin ordered an attack. Attack everywhere, violently, on every sector of the front.

I believe in the Russian system which holds to the faith that the best form of defense is attack. And I believe that Britain should adopt it by setting up somewhere along the two thousand miles of coastline now held by the Germans, a second front in Western Europe.

Now you may ask what is the reason for my advocacy of help to Russia. Is it due to confidence in a brave people or to the desire to help a hard-pressed comrade? Not at all.

It is the knowledge that Russia may settle the war for us in 1942. By holding the Germans in check, possibly even by defeating them, the Russians may be the means of bringing the whole Axis structure down.

A Chance to End the War

This is a chance, an opportunity to bring the war to an end here and now. But if the Russians are defeated and driven out of the war, never will such a chance come to us again.

Strike out to help Russia. Strike out violently. Strike even recklessly. But in any event such blows that real help will be our share and contribution to the Russian battlefront.

How admirably Britain is now equipped in weapons of war for directing such an attack on Germany, I well know.

The story of the production of arms and weapons of every description during the last two years is a high tribute to the British genius for war.

The task of equipping our army has far exceeded anything that was contemplated when war began. Each division now carries a thousand rounds of ammunition, and consumes two tons of petrol for every mile it travels. A single antiaircraft battery requires three tons of ammunition in one minute's action. Five tons of shipping are needed to keep one soldier overseas.

Our tank production has been doubled in the last six months. And our output of guns of 2-pounder caliber and over exceeds 35,000 a year.

64 Axis Warships Blasted

Our cruisers have been on duty 300 days in the year. Our submarines have sunk or damaged 326 enemy ships, 64 of them warships. And our attacks from sea and air have destroyed 5¼ million tons of merchant shipping, 3 capital ships, 13 cruisers, 53 destroyers and many submarines.

The Royal Air Force and other services have destroyed over 10,000 Axis planes for the loss of under half that number of our own . Last year we sent abroad 9871 airplanes against the 2134 we imported into Britain.

The national output of food and the general mobilization of man power gives every Briton the right to stand before his neighbors with quiet confidence in work well done.

Our ploughmen have turned up six million acres that were not under cultivation before the war. Our dairymen have kept up the milk yield from their farms. And our stockmen have sustained the prewar herds of beasts and sheep.

Some Figures on Labor

There are 33 million people in Great Britain between the ages of 14 and 64. Twenty million have been mobilized for the forces and for vital war work. Women, unless they have young children, are conscripted for industry up to the age of 41. Unmarried women under 30 may be called up for the services. There are already three times as many women in munitions as there were in 1918. Twenty-five thousand women have joined the Women's Land Army.

The people of Britain have made many sacrifices, and without any complaint save only the ancient right to criticize and find fault with their government.

They have adopted black bread for white. They have given up eggs. There is no more beef. Oranges and lemons have been forbidden. There is not even an apple in this 'other Eden, demi-paradise."

Whisky to the Americans

They have accepted a system of food rationing thorough and complete. They have sacrificed sugar to the Russians, whisky to the Americans, corn to the Egyptians, railway engines to the Persians and railings to the tank factories. They have abandoned turn-ups on their trousers and buttons on their cuffs. And don't ask the poor man for a match nor the rich man for a dime, because they have neither.

Britain has arisen at every call to all emergencies. In 1940, the need was for aircraft. And Britain made good. In 1941, it was for tanks. And Britain made good with interest. Now in 1942, it is for shipbuilding.

We should be able to double our output of ships this year. And certainly nothing short of such an increase will satisfy the British public.

Shipping Now the Bottleneck

Seaborne traffic is now the bottleneck. And the need for more ships is far greater than any other requirement.

But don't be misled. Just as the shortage in tanks; just as the crisis today is shortage of ships, so there is still to be faced a final trial, a last test—the shortage of raw materials which followed the Japanese conquests.

The Japs have already seized our sources of supply in the Far East. Now India is threatened and with it the supply routes through the Indian Ocean. Oil and tin and rubber, jute and iron, this is the real objective, the main purpose of the Japanese attack.

Be sure too that the strategy of Germany and Japan is directly pointed at other sources of raw materials—the Caucasus, Persia and Iraq, all oil producers. Thus above all do they hope to subdue the rest of the world to their will.

And unless we can protect these raw materials, and restore our lost treasures then the struggle for victory becomes a struggle for survival.

He Commends Jesse Jones

Alternative sources of supply must be developed forwith. And something more must be done, in Britain and elsewhere. We must look to the programs of substitutes for the raw materials lost to us. The heaviest burdens must rest on your shoulders.

You have seen, for instance, the programs of Mr. Jesse Jones for the manufacture of synthetic rubber. These projects involve a disposition of labor and plant which interferes directly with the production of munitions of war, and in a very big way.

But these plans must be pushed forward. And other programs of a similar nature must be developed here and in Britain.

Here let me say that I do not know how much crude rubber there is in this country today. But this I do know: that there would have been a great deal less if it had not been for Jesse Jones.

Whatever may be the stock pile now, it is a monument to the persistence, tenacity and determination of Jesse Jones, who scooped up every available ton of crude rubber in the Far East. So far as my knowledge goes there was no rubber left when the crash came in any of the ports which the Japanese now occupy. Jesse got it.

We sood aside at the request of Mr. Jones. We cleared out of the market to make way for him. This was something new, but it is easy for us to make concessions to America.

"You Helped Us Over the Hill"

For we owe the United States a deep debt of gratitude. We have relied on you greatly and we have not been disappointed. You have been generous in our times of difficulty. You have been sympathetic when we were greatly troubled. You helped us over the hill.

Of course, I know there is criticism of us and our public men. There is nothing new on that account. Besides, public men should be subjected to criticism. I have drunk deeply of the hemlock cup myself on occasion. Nor do I complain of a system that finds fault and sometimes affixes blame.

But in war we must praise our leaders too. We must give them our faith. We must tell them that Britons and Americans love those who give themselves to their country. And we must assure them that we do not believe they fail us.

Britain Counts On Churchill

Of our own great leader, Mr. Churchill, I read in all the newspapers and I am told here and there, wherever I go, that he will fall before the summer is out. You must help me to kill that bad rumor. Such a disaster we cannot contemplate in Great Britain.

We owe the British prime minister so much. We are grateful to him for all that he has done in the past. And, of course, we can pay him off in coins of gratitude.

But in truth we are not capable of such folly. For it is his service in days to come that we count on.

This man has a heart steeled against all disappointments, proof against all setbacks and disasters. He has the greatness that is born of the spirit. He burns with the flame of passionate conviction.

He makes mistakes—and profits from the errors he commits. He achieves successes—and cares little for the public praise that follows.

He has an intellect keen and receptive, a will strong and unbending. And all his great qualities of heart and mind are geared to one purpose, set toward one goal:

The defeat of our enemies, the punishment of the evil men who threaten the world.

He thinks and acts for nothing else. No thought of compromise ever enters into his head, even in the darkest hours. He is the great crusader of modern times. "Nor shall the sword sleep in his hand."

Churchill is the embodiment of the spirit of Britain today. And if we deny him we deny our very selves. Dogged, grim, undaunted, he summons his people to fresh efforts, to renewed resolutions. And, make no mistake about it, they will answer the summons in the mood in which he makes it.

We give our confidence to Churchill. We place our faith to him. The hour is dark, the way is long. Peace may be far off, but we are sure, we are certain, we are filled with absolute conviction that victory awaits us at the end of our journey.

We Can Win in '42, Beaverbrook Says

fighting front. . . . Communism under Stalin has produced the best generals in this war," Beaverbrook said.

He told the publishers that it was just two years ago that Britain lost everything she possessed except soldiers and that they had had to begin all over again.

"Guns we lost in thousands, vehicles by 50,000. Almost all our tanks, and many airplanes," he said.

"And remember too that many valuable and essential raw materials were cut off when our sources of supply fell under the power of Germany. Three-quarters of our imports of iron and steel, all the raw materials of our aluminum output, most of our wood products, including newsprint raw materials."

In elaborating upon his advocacy of the Russian system of attack, Beaverbrook told the editors that it was his opinion that " . . . Britain should adopt it (the Russian attack idea) by setting up somewhere along the 2000 miles of coastline now held by the Germans, a second front in western Europe. . . . "

The associations resolution to President Roosevelt pledged "our individual and unswerving support to our Commander in Chief in this hour of national crisis and our willingness as individuals to share in all responsibility which American citizenship imposed upon us to the end that victory shall be achieved and free men shall be forever free."

After the closed meeting in which censorship, transportation of freight vital to the newspaper industry and other such administrative matters were discussed, the A. N. P. A. reelected Walter M. Dear, general manager of the Jersey City (N. J.) Journal, as president, and reelected other officers and directors with but a few changes.

The publishers named Linwood I. Noyes of the Ironwood (Mich.) Daily Globe vice president; Norman Chandler of the Los Angeles Times secretary, and W. G. Chandler of the Scripps-Howard newspapers, treasurer.

New Chop Versions Add Zest to Menus

Butterfly pork chops, as shown at left, are not only delicious but also a very attractive food. They are made from the pork loin boned, then cut into double slices, which when opened out make the kind shown. Lamb chops, green peas and French fried potatoes are shown at left in brand new guise. The peas are served in little cups which are formed of potato slices, potatoes are shown at right in deep fat

PLATTER CHATTER

Chops Emerge in New Guises With Appealing Companion Foods In Winning Menus of Contestants

PERHAPS it seems a bit incongruous to plan a meal around chops, with the prevailing prices. But a delightful meal can be built around chops and extenders like stuffing, apples, grilled tomatoes and baked potatoes to put them within the housekeeping allowances.

If you want to add to your cooking repertory in the chop domain, the suggestions of the winners of The Post recipe contest this month will fill the bill adequately. Try their suggestions, for they lift the familiar chops to a new level of excellence.

Mrs. Albert Day, 4831 Auburn Avenue, Bethesda, Md., winner of the first prize of $3, bakes pork chops with fruit and honey to make them the stellar dish on a well-balanced menu. Her winning menu and recipe for preparing the chops follow:

Thrift Dinner

Tomato Juice Cocktail
Pork Chops Baked With Fruit
Buttered Asparagus Vegetable Salad
Corn Muffins
Cherry Wine Gelatin Coffee

The following pork-chop dish as suggested by Mrs. Day is one that is delicious enough to be served to important guests or family:

Pork Chops Baked With Fruit—Scrub 4 small potatoes, cover with boiling water and boil 12 minutes, then peel. Dust 4 large pork chops with salt and pepper. Then dip them in beaten egg to which has been added quarter cup water or milk. Cover with fine dried bread, cracker or shredded wheat crumbs. Rub a pan or fireproof baking platter with meat drippings. In it arrange the chops and sweet potatoes; on each chop place a half slice of pineapple and a half slice of red apple which has been cored but not peeled. Put a teaspoonful of honey over each apple and dot with butter. Pour in boiling water to barely cover bottom of platter. Bake in 375-degree oven until all ingredients are well browned. Allow about 35 minutes. Serves four.

The second prize of $2 is won by Mrs. Andrew V. Barsick, 1647 Lamont Street Northwest, with her appealing menu highlighting pan-cooked veal chops in a tomato-green pepper sauce. From her suggestion for fresh grapefruit juice to the mock cheese torte void of sugar, you will find the menu that follows quite refreshing.

Dinner Menu

Fresh Grapefruit Juice
Veal Chops in Sauce
Baked Yams Spinach
Lettuce Salad Popovers
Mock Cheese Torte Coffee

Veal Chops in Tomato-Green Pepper Sauce—Select meaty chops of veal and sear them—both sides in a hot skillet. Then salt, and add hot bacon-grease drippings of one-half of six slices of well-done bacon. The balance of the drippings, plus the bacon, will be placed in th eoven for warming up when the yams are being baked. Cook the chops in this bacon grease—under a low flame—for 15 minutes. Then add a mixture of finely chopped garlic and one diced pepper, together with one can of undiluted tomato soup. Keep this on a low flame for about half an hour and then turn down to a simmer. This should be simmered for about 1½ hours, which will result in a heavy sauce that is delicious and well-cooked chops.

Mrs. Grace F. Hiehle, 3422 South Dakota Avenue Northeast, wins a $1 prize with a menu which includes a lamb-chop special and a honey-date-rice pudding which qualifies the menu for the sugarless dessert. Her menu follows:

Dinner Menu

Pineapple Juice Cocktail
New Orleans Lamb Chop Special
Fresh Green Peas
Watercress Salad Mustard Dressing
Cloverleaf Rolls Butter
Honey-Date-Rice Pudding Coffee

Loin lamb chops are the choice of Mrs. Hiehle for making her chop special. The following is her recipe:

New Orleans Lamb Chop Special—Brown 4 loin lamb chops, cut 1 inch thick, on both sides, using butter or other fat. Add 3 cups milk, 8 small whole onions, peeled; 8 small potatoes and salt and pepper to taste. Cover the skillet and simmer over low heat for 30 minutes or until the potatoes are done. Chops and onions will be cooked when potatoes are tender. Arrange chops in center of platter, then onions and potatoes around the chops, then a border of cooked carrot slivers. Thicken gravy with flour which has been mixed smooth with a little water. Add 1 tablespoon horseradish and then pour the gravy over chops and vegetables. Sprinkle generously with chopped parsley or chives. Serve very hot.

Mrs. Anna Canalle, New Market, Va., winner of a $1 prize, bakes pork chops with dried lima beans to make a nutritious main dish. Her menu follows:

Dinner Menu

Fruit Cup
Baked Pork Chops with Lima Beans
Steamed New Cabbage
Corn and Celery Cabbage
Rolls Butter
Apple Butter Pie Coffee

The following is Mrs. Canalle's winning chop recipe:

Baked Pork Chops and Lima Beans—Soak 1 pound lima beans overnight and drain off liquid. Fry 6 pork chops lightly, browning on both sides. Place the beans and pork chops in alternate layers in baking dish, adding 1 sliced onion, 2 tablespoons molasses, 2 tablespoons tomato catsup, pepper and salt to taste and a clove of garlic if desired. Bake in a moderate oven for 1½ hours, adding water if necessary.

Mrs. Elizabeth Sutley, 4065 Grant Street Northeast — Pork Chops and Noodles.

Mrs. F. H. Shirk, 313 Wayne Street, Arlington, Va.—Baked Veal Chops.

Mrs. Lawrence B. Tyston, the Wakefield, Building B, 724 South St. Asaph Street, Alexandria, Va.—Pork Chop Casserole.

Mrs. Louis Harris, 216 Spruce Avenue, Takoma Park, Md.—Veal Chops in Casserole with Chicken Soup.

Mrs. W. Bridges, 6817 Georgia Avenue Northwest — Dutch Oven Pork Chops.

Mrs. Pauline T. Crow, 1910 T Street Southeast—Pork Chops with Apple Stuffing.

Buy Whole Ham

Go "whole-hog" when buying ham. True economy for small families lies in buying a whole ham. Divided into three parts by your meat dealer, it supplies butt end for baking, shank for simmering, center slices for broiling. Whole hams cost less per pound than ham bought by the slice.

Recipe Contest

THEME—Fresh Fruit Desserts. Fruit, both raw and cooked, makes delicious desserts. How do you use fresh fruit to make a dessert, lovely to look at, delicious to eat. Consideration should be given to the amount of sugar contained in recipe.

QUALIFICATION—Recipe must not be taken from service cookbooks. All recipes must be kitchen-tested, practical, carefully written, exact and level measurements and number of servings given. Only one entry may be submitted by a person. All entries must be signed in longhand (they will be disqualified if name is typewritten).

PRIZES—First, $3; second, $2; ten $1 prizes.

Mail entries to Martha Ellyn, The Post Food Editor.

Good Food, Rich in Vitamins, Is Antidote for Spring Fever

Feeling lazy? Lost your interest in food? Then maybe you've got spring fever. Grandma's remedy for it was a bitter brown tonic. Today the prescription is good food, rich in vitamins and minerals and all the other things essential to abounding health.

Of course, it may be iron that you're missing in your daily meals. If so, remember that spinach and liver, prunes, bran and molasses are all good sources of this precious element. Combine the last two in all-bran molasses muffins and you have a pick-me-up that's delightful to take. Here's the recipe:

All-Bran Molasses Muffins

Add 2 cups all-bran to ½ cup light molasses and 1½ cups milk, and allow to soak for 15 minutes. Beat 1 egg and add to first mixture. Sift flour to 1 cupful. Add ½ teaspoon salt and 1 teaspoon soda and sift again. Combine with the all-bran mixture. Fill greased muffin pans two-thirds full and bake in moderately hot oven, 400 degrees, about 20 minutes. Yield: 15 muffins, 2¾ inches in diameter.

No matter how good the rest of the meal happens to be, if the dessert is dull, flat and uninspired, the dinner will never win an A-1 rating.

April is a rather difficult month for desserts. Last summer's preserves are dwindling. Fresh fruits still are not plentiful. Worse yet, appetites are not always up to scratch after the winter months. Thus, it takes real planning and thought to deliver desserts from the doldrums.

The following recipe for rhubarb crisp gives a new texture and new taste appeal that produces a dessert to bring a meal to a close in fine style:

Rhubarb Crisp—Blend ½ cup butter and ½ cup sugar thoroughly; add 2 eggs and beat well. Stir in ½ teaspoon nutmeg, ½ teaspoon flavoring, 1½ cups small toasted bread cubes and 2 cups corn flakes. Place half of the mixture in buttered baking dish; arrange 4 cups diced fresh rhubarb evenly over the top and sprinkle with ½ cup sugar; cover with remaining creamed mixture. Bake in moderate oven, 375 degrees, about 35 minutes or until rhubarb is done. Yield: Eight servings.

Contest Runners-up

Mrs. Charles W. Wheeler, 1646 Thirty-third Street Northwest—Breaded veal chops.

Mrs. Effie M. Cockrill, Colvin Run, Va.—Stuffed pork chops.

Mrs. David Thomson, 106 W. Cypress Street, Chevy Chase, Md.—Creole pork chops.

Mrs. M. Hook, 313 Douglas Street Northeast—Stuffed pork chops.

Mrs. Jay Lawlor, 1627 Thirty-fifth Street Northwest—Lamb chops with mint sauce.

Mrs. Andrew Weaver, 3915 Fifth Street Northwest—Butterfly pork chops.

Mrs. H. Trendley Dean, 224 N. Jackson Street, Arlington, Va.—Boston pork chops.

Mrs. Mary G. Ireland, 9627 Lawndale Drive, Silver Spring, Md.—Lamb oven grill.

Mrs. B. C. Philips, 631 Allison Street Northwest—Broiled pork chops.

Mrs. George T. Glorius, 2606 Twenty-fourth Street Northeast—Sausage stuffed lamb chops.

Mrs. Eugenia D'Camera, 1843 Burke Street Northeast—Stuffed pork chop platter.

Bacon Drippings

Hold on to those bacon drippings! Clarify and use this rich fat for pastry shortening, and for cakes or cookies flavored with molasses. It's a bit too definite in personality, though, for more delicately flavored products.

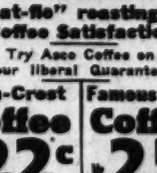
French Omelet Will Camouflage The Leftovers

Do you ever make a French omelet? It's a dish that's a master at camouflaging a bit of left-over meat, a cup of cooked vegetables or a little cheese inside a neatly rolled blanket of eggs.

First you allow at least one egg, preferably two for each person. Whip slightly with a fork, adding 1 tablespoon water or milk for each egg used. Add salt and pepper. Select a heavy fry pan of large size so that the egg mixture will spread out to ¼ inch thickness. Melt 1 tablespoon of unsalted fat in pan and heat. Pour in eggs. Keep heat low and move pan so that the omelet cooks evenly. Lift side of omelet a little with a spatula occasionally, to prevent burning and to let the uncooked egg touch the pan. A cover may be used for a minute or so to completely cook the top. Caution, do not overcook.

When eggs are set, spread with filling and have hot platter ready. With spatula, start to roll omelet at side of pan near handle. Tilt pan and roll omelet onto platter. Serve at once.

Grated sharp cheese is excellent for filling. Diced crisp bacon, ground cooked ham, creamed dried beef, diced browned liver, or shredded cooked chicken also make good fillings. For vegetable omelets, finely hashed browned potatoes rank first. Also good are creamed asparagus tips, celery or peas.



Betty Crocker suggests:

A JINGLE, oft repeated, that tells children the correct way to eat their soup—

Little ships put out to sea,
I dip my spoon away from me.

Pointers help! We also tell the young fry to sip the soup noiselessly from the side of the spoon. Never to fill the spoon more than three-quarters full. If the soup is thick with rice or noodles or vegetables, take it from the tip of the spoon.

● Of course it's hard to concentrate on manners, when the soup is so good! I'm thinking of soup made with our new product, called Betty Crocker Vegetable-Noodle Soup Ingredients. Here's "soup in a package"—the dry ingredients 99% ready to cook.

EASY ON MOTHER! You just empty the contents of the package into boiling water, add butter, and simmer. The hard work is all done.

● In the package are rich nourishing egg noodles, tasty seasonings, and seven choice vegetables in flake form: tomatoes, carrots, onions, spinach, parsley, sweet bell peppers, celery. The vegetables are not pre-cooked. They're "dehydrated" (moisture removed to preserve garden fresh flavors). You cook the vegetables for the first time yourself. My staff and I promise you truly delicious soup!

● THRIFTY, TOO! Each package makes six large bowls of soup. Twice as much as you get from the average size can. Won't you try our new product?

Jap Ships Vanish From Indian Ocean

London (Friday) April 24 (INS).—Japanese naval units which have been operating in the Indian Ocean probably have been withdrawn to Singapore, a dispatch to the Daily Mail from Colombo, Ceylon, said today. No Japanese warships have been sighted in the area for the last two weeks, the dispatch said.

Reports from Madras, the State on the southeast tip of India, said government offices which had been transferred to the interior from the coastal areas, were being returned "as immediate threats of Japanese attack" had disappeared.

Victory Sidelights

Tire, Gas Ration May Force End of 18-Hour Parking Ban

Tire and gas rationing may cause the Commissioners to suspend the 18-hour parking limit, it was announced yesterday.

Commissioner John Russell Young has instructed Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech to consult with the Traffic Advisory Council and traffic officials for recommendations on what steps should be taken to relieve motorists who have not been able to find off-street parking space in the overcrowded city who cannot drive their cars because of war-induced shortages—but who may not legally leave them on the street in one place more than 18 hours.

Young suggested that there may be three alternative moves—to suspend or modify the ruling for the duration, to ignore the existing rule, or to notify policemen not to enforce it.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer reported that there was ample room for off-street parking in many sections of the city, but agreed that there are many residential and business areas where garage facilities were inadequate.

Reasons for the 18-hour rule were held to be sound in normal times. It helps police trace missing cars, it relieves traffic congestion and facilitates street cleaning.

However, because the District has not in the past been sufficiently forceful in developing off-street parking, it is claimed that to require people to bear the cost of it now would be "unreasonable."

Dr. Langdon to Speak On Child Care Tour

Dr. Grace Langdon, director of family life of the WPA, will speak on a recent eight weeks' tour of defense and industrial areas and her observations of child care in those areas today at 8 p. m. at a meeting in the auditorium of the old Interior Building.

Sponsored by the American Women's Volunteer Services, the meeting will proceed with a panel discussion on the need for day car of children during wartime.

Red Cross Leaders Will Meet Today

Problems in recruiting and training Red Cross nurses' aides will be attacked by representatives of 19 Red Cross chapters from Washington, Virginia and Maryland at a regional conference today at the Lee Sheraton Hotel.

Mrs. Walter Lippmann, national chairman of the Nurses Aid Corps, will address a luncheon session of the conference, which will open at 10 a. m. and continue until 3 p. m.

Chapters invited to join the District Chapter in the conference are Albemarle County, Winchester, Frederick County, Clarke County, Richmond, Alexandria, Augusta County, Petersburg, Warren County, Chesterfield County, Fredericksburg, Lynchburg and Roanoke County in Virginia, and Baltimore, Wicomico County, Montgomery County, Talbot County, Annapolis, Anne Arundel County, Delaware and Washington County in Maryland.

Van Hyning Speaker At Council Meeting

The part social agencies will play in mobilizing the Nation's resources in war time was outlined last night by Conrad Van Hyning, chairman of the Board of Public Welfare and chief of the Division of Civilian Mobilization of Defense, Health and Welfare Services. He spoke at the annual meeting of the Neighborhood Councils held at the Y. W. C. A.

Dr. Robert Eaves, principal of the Thomson School, presided.

Hamilton Bank Joins Bond Plan

Officers and employes of the Hamilton National Bank yesterday inaugurated a voluntary deduction plan for purchase of war savings stamps and bonds. Pledges indicating purchases of approximately four per cent of the payroll were made.

The meeting was called by President E. C. Graham after the plan was initiated by E. C. Halbach, president of the Hamilton Bank Club.

It was pointed out that already 14 members of the bank are in the Nation's armed forces and next month John H. Schooley, assistant manager of the Pennsylvania Avenue branch, will enter the service. The club presented Schooley with a briefcase.

Racial Barriers Gone With War, Willkie Asserts

Rochester, N. Y., April 23 (U.P.)—Wendell Willkie, 1940 Republican Presidential candidate, asserted tonight in a speech at Rochester University that the struggles of the Filipinos and Chinese in their fight for freedom have shown the world the "real equality between races" which he described as "the only sure hope of the future."

Asserting that the United States must begin now to prepare itself for the creation of a post-war world where all peoples can live in freedom and peace, Willkie warned that "the day is gone when men and women, of whatever color or creed, can consider themselves the superiors of other creeds or colors.

"The day of vast empire is past," Willkie said. "The day of equal peoples is at hand."

Police Cleared In Gun Killing

Two Metropolitan policemen who shot and killed a Negro gunman April 6 were exonerated by a coroner's jury yesterday when a verdict of justifiable homicide was returned after an inquest.

Private Myrl T. Clark, 37, and Norman Gray, 31, of the Fourth Precinct, fired on Thomas L. Davis, Negro, 36, of 309 F Street Southwest, after the latter had shot Clark. Davis was killed.

The shooting occurred at Fourth and E Streets Southwest, when the policemen approached Davis who was brandishing a revolver. Clark, who suffered two wounds, had fully recovered yesterday.

Magazine Writer Weds Junior Miss

PATRICIA PEARDON, 18, star of the Broadway play, "Junior Miss," whose marriage to Murray Kalischer, jr., 27, magazine writer, was disclosed yesterday by her mother, Mrs. R. C. Peardon, who expressed disapproval of the marriage. "We definitely tried to dissuade her from marrying and as soon as she had reached marriageable age she went ahead anyway," she said. The actress was 18 Tuesday

Club Considers Withdrawing Removal Request

Withdrawal of a resolution asking the removal of Mrs. Sarah V. Montgomery from office as a volunteer worker in the Chief Air Raid Warden's headquarters was reported to have been considered at an executive meeting of the District Federation of Women's Clubs yesterday.

Reporters were barred from the session, but it was understood in advance that the Montgomery case was to be reviewed at that time. No official announcement of the federation's decision has been made.

The federation requested the removal of Mrs. Montgomery in February when it was discovered that she was working in the office of Chief Air Raid Warden Clement Murphy. Mrs. Montgomery had led a picket line of the World Peace Mobilization in front of the White House last summer. The line was withdrawn the day before Germany declared war on Russia.

Arizona Society's $25 Sends Plasma Funds to $5282

Still growing although the fourth annual campaign is officially ended, the Children's Hospital blood and plasma bank fund stood at $5282 yesterday.

One of the latest contributions was $25 from the Arizona State Society. The 1942 blood bank drive was sponsored by the Washington Bridge League, American Legion and The Post, its purpose to maintain for another year the Children's Hospital service by which blood, plasma and serums are kept available at all times.

Enriched Washington FLOUR

Plain and Self-Rising

Dr. W. H. Sebrell, Jr., of the United States Public Health Service says this very significant thing:

"Everybody who has not changed from plain white flour to ENRICHED white flour should do so at once as a patriotic duty. Do not accept ANY white flour that does not have ENRICHED on the label."

So Enriched Washington Flour—both Plain and Self-Rising—is now supercharged with the Vital Food Elements recommended by the Government for better health defense.

ENRICHED Plain Washington Flour for all purposes. ENRICHED Self-Rising Washington Flour for biscuits, waffles, shortcakes, etc.—made WITHOUT BAKING POWDER.

Buy this Flour that's guaranteed to give better satisfaction than any other Flour you have ever used or MONEY REFUNDED.

ALL grocers, delicatessens, markets and chain stores sell both ENRICHED Plain Washington Flour and ENRICHED Self-Rising Washington Flour.

Fear of Too Skimpy Skirts Allayed

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor.

WILL skirts be too skimpy? This question seems to have aroused a great deal of anxiety since the War Production Board's regulations have been announced. Above, Stanley Marcus, apparel section chief, demonstrates the answer to this question, setting at rest any fear that skirts will be too narrow or uncomfortable. Although limited to 78 inches wide for a size 16, skirts will still have plenty of width.

The peacetime fashion (left) uses 6¾ yards of material, while the wartime model (right) uses only 4¾ yards with the regulation skirt—which is by no means skimpy. Before making a decision on skirt widths, WPB measured women's skirts in 25 leading cities throughout the country. It was found that the average woman has been wearing skirts much narrower than the prescribed width.

As a matter of fact, every size stipulation takes its average from the mean, rather than the extreme. If you are accustomed to wearing clothes that fit, you will find very little change in the silhouette. Mr. Marcus even believes the new styles will (or should) look all right on girls without girdles.

Other questions about new styles that have troubled many women have been answered by the following catechism, prepared by the New York Dress Institute.

Q. Is it true that there will be no more evening gowns?

A. Decidedly not. Evening dresses will continue to be made and will be as feminine and appealing as ever. Although there may be an economy of material, there will be no economy in beauty.

Q. Will dresses be standardized, or will there be variation in style?

A. There will be wide variety in style. The Government has no desire to dress the women of our country in a uniform. On the contrary, it recognizes fashion as an important aid in building morale and permits designers to create different styles to their hearts' content, so long as they do not use more material than has been allowed.

Q. Will skirts be shorter?

A. No. Skirts will not be shorter than they are now. A dress made according to the regulations in size 16 may be 43 inches long. Other sizes have proportionate lengths, which means that skirts as they are now will be the right length for the duration.

Q. Are sleeves affected by the regulations?

A. Yes. Dolman, balloon or leg-of-mutton sleeves are definitely out. Sleeves on dresses will continue to be comfortable, but they will be slim in line and will not have French cuffs.

Q. Will bridal gowns be changed from their traditional style?

A. No. Bridal gowns are exempt from the curtailments. They will be as romantic as ever.

Q. Will dresses still have pleats, shirring and tucking?

A. Yes, if the total amount of material used does not exceed the limit. There probably won't be as many pleats as we have known them, but there will be new and interesting treatments of them.

Making the Most Of Your Rooms

In the good old days when houses began with 11 rooms and worked up, there was space for rooms devoted to just one part of daily life—music rooms, dining rooms and such. Today each room must serve a purpose all the day through.

This has been managed in a charming and unusual way in Bonita Granville's house. One room has a double north window, a huge curved bow window in the southwest corner. The north end of the room is a dining room, furnished with the conventional table, chairs and sideboard, the chairs upholstered in cool green leather. North windows are flanked with pots of growing ivy. But the south end of the room is a sunroom, the windows made with deep window seats upholstered in dark red leather, with occasional chairs to match.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Despite Warnings of Intimates, Thrifty Girl Married Penniless Man After Whirlwind Romance; He Has Beggared and Reviled Her Ever Since

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Two years ago I married my husband after a whirlwind courtship. Before we met I had been going with a young chap in my own community, who was greatly admired and respected. I didn't love him enough to marry him, but just before I got married he told me he would always love me and asked me to come back to him, in case my marriage proved a mistake. (My family and friends had felt it would turn out badly).

I came to Washington with my husband, knowing he hadn't a cent in the world, but full of hope and self confidence. My parents are dead, but my brothers sent me a few hundred dollars which, added to my small savings, gave us enough to get started on. My husband soon told me he owed "a little money." Since I don't believe in debts, I gave him $100 to pay his debts; gambling debts, by the way. In return, he promised never to gamble again. Soon afterward he told me he still owed a balance of $500 on debts accumulated before marriage. He wanted me to apply the little money I had on those debts. I refused. I told him I would get a job (which I did) and help that way; but the little money I had in reserve should stay where it was, for emergencies.

During all of our marriage, he has never given me a cent. He has always claimed to be broke, because paying off debts. Soon after pay day he would be borrowing from me. Every time I mentioned money, we got into fierce arguments; and since I love peace, I decided to avoid the subject and humor his whims. He is terribly hot tempered. However, all of our friends think we are happily married and envy us for having so much. You see, our combined salaries yield an income larger than most of them have; and since I have always hushed up all arguments, they don't know the truth. We just can't get together, financially. He doesn't care how much he owes and he will borrow from Peter to pay Paul, whereas I can't sleep when I know I owe money. I have gone without decent clothes and done the housework at night, just to save money. But it appears that the harder I work and the more money I save, the less we have.

Here is the latest problem confronting me: My husband has just been offered a very good position with another Government agency but can't get a release until he repays the Credit Union $150 he owes. I don't have the amount, as I am recovering from an illness that took most of my savings. However, I do have $75 and I am doubtful whether I should let him have it. In a fit of anger he told me he didn't want me or my "lousy money;" that he would borrow the full amount from another girl who is interested in him, and that with his increase in salary he would never need my help again. Apparently the girl refused him the money, because he came back to me that night and asked me again for all I had.

When I told him I couldn't give him the money, as I felt he would only get in debt again, he ordered me to get out of his house and return to my brothers. He said he refused to support me unless I gave him the money. I don't want to go to my brothers, as they have problems of their own; and besides, I hate to admit defeat to my friends. Furthermore, I am not well, and my doctor seems to think I may be pregnant. He is not sure yet and I am to report back to him in a month. He told me to get as much rest as possible, due to my condition. My husband doesn't know of this, which is an added reason for saying money.

What shall I do—leave him? Or stay and give him the last of my money? I love him very much and would be miserable without him. I need your help. I have nowhere to turn. Perhaps you can say something that will make me want to live instead of wishing every hour of the day that I were dead. Sincerely,

WORRIED WIFE.

A Strong Offensive Is the Best Defense

DEAR W. W.: In my opinion, every dollar you give this man is just that much more money thrown away, so far as you are concerned. You need never expect to recover either the lump sum or any dividends thereon. It seems to me, indeed, that any sincere counselor with a realistic understanding of the "seamy side" of human nature must, in truthfulness, stress the impossibility of your achieving a tolerable marriage with him, no matter how many sacrificial concessions you might make.

The only way you can hope to recover an interest in living,—and you may as well face it,—is by leaving him, thus taking the first step toward undoing a rash mistake. And don't let either false pride or wishful thinking detain you from doing so. If you feel that you cannot stand on your own feet here, apart from him, get in touch with your brothers and ask them to tide you through the emergency measure of starting life over again in your home community. Go back there and hold your head high, consistently avoiding any discussion of the "break up" with curious acquaintances, while pushing through plans to become self sufficing once more.

Meantime, hang on to the $75 you have in reserve. Let your husband rage and threaten and plead as he will; but stand your ground in refusing to be highjacked out of this last remnant of financial security—which alone makes possible for you a self-respecting exit from a degrading relationship that has been characterized by futile and sordid haggling throughout. Bear in mind what all good strategists know, namely: A strong offensive is the best defense.

When you have conclusively demonstrated your willingness and ability to shift for yourself—snapping your fingers at his threats of nonsupport—your husband undoubtedly will fall all over himself running after you, bleating glittering promises of reform galore. Then he will think in terms of it's being a pleasure to give you support, in return for your companionship. But I guarantee such promises, while well intentioned, will come to naught. He is too far gone in vicious self-indulgence to be a fit mate for any woman save one who is as shamelessly greedy as he. M. H.

Parents, You're Wanted At Meeting Tonight!

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: A tremendous amount of skilled "woman power" could be recruited to the national war effort in Washington almost overnight, if provision could be made, on a community-wide scale for proper day care of young children of war-worker mothers, Mrs. Henry Chandler, of the Council of Social Agencies, recently supervised a study of data on this subject—data based largely on the cases of 500 Washington women, who are either working or want to work, for the Government, and who spontaneously asked help in solving the problem of "How to do right by the children."

To provide a concrete answer to that pertinent question a town meeting to discuss "Wartime Care for Children," has been called for tonight, Friday, April 24, at 8 o'clock, in the Old Interior Building at Nineteenth and F Streets Northwest. Every person who has a "stake" in the question—and what parent hasn't?—is invited to come and present suggestions.

Dr. Grace Langdon, director of the family life program of the WPA will be principal speaker at the meeting, which is sponsored by the Emergency Committee for Day Care of Young Children. Other speakers will include: Miss Alice Mendham, chairman of the Emergency Committee; Dr. Charles Kofer of George Washington University, Mrs. Frank Linzel, chairman of the child care and protection division of the local OCD, and Mrs. Chandler.

Your cooperation in calling this meeting to the attention of your readers will be much appreciated, and should give impetus to the solution of a question that has a vital bearing on the life of our community and Nation alike. Sincerely,

COMMITTEE SPOKESMAN.

Learn Typing

GOOD TYPISTS also are among the luckier groups today! War industry absorbs thousands, leaving openings everywhere. If you want a job, learn to type well.

We mean really well—know the touch system and the rules for typing English. You can teach yourself with our keyboard chart and instruction booklet.

If you attempt to get by with a hit-and-miss system you're shown up badly in the typing test your employer gives you.

An off-center head is one giveaway. To center properly, first set the typewriter carriage at the center of the page and backspace for every other letter or space in the head then do the typing.

In underscoring, don't underscore spaces, too—as in our picture—but underscore letters only.

Send 15 cents (plus 1 cent to cover cost of mailing) for our booklet, "Touch Typewriting Self-taught," to the NEW YORK OFFICE of The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

In kindness I'm their debtor;
But if they'd vote and worship as I do
I'd like them so much better.

Today's Social Notes

(From the Truthtown Torch)

Col. Whiffington Mollusk, of Adamtown, has called a meeting of the surviving members of the once fashionable Coaching Club with a view to aiding the traffic situation. Col. Mollusk still has his coach, which he is volunteering for traffic service in event private limousines are requisitioned by the Government.

Col. Mollusk

Believing it would be embarrassing for dowagers and matrons of established social position to ride on "common carriers," Col. Mollusk thinks he and other members of the Coaching Club might establish an exclusive coaching service to transport Adamtown socialites to teas and on shopping expeditions.

"Although I am past 80," said Col. Mollusk yesterday, "I want to do my bit in winning this war."

Mrs. Farthingale Midas will hold a luncheon tomorrow, two cocktail parties Monday, a tea and a buffet party Tuesday and a hobby exhibit Wednesday preparatory to a fund drive for the benefit of the Ladies' Parachute Patrol.

Changed World

Mrs. Sinbad Smith-Smythe, Truth's ace hostess, is making a personal sacrifice in the interest of wartime activity. She is abandoning her personal marketing to do war work.

Mrs. Smith-Smythe

Heretofore Mrs. Smith-Smythe noted for her faultless cuisine, has always, before giving a dinner, had her chauffeur drive her to the Uppercrusters Market to oversee personally the purchasing of her food supplies. Now, since she is giving her mornings to war work, she has intrusted that task to her butler.

"It is just one of those old-time personal customs that many of us are surrendering to the world of tomorrow," explained Mrs. Smith-Smythe.

Continued Story

Mr. and Mrs. Sebastian Waffle announce the engagement of their daughter, Gwendolyn Amoretta, to Mr. Fairweather Zinnia 8th, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fairweather Zinnia 3d.

Miss Waffle, who spent half a term at Miss Snoot's school, comes from the celebrated Waffle family, which stems back to the Emperor Charlemagne and through him to Adam, first member of the landed gentry to settle in the Garden of Eden.

The Waffle family came into Western Europe with one of the earlier Aryan migrations and several of Miss Waffle's ancestors went to England with William the Conqueror. The first Waffle settlements were made in America by three Waffle brothers (all titled), one of whom went north, one south, and one settled in Virginia. Miss Waffle's father is a direct descendant of Col. Agememnon Waffle, one of the numerous reported aides of George Washington. Her great-grandfather, Col. Ezekiel Waffle, was one of the many reported aides of Gen. Robert E. Lee. Her grandfathe, Hezekiah Waffle was a noted politician and horse lover and her father is a noted society herb culturist.

(Owing to lack of space the ancestry of Miss Waffle on her mother's side is postponed to the next issue of the Torch.)

Among the Joiners

Mrs. Leander Redingote is organizing a new society to consist of past parliamentarians of the Council of Honorary Presidents of the Past Presidents' Round table.

The Yearners' Club will entertain at a tea tomorrow, honoring local hostesses, authoresses, sculpturesses, paintresses, actresses and art literature and music loveresses.

Corn Flakes Used in Omelet

Eat your egg a day in a delicious omelet made with corn flakes and eggs. Serve piping hot with broiled bacon and tart jelly. Follow these directions:

Beat 4 egg whites and yolks separately. To the yolks add ½ teaspoon salt and ⅛ teaspoon pepper and 3 tablespoons water. Beat well, then fold in egg whites and about 4 cups corn flakes. Cook the omelet on both sides until golden brown.

Budget Bread, Butter, Dessert, Lose One Pound Each Week

By Ida Jean Kain

HOW would you like to lose a pound every Thursday? You can—and you don't have to go caloric cuckoo or vitamin mad. All you do is take the three foods you are prone to overeat and put them on a budget. The three foods are liable to be bread, butter and dessert.

That isn't to say bread is fattening. It isn't. It's just the slices that are extra calories that make your diet too high in starch. One one-half inch slice of bread—whole wheat, white or enriched—is just 75 calories. You can have four such slices a day on a low calorie diet and still be a pound lighter next Thursday. Butter is pure fat, but you can have butter, too. One pat of butter, one-half inch thick, counts 100 calories. Measured by the tablespoon the count is the same. So slice it half as thick and take only one-fourth pat with each meal and all you get is a neat 50 calories. Since soft butter spreads farther, slice it and take it out of the refrigerator before meals.

Don't Tempt Self

You can have your bread whenever you like it, for breakfast, lunch or dinner. You might like two slices for breakfast and another couple for a sandwich at noon, and none for dinner. Then you can have your regular dinner—a generous serving of lean meat (always trim off the fat part of the meat and keep your portion lean), a potato, a green vegetable, another vegetable, relishes, salad, and a fruit. But don't have anything for dessert except fresh fruit. Enjoy your dinner, but don't sit at the table afterwards and tempt yourself to eat more. Get up and walk resolutely to another room. If you smoke, have a cigarettte. Some folks say there's nothing like it to put a period to a low caloric dinner.

This is such a simple plan that you can hardly believe you will lose a pound a week on it. But figures prove you can. If you count desserts at 350 calories, bread at the usual 75 calories per slice, and butter at the average 100 calories per pat, and then leave out of your menus one dessert, two slices of bread and half the butter, you escape 650 calories a day. Multiply that by seven and you get a minus 4550 calories for the week, or slightly more than it takes to lose a pound. There are 4320 extra calories in a pound of fat. But the principle works just as well in reverse. That many calories less than you need will let you subtract a pound of fat.

Eat Fewer Sweets

Neither bread and buttter nor desserts can make you fat unless they are in excess of your food needs. If these are not the foods you eat too much of, search out the ones that do add up to too many calories. They are almost sure to be concentrated sweets, starches or fats. Certainly these are the best ones to cut down on, for that leaves ample calories to include the protective foods that build strength as you lose weight.

Give the plan a try for a couple of weeks, without cheating. Don't weigh until next Thursday. You'll lose by then.

Mrs. Rand Is Married In Hungarian Ceremony

Ceremony Takes Place in New York After Postponement Due to Bride's Illness

By Patricia Grady

Making headlines for the umpteenth time since her spectacular debut to New York society 15 years ago is Mrs. Eleanor Close Sturgis Gautier Rand—now Habe-Bekessy—whose marriage to the well-known anti-Nazi writer, Hans Habe-Bekessy, is announced by her mother and stepfather, Mr. and Mrs. Josepn E. Davies.

The ceremony which united the beautiful stepdaughter of former United States Ambassador to Russia and Belgium, Joseph E. Davies, and the Hungarian author took place Wednesday in the First Magyar Presbyterian Church in New York. A simple ceremony, the Rev. Laszlo de Harsanyi officiated in the Hungarian language. Scheduled to take place March 28, the wedding was postponed because of the illness of the bride, who spent the time of her convalescence in Palm Beach, Fla., at the home of her stepfather.

The former Mrs. Rand had society in an uproar in 1930 when she eloped with Playwright Preston Sturgis, and caused even more excitement when she had the marriage annulled two years later. Her next marriage was to Etienne Robert Gautier, a French polo player, whom she divorced a year later. Her third marriage, to George Rand, whom she divorced in 1938, lasted almost four years.

The bride is the daughter of Edward Bennett Close, who recently returned from France and is now connected with the American Red Cross in Washington. For many years he served on the board of the American Hospital in Neuilly, near Paris, and has been decorated with the Crois de Guerre, the Medaille d'Honeur First Class, and is a Knight of the Legion of Honor. Her mother, Mrs. Joseph Davies, is the daughter of the late Charles W. Post of Battle Creek, Mich., and is well-known in Washington as a leader in numerous welfare organizations.

Bride Bows At Court of St. James's

Mrs. Habe was graduated from the Spence School in New York and Miss Porter's School in Farmington, Conn. In June, 1928, she was presented at the Court of St. James's. She lived with her mother in the American Embassies in Moscow and Brussels and during the years immediately preceding the war she made her home in Paris. Since the fall of France, the former Mrs. Close Rand has interested herself in the French war prisoners and is one of the presidents of the French War Relief Committee in the Capital.

Author of Recent 'Best-Seller'

Hans Habe-Bekessy, is the son of Imre Bekessy, publisher and editor, and Bianca Marton of New York, formerly of Budapest. He is best known in this country as the author of the recent best-seller, "A Thousand Shall Fall." His articles and latest book are based on his experiences as a volunteer in the French army and as a German prisoner of war. In prison camp at Dieuze, he escaped three months later and is now lecturing at universities throughout the country and at West Point. He first gained world fame by publishing the family story of Hitler and discovering that Der Fuehrer's real name was Schuecklgruber.

In 1932, the Nazis tried to kill Mr. Habe, who was at that time the youngest chief editor in Europe, on the Vienna newspaper Der Morgen. As a League of Nations and foreign correspondent, he covered in the last ten years practically all important events on the European newsfront. The bridegroom, whose books have been translated in 18 languages, attended the Franz Joseph College in Vienna and received degrees from the Universities of Heidelberg and Vienna.

The newlyweds met in Washington where Hans Habe was invited to give a lecture at the Davies' home before a committee headed by Mrs. Close Rand.

After a short trip South, the bridegroom will go on a lecture tour for four months, which will take him, at the invitation of the War Department, to the American Army camps.

Miss Colton, Bride-Elect, Is Honored

The party was small and informal, befitting wartimes, when Mr. and Mrs. James E. Schwab entertained at a buffet supper and reception last evening in honor of Miss Grace Colton, bride-elect of Arthur Nichols, jr.

Mr. and Mrs. Schwab, who are old friends of Miss Colton's family, gathered in about 40 close friends for the party at their home on Fulton Street. Miss Hilda How, who arrived yesterday from Philadelphia, to be their house guest, was among those present.

Other guests, to name but several, were Mr. and Mrs. Barnum Colton, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Holland, Mr. and Mrs. Lansing Valk, Mrs. Carl Arnold and Capt. and Mrs. Thomas Barratt.

The bride, who is the daughter of Mrs. Bruce Colton and the late Mr. Colton, will have her sister, Mrs. E. P. Chase, as her only attendant for her wedding Saturday. The ceremony will take place at the Kenwood home of Mr. and Mrs. Chase on Norway Drive and will be followed by a small reception.

Mr. and Mrs. Nye Returning Today From Wedding Trip

Following a wedding trip to Charleston, S. C., Mr. and Mrs. William David Nye will return to Washington today and the bridegroom will leave immediately for duty with the Army at Camp Holabird, Md., where he has been stationed for some time. Mrs. Nye will go to Philadelphia to remain with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Woldow until June.

Before their marriage on Saturday, April 11, in the home of her parents in Elkins Park, Pa., the bride was Miss Nona Woldow. Mr. Nye is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Simon L. Nye and the grandson of Mrs. David J. Kaufman and the late Mr. Kaufman of Washington.

Miss Joan Simon was her cousin's maid of honor and Mr. Nye had as his best man his uncle, LeRoy King. Among Washingtonians who attended the wedding were Mrs. David J. Kaufman, Mr. and Mrs. King, Mr. and Mrs. David Nathan, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Bashwitz, Daniel J. King and Joseph D. Kaufman.

Marjorie Jean Pettus Honored at Party

Miss Marjorie Jean Pettus and her fiance, Harold Andrew Dillard, both come from Southern families and they plan eventually to live in the South, so the Florida scene which centered the table at a party last night in the bride-elect's honor was doubly in keeping.

Miss Charlotte Davis and Miss Drusilla Gottshall, who will both be bridesmaids for the wedding May 2, were cohostesses at the fete and guests came bearing gifts for a red and white kitchen to Miss Davis' home in Chevy Chase.

Among those present were the bride's mother, Mrs. Benjamin Bromhead Pettus, Mrs. W. B. Leclaire, Mrs. F. M. Shaffer, Mrs. Henry Thompson, Mrs. Hamilton Gewehr, Miss Shirley Puffer, Mrs. Gordon Gray and Miss Nancy Knox.

Mrs. Demarest Lloyd To Give 'At Home'

Mrs. Demarest Lloyd will give an "at home" on Sunday afternoon from 5 to 7:30, guests being invited to meet Mrs. Charles A. Warden, of Faraway Farm, Haverford, Pa., and members of the Academy of Vocal Arts of Philadelphia, of which she is founder and president of the board of directors.

Members of the committee sponsoring the short musical recital, which will be a feature of the afternoon, are Miss Mabel T. Boardman, Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke, Mrs. Charles B. Henderson, Mrs. Francis Keppel, Mrs. Lloyd, Mrs. Laurence M. Lombard, Mrs. Paul V. McNutt. Mrs. Edwin B. Parker, Mrs. Owen J. Roberts and Mrs. Nathan C. Wyeth.

Six students from the Academy of Vocal Arts will present the musical program, each an outstanding artist. Those in the group will be Miss Lauretta Carver, holder of the Peter Ibbetson Scholarship presented by Deems Taylor; Miss Jane Foltz, James Pease, and three service men, Corpl. Frank Cappelli, formerly a member of the Philadelphia Opera Company, now in Officers' Training School at Fort Monmouth, N. J.; Private Henry Faust, stationed at Fort Knox, Ky., and Private Richard Benson, Fort Dix, N. J., all of whom have been granted leave to appear here in recital.

There will be tea and cocktails following the musical program.

Patriotic Travel For Skittles Club

Definitely on a wartime basis is the Beer and Skittles Club, whose governing board has sent out invitations for a buffet supper this Sunday in the Vienna, Va., home of Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse.

Because of the tire situation, the governing board recommends that all guests make arrangements to travel in groups, with an A-1 priority rating required to ride in the Norris sisters' car. Tentative plans are being made to offer a prize for the car containing the most people, the reward to be one (1) white wall tire. To date, however, the president of the organization has not been able to obtain such a prize.

A map of the roads from the Capital to Wolf Trap Farm in Vienna is inclosed with the warning: "Please guard it safely, as it would be of tremendous value if it should happen to fall into enemy hands."

On Northern Honeymoon

Harris & Ewing

Mrs. H. Ross Brown, jr., whose marriage to Ensign Brown, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Brown, of Salt Lake City, Utah, took place on Saturday in the Bethlehem Chapel of the National Cathedral. The couple, who are now on a Northern honeymoon, will be at home at Bayhead, Annapolis, Md., after Sunday. The bride is the former Miss Louise Mary Chamberlain, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Taylor J. Chamberlain, of this city.

Couple to Be Feted After Rehearsal

A party after the wedding rehearsal is on the program tonight for Miss Mariana Grogan and William Richard Doores, jr., who will be married Saturday afternoon at Fort Myer Chapel. Miss Edith Mertz will entertain for them and their wedding party at Hotel 2400, following the rehearsay.

Miss Grogan, who is the daughter of Mrs. Stephen Sylvester Grogan and the late Mr. Grogan, has been widely feted during the weeks leading up to her wedding. Recently Miss Lydia Ann Israel entertained at a bridge-shower for her, and Mrs. Samuel Spicer was hostess at a buffet supper, which also was a shower party.

Netherlands Princess Entertained

The social lights of the White House have been turned on "for the duration"—behind blackout curtains—of the state visit of Crown Princess Juliana of the Netherlands and her consort, Prince Bernhard. Last night the President and Mrs. Roosevelt entertained at the first "social" dinner of the year in honor of the royal couple.

Arriving by train from New York at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, the princess and her party, which included her secretary, Wilhelm Vanteps, and Mrs. Vanteps, rode in executive limousines to the White House after having been received at Union Station by members of the Dutch legation staff and State Department officials. After a two-day stay they will return to Ottawa, Canada, where the Dutch royal family, including the two small daughters of the household, Princess Beatrix and Princess Irene, have been making their home since June, 1940.

Tonight the Netherlands Minister and Mme. Loudon, who went up to New York to meet the royal party, will entertain at a dinner for the crown princess in the legation. The princess plans to return to the United States May 9 to address the Federal Council of Church Women in Cincinnati, Ohio.

Miss Tague To Be Wed

Mrs. Ethel Tague of Silver Spring, Md., announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Marjorie Ann Tague, to Midshipman John M. Weeks, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Weeks, of Fayette, Mo. The wedding will take place June 19, the day Midshipman Weeks graduates from the United States Naval Academy in Annapolis.

The ceremony will take place at 8 o'clock at the Woodside Methodist Church. Miss Tague, the daughter of the late John Tague, has selected Miss June Barry to be her maid of honor.

The bridesmaids will be Miss Betty Hyman of Washington, Miss Eileen Wilson of Takoma Park, Miss Eleanor Hall and Miss Loraine Young of Silver Spring. Midshipman Robert Gregory will be best man, and those who will serve as ushers are Midshipmen J. T. Wheeler, Jack Stowe, Thomas Pugh and Warren Grosetta, all classmates of Midshipman Weeks. The bridegroom-elect is president of the Radio Club at Annapolis. Miss Tague will graduate in June from Montgomery Blair High School.

Guest of Honor Is Missing, Party Goes On 'as Planned'

Although Gov. Charles Harwood of the Virgin Islands could not be present, the fete planned in his honor yesterday from 5 to 7 went on as scheduled. Hosts for the event were Mr. and Mrs. Howard B. Railey, and the party took place at their home on Bancroft Place.

Two hours before the party began, Governor Harwood was called away from Washington on business, and during the party in his honor, Mr. and Mrs. Railey spent a good part of the time explaining that he was not coming in later.

Spring blossoms decorated the second floor drawing room where guests gathered informally and lingered long after the final hour set for the event.

The Ambassador of Uruguay, Dr. Juan Carlos Blanco, was among those coming in to enjoy the pleasant party. Representative and Mrs. Mike Monroney were there and virtually everybody else present commented on Mrs. Monroney's unusual corsage fashioned of defense stamps. "I don't think you can get them anywhere but in Houston, Tex.," she said. "This one came from there."

Others at the party included Representative James Barnes, Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer, Baron and Baroness Staekelberg, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Watson, Count Czernin, Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, Mrs. John J. Dempsey, Mrs. Morris Cafritz and Mrs. English Gordon, who was on her way to a dinner given by Mrs. Gustav Stewart.

Thirty guests came in for the buffet dinner at 8 o'clock, and a number of others joined the party later.

Among those in the company were the Ambassador of Uruguay and Senor de Blanco; Senator Arthur Capper; Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Thurman Arnold and the latter's sister, Mrs. Royall Hauer of New York; J. E. Elizalde, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson, Miss Carolyn Nash, Mrs. Carrere Barbour and Mr. and Mrs. William P. McCracken.

Still others there were Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, Mme. Lombard, Mrs. Celeste Crosby Miller, Mrs. Randolph Untington Miner and her niece, Mrs. Sayre MacNeal of California; Mrs. Sidney Lee, Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, Miss Lee Carson, William LaVarre, Marshall Exnicios, Drew Dudley, Gerald Wynn Wynne, Laurence Bungardeanu, Francois Charles-Roux, Waldemar Chadbourne, Col. Mason Wright, and Maj. Jock Lawrence of Hollywood.

To Attend Anzac Dinner

The Minister of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph William Close will leave for New York today and will attend the Anzac Day dinner this evening at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel. They plan to return on Sunday.

J. M. Elizalde To Fete Sayres

The High Commissioner to the Philippines and Mrs. Francis Sayre will be the guests of honor at an "after 5:30" party this afternoon to be given by the Philippine Commissioner and Secretary of State, J. M. Elizalde, in the Washington headquarters of those gallant islands on Massachusetts Avenue.

Mr. Sayre, who was a former Assistant Secretary of State, returned to this country from Australia on the same plane as the Minister of External Affairs of Australia and Mrs. Herbert Vere Evatt. He and his wife escaped from the Philippines to Australia by means that for the time being must remain a "military secret." Mrs. Sayre rejoined her husband in this country after a convoyed boat trip from Australia.

Indiana Weekend Is Planned by Claude Wickards

The Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Claude Wickard will leave the Capital this evening for a "family weekend" at their farm near Camden, Ind.

Joining them at their farm, where the Secretary tries out the newest Department of Agriculture rural innovations, will be the two daughters of the household, Betty and Ann. Betty will take a weekend off from her advertising job at L. S. Ayrs department store in Indianapolis and Ann will come down from her studies at Purdue University.

After the farm weekend, the Secretary will go on to Oklahoma to deliver an address and Mrs. Wickard will accompany Ann back to Purdue, where she will probably stay at Ann's Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority house.

Though she does not know exactly what her plans are, Mrs. Wickard plans to divide her time between the farm, Purdue and Indianapolis until May 11, when she will return to her Westchester apartment.

Miss Crocker Will Entertain

Miss Opsahl's Engagement Is Announced

Miss Audrey Ellen Opsahl

The engagement of Miss Audrey Ellen Opsahl to Allan F. Johndreau of Baltimore has been announced by her mother, Mrs. Arne Opsahl.

The bride-elect attended Macalester College in St. Paul, Minn., and was a member of Alpha Gamma Mu and Pi Mu, national music sororities. She is the daughter of the late Mr. Opsahl of Minneapolis, Minn.

Mr. Johndreau is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James T Johndreau of Sioux City, Iowa. He attended the University of Minnesota. No date has been set for the wedding.

The betrothal was announced recently at a dinner party at the Shoreham Hotel. The fete was the occasion for a double celebration as it was also Miss Opsahl's birthday anniversary.

Shepards Honored At Parties Here

Mrs. John T. Hendricks and her daughter, Miss Genevieve Hendricks, have moved back to their home in Georgetown at 3051 N Street. They have had as house guests Mr. and Mrs. William M. Shepard, their cousins from Buenos Aires.

During the visit of Mr. and Mrs. Shepard, Mrs. Hendricks and Miss Hendricks entertained at cocktails and at a dinner party at Normandy Farm. Guests included old friends of the Shepards from Bluemont, Va., where they used to have a summer home.

Mr. and Mrs. Shepard have gone on to Boston, Mass., to attend the graduation of their son John, from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

War Posters Exhibit Today For Benefit

"Ambulances for America," at long last! All through the day today, at 2624 Connecticut Avenue, there will be a benefit exhibit of official posters of the first World War to help buy American ambulances for this world war. Mrs. Betty McCrahon will exhibit the posters, numbering over a thousand, which she and her husband collected over a period of several years.

There will be no admission charge to the exhibit, but visitors are encouraged to leave a helpful coin or two. The proceeds, distributed under the auspices of the British-American Ambulance Corps, will go toward buying ambulances for American coastal cities. The corps has already sent out 30, and more are being delivered daily. San Francisco has already received 6, New York 12, Philadelphia 4 and Washington 2.

Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, chairman of the British-American Ambulance Committee, will be assisted by her committee members during the exhibit. It is hoped to raise sufficient funds for another ambulance for Washington, which will be on continuous duty at Union Station throughout the war.

Among those in attendance at the showing which opened yesterday were Mrs. Harlan F. Stone, Mrs. Stanley F. Reed, Mme. Fotitch, wife of the Minister of Yugoslavia; Mme. de Morgenstierne, wife of the Minister of Norway; Mme. Hurban, wife of the Minister of Szecho-Slovakia; Mme. Diamantopoulos, wife of the Minister of Greece; Mrs. Leighton McCarthy, wife of the Minister of Canada; Mrs. Charles L. McNary, Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Mrs. Ralph Brewster, and Mrs. Arthur M. Chichester, president of the Colonial Dames of America.

Mrs. Roosevelt Is 20 Minutes Early And 75th Club Has a Mild Dither

PROBABLY for the first time this year, Mrs. Roosevelt was confused about time. Yesterday she arrived at the 75th Club's sixth anniversary luncheon 20 minutes early. Last year she was 15 minutes late. Not expecting her on time, much less ahead, none of the members of the club was there to greet her when she arrived. When she was found waiting everybody was in quite a dither.

Mme. Martins

In her speech, the First Lady stressed the fact that there was a job for everybody to do in this war and the quicker started the better. Also she pointed out that child delinquency cases are on the increase. This she attributed to the war tension and the fact that there is less time for parents to devote to the youngsters' care.

She emphasized the fact that young girls coming to Washington should be looked after. She spoke particularly of the cramped living quarters and the high cost of living.

Mrs. Laurence Arnold, president of the 75th Club, presided. Mrs. Roosevelt was seated on her right and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Vice President, on her left. Mme. Martins, wife of the Brazilian Ambassador, also was an honored guest.

Other guests at the head table were Mrs. Carter Glass, Mrs. Lister Hill, Mrs. William Smathers, Mrs. W. R. Poage, Mrs. Vincent Harrington and Mrs. James H. Hughes. Also, Mrs. Josh Lee, Mrs. Allen Ellenders and Mrs. Charles O. Andrews—all wives of Senators.

Members of the 75th Club are wives of Representatives and Senators who came into office at the beginning of the second Roosevelt Administration. Each year the club donates its profits to charity. The first year it bought a wheel chair for a small boy—an infantile paralysis victim. Since then they have taken care of him. This year, however, the club is giving its contributions to "Save the Children Federation."

Keeping the luncheon, which was held at the Kennedy-Warren, as simple as possible yesterday, the club used few flowers for decorations.

Mrs. Marion Richards came down from Springfield, Mass., especially to present a group of old English songs. Mrs. James Clason, wife of the Representative from Massachusetts, was chairman of the musical program.

Mary Nourse to Speak on Formosa

"FORMOSA"—that strategically placed island which Japan took from China in 1895, and which recently has taken steps to set up an independent government in Chungking—will be the topic of Miss Mary A. Nourse, author, geographer and historian, who will speak before members of the Society of Woman Geographers this afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Washington Club.

Miss Louise Boyd

Miss Nourse, who spent several weeks in Formosa in 1937, will speak from first-hand knowledge of its places and peoples. The speaker is widely known for her short histories of China and Japan, which are entitled, respectively, "The Four Hundred Million" and "Kodo, the Way of the Emperor."

Hostesses at the meeting will be Mrs. Henry A. McBride and Mrs. Charles M. Hendley. Among the members expected to attend the lecture are Louise A. Boyd, Mrs. Frances Carpenter Huntington, Muna Lee de Munoz-Marin, Emma M. Thom, Taisia Stadnichenko.

HOW'S YOUR French? If not letter perfect pull out your grammar and polish up a bit. For Mme. Genevieve Tabouis, publisher of the French weekly, Pour la Victorie, and former foreign editor of the Parisian daily, L'Oeuevre, will describe her experiences as "hot-spot" reporter to a Washington audience Monday night at the Arts Club of Washington. The Washington Chapter of France Forever is sponsoring the lecture, which will be delivered in French. Reservations may be made at headquarters, 1710 Connecticut Avenue, or at Carrefours, 1911 Eye Street Northwest.

Genevieve Tabouis

Mme. Tabouis' recently published memoirs of political life, "They Called Me Cassandra," provides many behind-the-scenes accounts of the recent political events in the capitals of Europe. The magazine, Pour la Victorie, is described as a cross between News Week and The Saturday Review of Literature.

Doings of the Day

DR. SYNGMAN RHEE, chairman of the Korean Commission and representative of the provincial government of Korea, speaks before members of the CONGRESSIONAL CLUB at tea, 3:30 p. m., at the club's headquarters. Mme. Rhee, wife of the speaker, is guest of honor. An informal reception follows the program. Members of the hospitality committee are Mrs. R. W. Keane, Mrs. Hampton Fulmer, Mrs. Cleveland Newton and Mrs. Roy Woodruff . . . The housing committee of the WASHINGTON LEAGUE OF WOMEN SHOPPERS sponsors special program, "Victory Starts at Home" series of Sylvia Milrod, over Station WINX, 10:30 a. m.; Mrs. Elliott Fineman, chairman of the housing committee, interviews Robert P. Cogswell, Rent Controller and Administrator of the District.

Also, the last in the league series of lectures on "Tax Problems" will be given at 1:30 p. m., at the home of Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, 1615 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest. Ralph Hetzell, director of the economic division, C. I. O., talks on "What the Income Tax Means to Labor and the Consumer," . . . Mme. Shi-Ming Chu, wife of the Military Attache of the Chinese Embassy, is guest speaker at meeting of WASHINGTON WELLESLEY CLUB'S discussion group, 3:30 p. m.; Mrs. Bernard Chandler, 2 Albemarle Street, Westmoreland Hills, Md., is the hostess. Mrs. John P. Dean is chairman of the discussion group . . . WOMAN'S NATIONAL FARM AND GARDEN ASSOCIATION, Capital division, holds luncheon meeting, 12:30 p. m., at the Y. W. C. A.; Miss Eunice Harriet Avery of the Massachusetts branch speaks on "Ears and Wings of the World."

Women's City Club

THE NOMINATING committee of the Women's City Club will be hostesses at tea Sunday afternoon in honor of the candidates for election on May 6.

Mrs. Custis R. Perry, the chairman, and her committee will present the following candidates:

For president, Mrs. Burnita Shelton Matthews and Dr. Ada Wahlen; for first vice president, Mrs. Dorothy K. Butler and Mrs. Frederic I. Swift; for treasurer, Mrs. Gladys B. Middlemiss and Miss Juliette Searle; for recording secretary, Miss Edith Hagar Odle and Miss Ethel M. Johnson; for members of the board of directors, Miss Isabel Allen, Mrs. Lee C. Ashcraft, Mrs. Robert J. Bates, Mrs. Frank Birgfeld, Miss Bertha Butts, Miss Willa Gallagher, Mrs. Joseph P. Kelley, Mrs. Harry M. Packard, Mrs. Ruth Snodgrass, Miss Elizabeth Trump, Miss Margaret Vail; for delegates to the District of Columbia Federation, Miss Maude M. Apple, Mrs. George W. Campbell, Miss Elizabeth R. Groves, Mrs. C. D. Lowe, Mrs. John M. Harwood, Mrs. George R. Rutley.

A program of music will be given by Miss Dorothy Bixby, soprano; Miss Cecelia Ibsen, pianist; Miss Jean Seaman, accompanist.

Mrs. George Estes and Miss Roberta Tull will preside at the tea tables.

'Phantom' Card Party Set for Episcopal Home

FOR THE first time in its 15 years or more in the service of the Episcopal Church Home of this city, the board of managers, headed by Mrs. William Channing Johnson, will hold a "phantom" card party for the benefit of the work of the board at the home on Wisconsin Avenue at Macomb Street to which women of all the Episcopal churches in this diocese are asked to subscribe by taking tables for the event or by making contributions of money.

Prominent women of Washington have become sponsors and patronesses for this event and have applauded the idea of having a "phantom" event this season instead of the annual card party at the Willard Hotel. Mrs. Finley H. Calvert is chairman of the party. She has been assisted in sending out the invitations by Mrs. B. Lauriston Hardin, who is treasurer of the phantom party, and by Mrs. William F. Pearson.

To Be Held Before May 1

The party will be held prior to May 1. Responses received to date augur well for the most successful card party ever held by the board. Life begins at 65 at the Episcopal Church Home and is happily and smoothly run for the three dozen or so aged men and women who are spending their latter years in one or another of the group of cottages that make up the home. Each has its own sitting room, its own "front porch," its own lawn and there is a charming little chapel where they gather regularly for worship.

Established in 1924 in a single, three-story frame house at the corner of Wisconsin Avenue and Macomb Street, the home has been added to from time to time by gifts of additional houses adjacent or nearby, and its guests, originally only five in number, come from the various parishes in the diocese of Washington.

Many Acceptances Reported

Among recent acceptances of the committee's invitation to "attend" the "phantom" card party are Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke, Mrs. Arthur Burt, Mrs. David St. Pierre Gaillard, Mrs. George L. Harrison, Mrs. Harry Hurt, Miss Bessie Kibbey, Mrs. Arthur R. Krock, Mrs. James A. Millholland, Mrs. C. Powell Minnigerode, Miss Nora Moore, Mrs. William E. Pearson, Mrs. Ze Barney Phillips and Mrs. Howard S. Wilkinson.

Apathy Best Ally of Cancer, Ruhland Says

One of every nine deaths in the District last year was caused by cancer, Dr. George Ruhland, District Health Officer told the District Medical Society last night.

He said that although eight clinics have been set up to combat cancer mortality, the people have been apathetic about using the clinics in seeking to stem the disease.

It is only through early diagnosis that cancer can be cured, he said, stressing the serious need for immediate treatment when a condition indicative of cancer is noticed.

Dr. Herbert P. Ramsey, chairman of the obstetrical board of the Medical Society, also emphasized the importance of early treatment, stating that three-fourths of the people treated in the first stages of cancer have been definitely cured.

In reporting the work of the Government in treatment of cancer, Dr. Carl Voegtlin, chief of the National Cancer Institute, revealed that successful laboratory work with animals indicates that at a not too remote date cancer can be brought under control—with the aid of the people.

Dr. H. H. Kerr, chairman of the Medical Society's committee for cancer control, presided.

Work on New Route 50 Reported on Schedule

Winchester, Va., April 23.—Scarcity of certain road-building materials is not expected to interfere with opening new Route 50 east of Winchester on scheduled time, F. M. Yellott, resident highway engineer, said today.

A large overpass across the Norfolk & Western Railway at Waterloo has been completed save for surfacing of the approaches. First of the macadam treatments is being put down now. Tar may be substituted for asphalt, which is scarce, it was stated.

War Agencies to Limit Vacations to One Week

War Production Board, Office of Price Administration, Office of Emergency Management and all other new war agencies will order their employes to take a minimum of a week's vacation this summer. Two weeks will be the maximum that can be taken except in unusual cases. Some officials even suggested that all vacations be prohibited this year, but cooler heads put over the one-and-two week idea. Employes in new war agencies average more than 50 hours a week and they will not be able to continue at top speed without a break.

John Steelman, ace Labor Department conciliator, is reported to have been offered the job of executive director of the new Man Power Commission by Chairman Paul McNutt. The Conciliation Service, built up by Steelman, is the one thing that Labor Secretary Perkins is proud of. Miss Perkins is understood to be trying to persuade Steelman to continue in his present job. In the last few years the Labor Department has dwindled down to almost nothing and its prestige has been shattered by the creation of war labor agencies where labor policy is actually set.

Conciliator Steelman is on good terms with John L. Lewis and his appointment might save McNutt many a bawling out from John L. Gen. Frank J. McSherry also has a good chance to be appointed executive director. He has served ably in the labor supply division. Another labor official who may be brought into the Man Power Commission is Tom Holland, assistant administrator of Wage and Hour. Holland is understood to have been offered several war jobs . . . OPA is making a survey of employes who plan to ride bicycles to work. A shed will be built to protect the bicycles during the day if sufficient employes are interested.

It is definite now that the Bureau of Old Age and Survivors Insurance will be moved out of Washington. And the transfer will be permanent. The bureau has no plan for coming back after the war. Budget Director Harold D. Smith announced yesterday that 500 employes comprising the executive and policy-making staffs will be moved to Baltimore on June 1. The remaining 1200 employes here will be transferred to five area offices which will be located in New York City, Philadelphia, Chicago, New Orleans, and San Francisco. These moves will take about four months.

The 4700 employes now in Baltimore will not be touched. At one time, the moving of these employes was considered. Bureau employes here knew for months they would be moved but they did not know when or where. Baltimore offices for the 500 employes will be in the Equitable Building, which the Maritime Commission had planned to use for its regional office. Under the regional plan, old-age payments will be made from the regional offices . . . Offices in Chicago's huge Merchandise Mart have been leased for the National Park Service, Buraeu of Indian Affairs, and the Fish and Wildlife Service. The moves are tentatively planned for June 1 and the 15th. Why interior officials will not inform their employes of the moving plans is a mystery to all, particularly the employes.

Good news for decentralized employes. Employes may now take 7000 pounds of freight at Government expense. The former limite was 5000 pounds which paid full freight expenses for only 75 per cent of the employes. By raising the figure to 7000 pounds, 90 per cent will have all freight charges paid . . . The President has signed an order which will permit the Government to pay storage charges up to 30 days for household goods moved. The Comptroller General ruled the Government couldn't pay these bills, hence the President's order.

Navy employes didn't get paid yesterday and many an employe was borrowing money. The checks are promised for today . . . Skilled workers are needed immediately for work at the Panama Canal, even if they have to be transferred from other Federal agencies. Civil Service officials say it is not often uncomfortably hot in the Canal Zone, that the temperature ranges from 70 to 90 throughout the year. Make applications at 930 F Street Northwest . . . War Czar Donald Nelson is understood to be considering the appointment of Walter Reuther, author of the Reuther plan and an official of C. I. O.'s auto workers union, as chief of his labor production unit. Meanwhile, employes of WPB's labor supply are speculating on their future.

Sure Cure for Speeding

Wichita, Kans., April 23 (AP).—Wichita speeders may have to pay their fines in tires instead of cash. Police Judge Dallas Potts said today he was studying the legal aspect of a suggestion that he fine first offenders a spare tire. A second offense would cost the motorist another tire. That in most cases, he added, would mean grounding for the duration.

700 Lawyers Here Agree to Serve As Court Appointees To Defend Indigents

By Edwin D. Gritz
Post Staff Writer

The days when penniless defendants were largely guinea pigs for aspiring but inexperienced lawyers definitely ended here this week with the adoption of one of the most far-reaching judicial reforms ever undertaken in the District of Columbia.

After many years of faltering progress a new system of appointing expert counsel for indigent persons accused of crime has been put into operation, succeednig what has been a hit or miss practice of assigning lawyers for criminal cases in the District court.

Under the new system more than 700 attorneys with almost all kinds of law experience have "enrolled" as candidates for appointment to serve without pay as counsel for indigent persons. In the past hardly more than a handful of lawyers, mostly inexperienced, made themselves available for such service.

20 Already Assigned

So far, 20 attorneys have been assigned cases. Assignments are cleared through a regular law clerk, Eugene F. Gallagher, to whom a list of the 700 lawyers was submitted after compilation by a committee consisting of the following:

Charles E. Ford, chairman, and Irvin Goldstein, representing the District of Columbia Bar Association; John E. Powell, Richard W. Galiher, Frederick A. Ballard, of the Junior Section of the District Bar Association; Mrs. Elizabeth M. Cox, Miss Helen Goodner, of the Women's Bar Association.

John H. Wilson, Richard R. Atkinson, Leonard S. Hayes, of the Washington, D. C., Bar Association (colored); Harry Hull, Richard J. Kirland, of the District Court; and Wilbur L. Gray, secretary of the District of Columbia Bar Association.

In addition to the regular list of attorneys willing to serve, a special committee of 17 consulting lawyers has been formed. The consultants, representing some of the outstanding attorneys in the district, will be available at all times without charge to volunteer lawyers who might run into special difficulties in handling indigent cases.

Sponsored by Proctor

Justice James M. Proctor of the District Court has been a leading figure behind the reform in his capacity as chairman of the Judicial Conference Committee on the Defense of Indigent Persons Accused of Crime.

Ford, chairman of the representative bar committee, characterized the new system as a tremendous advance toward "justice for all."

"Under the new system, there will be no recurrence of the case several years ago where a 22-year-old colored boy accused of murder was found guilty largely through the negligence and inexperience of his assigned attorneys," Ford said.

Sincerity of Dancers Marks Association's Fifth Program

Washington Dance Association presents it affiliated student groups Thursday night in Roosevelt High School auditorium. Groups and directors: Marjorie Webster Schools (Ruth Bradley), Gallaudet College (Luana Mellon), Hood College (Barbara Jean Feiker), Holton-Arms School (Mary Happer), George Washington University (Elizabeth Burtner), Maryland University (Evelyn Davis), King-Smith School (Erika Thimey), American University and Chevy Chase Junior College (Dorothy Ross Faris).

Remembering how little interest was taken locally in the modern dance less than a decade ago, I was heartened last evening by the fifth annual presentation by the Washington Dance Association of the affiliated student groups from eight schools and colleges. Exclusive of the directors, there were 108 young people participating in the program, which, to quote the committee's statement, "neither the dancers nor the members of the association regard as a theatrical entertainment." The performance was no more and no less than a demonstration of a year's work through the medium of selected dance compositions, and was offered as much for mutual encouragement as for the enjoyment of consentient spectators.

BROWN

Congratulations are due to the association for what it has accomplished in the stimulation of choreographic activity and for the idealism of its aims. No one witnessing last evening's performance could doubt the sincerity of purpose in promoting the dance as a means of aesthetic expression, whether the emotion be humor or tragedy, and no one could fail to observe the rise in the general standard of technique which has taken place. In the work of the young dancers as a whole there were very few traces of novitiate uncertainty or awkwardness.

The length of the program, extending to 13 numbers, precludes detailed mention of all the dances and judgment on the merits and demerits of the various groups. One's attention was continually held by the variety of the dances, by the obvious intentness of the dancers upon their work and by the essential vitality which animated them all.

While this was in no sense a competitive exhibition, I cannot refrain from praising the triad od dances which overtopped the rest: the three choruses from T. S. Eliot's "Murder in the Cathedral" presented cooperatively by American University and Chevy Chase Junior College, "A Ritual for Today" given by Erika Thimey and her students from King-Smith Studio School, and "Mourning" offered by the University of Maryland group. In these there was a quality of intensity that aroused the imagination and focused the emotions upon the dramatic elements in the action.

Bishop Freeman Consecrates Debt-Free Holy Comforter

FREE OF DEBT—The Holy Comforter Church last night was consecrated by Bishop Freeman. Shown are the Rev. Howard Arnold (left) and Bishop Freeman

The Kingdom of God is America's No. 1 priority, the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, declared last night as he consecrated Holy Comforter Episcopal Church of St. Andrew's Parish, Seventh and Oglethorpe Streets Northwest. He also confirmed a class of 21 candidates, including two family groups.

The ceremony formally marked debt-freedom for the congregation, which was organized 40 years ago as a mission of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Rock Creek Parish. Holy Comforter became independent a year ago, merged with St. Andrew's Church, and became the church of a newly designated St. Andrew's Parish in the Brightwood area.

The Rev. Howard Arnold, rector, read felicitatory messages from the Rev. Dr. Franklin J. Bohanan, rector of St. Paul's, Rock Creek Parish, who is ill, and the Rev. John Kromer, former Holy Comforter pastor, and others.

Fifteen visiting clergy of the Washington diocese were in the congregation.

In a message published in the Holy Comforter Church bulletin regarding the occasion, Mr. Arnold said, in part:

"As we consecrate this church it presents a double challenge—a challenge to the powers of hate and despair and brutality, and a challenge to us to consecrate our lives to God, that finally the powers of Satan may be beaten down and that Christ may be known to all men as Lord of Lords and King of Kings.

Those confirmed were Mrs. Dorothy Donohue and her children, Dorothy and Raymond E. Donohue, jr., Benjamin A. Nevitt and his son, Clifford; George Ashton, jr., Preston Bean, Willard Bryan, John Dennis, Berkley Sling, Mrs. Ella Bowman, Mrs. Elsie H. Read, Miss Mary O'Connell, Margaret Early, Patricia Kriter, Mary Ann Newell, Nancy Rice, Jean Ann Rutledge, Laura Smithers, Helen Summers and Vivian Tolson.

Americanization School to Be Site Of Registration For the Transients

The registration center for transients who are between the ages of 45 and 65 and who are in the District next Monday will be located in the Americanization School, Tenth and H Streets Northwest, it was announced yesterday. Registration cards from this center will be sent to the transient's local board for classification there.

Approximately 80,000 men who "attained 'heir forty-fifth birthday on or before February 16, 1942, and have not attained their sixty-fifth birthday on April 27, 1942" will register on Monday between 7 a. m. and 9 p. m. at designated centers. An estimated 300 members of the House and a majority of Senators will be enrolled in the rotunda of the Capitol.

Retired enlisted men and retired Army and Navy officers, excepting those whose names do not appear on the registers of the Army or the Navy, will not be required to register. Diplomats and other aliens who are in this country in a nonresident status and who have not declared their intention to become citizens also are exempted.

While serial numbers will be given, there will be no lottery, Selective Service headquarters stated. The purpose of this registration, it was pointed out, is merely an inventory of the non-military man power available for production purposes.

8 of 28 Appeals From Draft Granted

The District Board of Appeals yesterday granted 8 out of 28 requests for deferment. All petitioners had appealed from Class I-A.

Occupational deferments (Class II-A) were granted to Dennis F. Manning, 24, a member of the police force, and Boyd A. Blakenship, 23, a student.

On grounds of dependency the following were placed in Class III-A and deferred: Maurice Weiss, 25, Social Security Board clerk; Carl F. King, 23, truck driver; Everett Simon, 32, haberdashery clerk; Marvin A. Schneiderman, 23, assistant statistician; James A. Lenahan, jr., 22, ship fitter, and Walter Bowie Williams, 35, librarian.

The case of Lewis Calvin Cooksey, 28, Census Bureau clerk, were returned to his local board for additional information.

The following registrants who sought a Class 3-A rating were refused a change of classification, although in some cases the board of appeals recommended stays of induction.

Allen A. Lauterbach, 25, Agriculture Department clerk; Robert Leventhal, 35, retail dry goods store, recommended held for 60 days; Woodrow W. Lons, 28, engineer; Lawrence Irving Melton, 24, bank teller; Irving Frank Stillman, 23, Census Bureau clerk; George Lexie Parks, 35, laborer; Vance H. Koontz, 25, Washington Gas Light Co. draftsman; Edward F. Bache, Syfo Water Co. salesman, recommended held for 60 days; William James Strachan, 22, clerk to Representative Cannon of Missouri, recommended held for two months; Shelton W. Thomas, 29, navy yard laborer; Joseph William Childress, 26, domestic, recommended held for 60 days; Gordon Conover, 27, guard at British Purchasing Commission; Edmund R. Sabatini, 35, National Airport timekeeper; Elmore Charles Moten, 29, haberdashery clerk, and George G. Keyser, 22 War Department.

Three registrants whose appeals for deferment on occupational grounds were rejected were David Thomas Maloney, jr., 22, student in economics; Aaron Fisher, 25, blueprint designer, and Eugene Maynard Reading, 27, clerk in the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics.

Draft Evader to Receive Mental Test

Sentencing of John W. Miller, Moslem religious sect member convicted last week for draft evasion, was postponed indefinitely at District Court yesterday pending a mental examination by District alienists. Miller was originally scheduled for sentence today.

Decision to have the man examined for possible mental disorder came after representatives of a local church federation had interviewed him in District Jail concerning his claim to be a conscientious objector by virtue of his Islamite faith.

They are reported to have told the United States attorney's office and defense counsel that they believed Miller was mentally ill, and urged that he be given an examination.

The examination was ordered by Justice F. Dickinson Letts, who presided at Miller's trial, after attorneys had relayed the request to him.

Accused of failing to complete his draft questionnaire, Miller asserted that his Moslem beliefs forbade him to take the requisite oath. He was convicted after a jury trial, during which he took the customary court oath when he testified in his own behalf.

Trade Board For Unified Charity Drive

Unanimously Favors Combination of All Fund Appeals in One Total Annual Effort

The Washington Board of Trade last night unanimously voted to sponsor a war chest, combining the fund-raising campaigns of all charities in one annual concerted drive.

The action, taken after Charles C. Cabot, chairman of the Greater Boston United War Fund, declared that even more important than actual money raised, was the stirring up of community and patriotic feeling.

He said, "We might throw the money down the sewer, and the effort would still be worth while There is a different feeling in Boston now."

Robert V. Fleming, chairman of committee of award for meritorious service, awarded citations to five firemen and five policemen who distinguished themselves by bravery the past year.

The decorated firemen include Lieut. Andrew N. Wright, No. 2 Truck Company, who was awarded the bronze bar; Capt. Leiper F. Price, No. 11 Engine Company; Lieut. William H. Ronan, No. 19 Engine Company; Pvt. Wilbur S. Ratcliffe, No. 11 Engine Company, and Pvt. Bernard J. Burns, No. 2 Truck Company, all of whom were awarded honorable mention. These men, at the risk of their own lives, had saved one or more persons.

Members of the Police Department commended are Lieut. John R. Jefferies, No. 12 Precinct, who received a gold medal; Pvt. Glenville F. Brown, Traffic Division, silver medal; Pvt. Richard W. Mower, No. 9 Precinct, bronze bar; Pvts. John Michalek, No. 6 Precinct, and George F. Bryant, No. 6 Precinct, honorable mention.

Elected to the board of directors were W. Crosedale Witts, C. J. Mack, Thomas J. Groom, Leon Chatelain, jr.; John Saul, M. L. Langford, Charles H. Tompkins, Thornton W. Owen, Marcy L. Sperry and George E. Keneipp. The meeting was held at the Mayflower.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Stan Spence, the tight-lipped, dour-visaged outfielder the Nats acquired in the midwinter deal with the Red Sox, is not only giving the Washington club excellent center field protection, but he is exacting high satisfaction from events thus far. Spence has been at his best when the Nats have been playing the Red Sox.

POVICH

Down in Florida, the tough-to-interview Spence spoke very strongly about himself and the Red Sox, for whose management he professes no great love. "They never gave me a chance to play regularly," said Spence. "When I was going good, they'd yank me out of the lineup. Hell, a guy can't pile up a batting average as a pinch hitter. I only hit .232, but I'm a better hitter that that. I should have been in that Boston outfield every day."

As calmly as you please, Spence further declared, "I'm as good a centerfielder as Dom DiMaggio, and I'll outhit him." That sounded like boasting, inasmuch as there is doubt if anybody is a better outfielder than young DiMag., but there was nothing boastful in Spence's manner of speaking. "Look at my record," said Spence. "I've fielded 1.000 since I came into the big leagues two years ago and I've been the leading outfielder in every league I've played in."

(Editor's note—So help us, as these lines were being written in the Griffith Stadium press box yesterday, Stan Spence made his first outfield error in his three years of big league play. He stumbled and fell while fielding a single off John Pesky's hat, and when Pesky raced to second, Spence was charged with a misplay, however excusable it might have been.

Has Been Plaguing Ex-Pals

The pique against the Red Sox which Spence carried into the 1942 season has been translated into grief for the Boston club. The little outfielder has now faced his former pals in three games and he has made at least a pair of hits in each of 'em. He has banged out a double and a triple, each time with men on bases, and generally made himself a pain in the neck to the club that traded him. If it was revenge he wanted, he has already collected a fair share.

It was on the suspicion that young Spence could do a lot of things well that Bucky Harris insisted he be included in the deal that sent Ken Chase to Boston in the swap for Jack Wilson. Harris had long admired Spence's center fielding, and he was a bit perplexed by the fellow's mere .232 average. "He may have hit only .232, but every time he batted against us he looked like a pretty good hitter to me," said Harris. "Maybe it was my pitching, but, I'll have to take a chance on him."

Thus far Spence has done well indeed. He has given the Nats defensive protection in center field that they haven't had since Sammy West was in his salad days. Spence roams farther than Roger Cramer, and he has been coming up with the line drives to short center that used to fall in front of Cramer for base hits. His throwing arm may be no better than Cramer's, if as good, but Harris has had no complaints as yet on that score.

The fellow has been a natural as a second-place hitter, with his ability to pull the ball into right field. But he seems to be a smart enough batter to hit lefthanded pitching to left, and he can turn on the power, too. His wallop into center field for three bases yesterday against Boston was a real power blow, and he is something of a problem child for the outfielders. On his next time at bat, he pulled a two-bagger into the right field corner.

Nats Outfield Is Strong Point

Washington's outfield is, in fact, exceeding the fondest suspicions of Harris, who expected no such power display. Bruce Campbell and George Case, along with Spence, are virtually carrying the batting load for the club. Case is getting off to his best start in seasons with his hitting, and his ability to get on base has boosted him to the top of the league's run-scorers at this point.

The trades that Clark Griffith pulled during the winter have all been beauts, at this reckoning. Jack Wilson won only four games for the Red Sox last year, but in his second start the other day he turned in a masterful 5-hit job against that club for victory No. 1. The only trade that cannot be correctly adjudged as yet is the deal that brought Frank Croucher from Detroit for Jimmy Bloodworth. Croucher's sore arm has thus far made him useless.

But Bruce Campbell, who came to the Nats as a part of that deal, has given the club a tremendous lift. It provided Harris with a clean-up hitter in a year when he didn't have another fellow who merited the job. Campbell is a sure, if not a spectacular, outfielder and his clutch-hitting qualitites have been a by word for years. Those midwinter deals are now labeled as shrewd stuff by the Nats' management.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, April 23.—Here's a charming racing fable related to Barry Whitehead, of The Thoroughbred Record, by the redoubtable Capt. Patrick Irvy O'Hay, horse park raconteur. It's worth passing along.

CONSIDINE

Before the recent leaky-roof meeting at Phoenix, two old cronies, in Arizona for their health and whatever else showed up, came to the end of their ropes. Between them they owned a swayback old race horse who dated back to Paul Revere's day. The horse had been helping with the support of the old boys, who also occasionally received a pittance from the last of their possessions in England and Ireland.

But times got tougher as the meeting approached and finally, one night in the last Phoenix bar that trusted them, they sold their faithful old horse. They had to eat. The buyer was a sinister bloke with an ice cube for a heart, but he agreed to hire the old boys—the Irishman as the horse's trainer and the Englishman as its groom.

Well, pretty soon the boys drank up the little money they got from the sale of their old plug, and their gloom was thicker when the new owner ordered them to stimulate the old bone bag for a killing at the track. The Englishman said, "never!" But the Irishman agreed to go through with the underhanded business. Neither of the old boys had eaten for a day, because their salaries had not started, and the Irishman meant to see to it that they didn't prolong their streak.

So the Irishman, in whispered conference, told the hard-hearted new owner that the stimulant that would really make the old horse fly was a dozen eggs and quart of brandy. While the Englishman sadly looked on, coldly hating his old friend, the Irishman whispered to the owner to see that the stimulant was in the barn before dawn on the day of the race.

The stuff showed up and it wasn't long before the Englishman caught on. For the old harp was whipping up a delicious omelette with the eggs. Between the two of them they killed off the bottle of brandy and ate the mammoth omelette. Then they fed the faithful old nag its ration of oats, blew him out and patted him.

That afternoon, after much winking back and forth between the old cronies and the new owner (who bet plenty), the old horse ran last. The irate owner stormed down to the barn after the race, fired the old guys and gave them back the horse in place of their salary.

That same afternoon a check for $87.50 arrived from abroad, and three days later the horse won a race.

Ray Arcel, the boxing trainer, believes that you might get the impression from our recent piece on punchy fighters that all of them wind up that way. Of course, there was no such suggestion. Ray believes that more fighters become groggy through poor training, dissipation or family troubles than become groggy through getting punched.

"Even businessmen get punchy," Ray said.

Poorest paid ballplayer in the majors, so to speak, works for the richest owner. Oscar Judd, the 32-year-old Canadian who is pitching fine ball for Tom Yawkey's Red Sox this season, is paid only $25 a week. That is, that's all the Red Sox are permitted to pay him. They must send the rest to Judd's Canadian bank and if any of that sum is spent it must be spent in Canada.

Seven Cavaliers Enter Penn Relays

By the Associated Press

Charlottesville, Va., April 23.—The University of Virginia will enter seven men in three events of the Penn Relays in Philadelphia tomorrow and Saturday.

Coach Archie Hahn took with him Bill Marbury, Tommy Todd, Baylor Capers, Nat Boyd, Ken Rathbun, Ned Campbell and Sonny Hall.

The Cavaliers are expecting to make their strongest bid in the shuttle relays with a crack quartet composed of Marbury, Boyd, Capers and Todd.

Campbell and Hall will enter the invitational 100-yard dash and Rathbun will enter the broad jump.

The principal engagement on the home baseball front tomorrow will find the Cavaliers locked in a return game here with Richmond's Spiders. Alex Cave, who shut the Spiders out, 4-0, in the Cavaliers' first game with Richmond and winner of four straight until he was stopped by George Washington, will be Virginia's starter.

Fishing Tackle Under War Production Ban

WPB Sets Deadline On May 31

Available Stock Remains on Sale Us Usual; Making Of Hooks Halved

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

The War production Board banned the manufacture of non-commercial fishing tackle for the duration of the war today by ordering manufacturers to stop using metals, plastics and cork after May 31. The only exception was fishhooks, which may be made after June 1 at a rate of 50 per cent of each manufacturer's output last year.

George M. Mooer, chief of the WPB sporting goods unit, assured the Nation's amateur anglers that sporting goods stores are "chock full of tackle—there is easily a year's supply."

Last year the industry produced about 15 million dollars worth of goods, using considerable quantities of scarce materials, including copper, copper base alloy, chromium, cork, stainless steel, zinc and plastics. At present the industry's 171 firms are approximately 15 per cent converted to war work with some manufacturers converted 50 per cent.

Japan Used to Provide

Moore, explaining why continued production of fishhooks was permitted, said:

"We wanted to take care of the fellow who goes out to catch himself a mess of fish every once in a while. It won't take much steel, because we used to get most of our hooks from Japan, Germany, Norway and England, and the facilities for making them in this country are limited. With a hook, the man who fishes because he wants something to eat rather than for the sport of it will be able to rig up the necessary tackle simply by attaching the hook to a piece of string and using an old bolt or other weight for a sinker."

Between now and the May 31 deadline, limited production of tackle is permitted from stocks on hand or on order before today. There is no prohibition on the sale of tackle. Until May 31, use of iron and steel from existing inventories is restricted to 75 per cent of the rate rate of use of such metals last year, previous orders had restricted use of other metals in fishing tackle.

The order defined fishing tackle as including rods, rod fittings and accessories, reels, reel equipment and accessories, lines, leaders, swivels, sinkers, fishhooks, bait boxes, tackle boxes, fly boxes, creels, artificial lures, baits and flies.

Bucky Harris Pays Leonard Tribute For 'Bearing Down'

Manager Bucky Harris of the Nats paid high compliment to Pitcher Dutch Leonard yesterday following physicians' announcement that the knuckle-ball ace had suffered a broken leg sliding into first base.

"That's a tough blow to take," said Harris, "but Leonard would not have been injured if he was not a fine ball player. He is one of the few pitchers who is bearing down all the time, even when he isn't pitching.

"Another man might have been content to be tagged out at first base on the play on which Leonard was hurt. But Dutch saw a chance to beat the play by hitting the dirt, and he gave it the old try. It was unfortunate that his spikes caught in the bag and twisted his leg beneath him when he fell."

12,000 See Race

The 12,000 spectators who crammed the fine little Lexington plant for this getaway feature of the brief spring Keeneland meeting weren't impressed so much by what Shut Out did as by the amazingly easy way he did it. The colt made his bid when he was ready and he galloped home without drawing a single long breath or once breaking his stride.

Left to carry the Greentree colors alone when his stablemate, Devil Diver was scratched out after cutting his leg in the barn last night, Shut Out spun around the mile and a furlong route in 1:52 2-5. The time was some 3 seconds off the track record but the horse just didn't have to run any faster, there was nothing to spur him on.

Bless Me made a race of it only for a mile. The son of Sickle broke on top, shook off the Greentree horse twice but was unable to match him a third time as they straightened out in the stretch. He stopped at almost the exact spot where the old colonel watched the race from his big limousine at the rail.

Shut Out and Devil Diver, who was not injured seriously, will be sent to Louisville for final training licks this weekend.

Smollen Pitching Star As Notre Dame Wins, 4-3

South Bend, Ind., April 23 (AP).—Sophomore Hal Smollen of Notre Dame pitched six-hit baseball, struck out 11 men and walked only one today as the Irish nosed out Purdue, 4 to 3, to sweep a two-game series.

Purdue got four hits and three runs off the West Haven, Conn., hurler in the fifth inning to take a 3-to-2 lead, but in the next four innings he did not let a man reach first base.

You're Looking at the First Half of a Double Play

Lou Stringer, of the Cubs, takes a wide slide at second base but he was out and Martin Marion, of the Cards, whipped the ball to first and caught Babe Dahlgren in a double-play. Play was in the second inning. The Cubs won, 2-1

Shut Out Wins $10,000 Race At Keeneland

By Jack Guenther

United Press Staff Writer

Lexington, Ky., April 23.—Hustling along smoothly, smartly and without apparent effort, the Greentree Stable's Shut Out breezed to a runaway triumph in the eighteenth renewal of the classic Blue Grass Stakes today and emerged as a big threat for the sixtieth Kentucky Derby.

One of the last sons of the late Equipoise, the big bay who was foaled only a few furlongs from the picture book Keeneland track winged down the stretch all by himself in what amounted to a one-horse race and knocked E. R. Bradley's Bless Me right out of the big show on May 2.

With little Eddie Arcaro guiding him, Shut Out swept his pink and black silks over the chalk stripe finish line with a three and a half length margin over the Bradley standard bearer, while H. P. Headley's Equinox, the ousider in the three-horse field, came loping along a distant last.

Rookie White Blanks Chisox, 9-0, for Tigers

By the Associated Press

Detroit, April 23.—Rookie Hal White of the Detroit Tigers pitched his second successive American League shutout today by limiting the Chicago White Sox to five scattered hits for a 9-to-0 triumph. The 23-year-old right-hander, up from Buffalo of the International League, permitted no Chicagoan to reach third base.

Nova, Savold To Box Here On Relief Card

By the Associated Press

New York, April 23.—Promoter Mike Jacobs today announced that Lou Nova, California heavyweight, and Lee Savold of Des Moines would meet in the 10-round main bout on the Navy Relief Society fight show at Griffith Stadium, Washington, May 21.

Georgia Abrams, now of the United States Navy, and Steve Mamakos will tangle in an All-Washington 10-round middleweight go in the chief supporting bout.

The Nova-Savold tussle is the last of a list of several bouts Jacobs has tried to arrange for the Navy Relief Fund card. Originally, he tried to match Welterweight Champion Red Cochrane and Ray Robinson for the 147-pound crown, but Cochrane couldn't get leave from the Navy. Then he tried to make Abe Simon and Buddy Baer, but it fell through. Then it was Simon and Nova, but Simon announced his retirement early this week

Lou Novikoff's Homer Beats Cardinals, 2-1

Chicago, April 23 (INS).—The first ball pitched by Max Lanier in the sixth inning of today's game between the Chicago Cubs and the St. Louis Cardinals wound up in the leftfield stands of Wrigley Field, and that was the ball game.

Lou Novikoff, the Mad Russian, was the author of the homerun that gave the Cubs a 2-to-1 victory over the Cards.

The Cards scored in the third inning when they combined two of the seven hits allowed by Bill Lee as he won his second victory of the season, and the Clubs tied it up in the fifth. Then along came Novikoff.

Sunday A. M. Games Set for War Workers

Wilmington, N. C., April 23 (AP).—Manager Jim Collins of the Albany Senators of the Eastern League said here tonight that his club would inaugurate Sunday morning baseball for defense workers unable to attend games at other times.

"It's an idea," Collins said, "that the majors will probably adopt later and should meet the need of teams all over the country. We are going to start work on a plan as soon as we get organized in Albany."

Pitcher Hurt In Attempted Slide to First

X-Rays Disclose Bad Injury; Zuber Turns in Nice Relief Effort

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

At a painful cost, not revealed until after the game when X-ray pictures showed that Pitcher Dutch Leonard had suffered a broken left leg, the Nats scored a 10-5 victory over the Red Sox yesterday.

In the din of the second inning, the bone cracked as Leonard slid into first base in a hapless attempt to beat out an infield hit. The big pitcher, sensing a wild throw by Shortstop Johnny Pesky that pulled first baseman Al Lupien off the bag, pursued his only chance to beat the play, and hit the dirt in an effort to avoid being tagged.

He was out on a close play but his spikes caught on the bag in a common ball-field accident and his left leg twisted beneath his 200-pound bulk. Leonard was carried from the field and first announcement was that he had suffered merely a severely sprained ankle.

Leonard was taken to Georgetown Hospital for an X-ray examination, and after the 3000 fans left the park it was learned that his leg was broken.

Out For Month

"He'll be out for a month, at least," said the Washington Club physician. Manager Bucky Harris groaned at that report on his No. 1 pitcher.

Leonard had pitched two shut-out innings at the time and was holding a 5-0 lead over the Red Sox. Bill Zuber took his place on the mound, but Leonard was credited with the Nats' eventual victory under the special scoring regulations that provide for such a ruling in the case of accident.

As for the ball game, well, the Red Sox made six errors not counting their initial mistake of showing up at the park on a day when the Nats were in a slugging mood. By its triumph, Washington rose to the majesty of sixth place and tumbled the Boston club out of a tie with the Yankees for the league lead.

The Red Sox did not act like even a faint facsimile of the club that, the afternoon before, had walloped the Nats by a 13-4 score. Shortstop Johnny Pesky made a wild throw and booted another ball. Third Baseman Jim Tabor committed a fimble. Catcher Bill Conroy tossed in a wild throw and in the outfield DiMaggio and Pete Fox were guilty of misplays.

Nats Get 13 Hits

Zuber did all right with the 5-0 lead Leonard was compelled to turn over to him. From the third inning until the ninth, he gave up only two runs, one of which was unearned. He ran into a three-run squall in the ninth, but by that time his lead had been upped to 10-2 by the Nats.

Washington unloaded 13 hits against Yank Terry and his

Newsom Pitches Today for the Lucky Ladies

Buck Newsom, the human breeze, takes his fast ball to the mound at Griffith Stadium today in the opening of a four-game series with the Athletics, the club he beat last week.

Newsom will be opposed by Phil Marchildon, Canadian right-hander, who turned in a six-hit performance in beating the Nats four days ago.

It will be ladies' day at Griffith Stadium, no deterrent to Newsom, who has always preferred to pitch before ladies' day crowds. "They're more appreciative," says Buck.

Penn Relay Field of 3000 Featured by Service Track Stars

74 Events Mark Stellar Card Today

Hoya Mile Relay Team Favored; Blozis and Horn Also Represent D. C.

By Jack Munhall
Post Staff Writer

Philadelphia, April 23.—Bigger and perhaps better than any year since 1934 in spite of, or maybe because, of the war, the forty-eighth Penn relays carnival opens on Franklin Field tomorrow with service teams and service men in line for a large slice of the spoils.

More than 3000 entries, the largest number since meet promoters dropped the decathalon contest eight years ago, are converging on the City of Brotherly Love to battle on a 74-event program.

The increased size of the field over last year is attributed largely to the response of service camps throughout the East. Among Uncle Sam's fighting men who'll test their speed, stamina and spirit against the cream of the Nation's track athletes will be Lieut. John Woodruff, U. S. A., outstanding individual star of the 1939 carnival; Blaine Rideout, one-half of North Texas State Teachers' great brother act of the 1938 relays, and many, many others. Lieutenant Woodruff will represent Camp Edwards, strongest looking of the service squads.

On the collegiate side, fans are looking forward with most interest to the 1-mile relay championship of America, last and crowning attraction of the carnival which will come as the shadows lengthen on Franklin Field Saturday.

Hoyas Favored

In this race the District of Columbia has come up with the team the experts figure the one to beat. That could be none other than Elmer "Hap" Hardell's great Georgetown foursome, which earned its reputation the past indoor season by racing to a new world's record of 3:17.3 after capturing the National A. A. U. title.

One of the favored teams from the start, the Hoyas are assuming more stature every day as such teams as Fordham and Villanova suffer back-breaking blows.

Fordham, best mile team in the metropolitan New York area in the winter, has been virtually eliminated as a serious contender through the loss of three regulars. Gone into their country's service are Capt. Pete Callery and Frank Leary—now in the Navy—and sidelined with a pulled tendon is Ed Shine. Thus, left alone to shoulder the burden, is John Campbell, anchorman and holder of the Intercollegiate 440-yard title.

The Georgetown quartet of Jim Fish, Charley Williams, Hugh James and Hugh Short has been working out in form that portends a performance of 3:17 or better, barring, of course, the unforeseen.

Colgate, with Al Diebolt carrying the baton on the final lap, handed the Hoyas their lone finals defeat of the season and can be counted on for a fast effort Saturday.

Horn Pressing

Center of attention for D. C. fans on tomorrow's opening program will be Georgetown's Al Blozis, premier shot-putter of them all, and Herculean Hack Horn, the ever-improving University of Maryland sophomore.

Blozis, still seeking to crack Jack Torrance's world's outdoor shot record of 57 feet 1 2-5 inches, is accounted a sure winner in his specialty and also may come through in the discus, where he has been making grand progress of late. As a matter of fact, big Al may do comparatively better with the platter than the ball. A bit surfeited with shot-put victories—he hasn't been beaten in four years—and with little more to gain there, Blozis has been showing more interest in sailing the discus. In recent practice he has been approaching the world's record of Archie Harris and should do better than 170 feet tomorrow.

Reiser's 2-Run Homer Helps Flock Win, 9-5

By International News Service

Boston, April 23.—A two-run homer by Pete Reiser today highlighted a five-run fifth inning as the National League-leading Brooklyn Dodgers handed the Boston Braves their sixth defeat in a row, 9 to 5.

The Braves made three errors and all of the Dodgers' runs in the fifth were unearned, as they capitalized on a total of 10 hits, same as the total for the Braves, to win a victory credited to Kimball, one of three Dodgers who hurled against four Brave flingers.

Gypsy Rose Lee, Champ Dog, Entered in Old Dominion Show

Event Scheduled Tomorrow in Alexandria; 100 Entries in 17 Classes Will Show

Gypsy Rose Lee, the champion show bulldog—not the strip teaser—will be one of the featured performers in Old Dominion Kennel Show tomorrow in Alexandria, it was announced yesterday by A. R. Forbush, Bench Show chairman of the Washington Bulldog Club.

The stellar show dog, as ugly as the strip teaser is attractive, will join a field of approximately 100 of its kind in the 17 classes for bulldogs. He will be handled by his owner, James Gibbons of Bridgeport, Conn.

Other outstanding bulldogs in the event will be Boy Oh Boy, a former United States Navy mascot; Sir Victor, the newest bulldog champion, and Dour Dacquiri, a star with 45 "best of breed" ribbons to his credit.

Named to pick the outstanding dog of the record number expected to turn out for the Navy Relief benefit is Miss Anna K. Nicholas of New York, an expert in the "toy" department. She will also choose best American-bred dog and best local dog. Other judges will be Mrs. J. G. Anderson of Blenmont, Md., in the chow ring; Mrs. E. D. Levering of Ruxton, for Irish setters, and Kenneth Bruce of Senaca Falls, N. Y., for English bulldogs.

Villanova Nine Edges Loyola By 27-4 Score

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, April 23.—Villanova's baseballers smacked out hits at will and ran themselves ragged on the bases today as they administered a record 27-4 walloping to Loyola's Greyhounds before hostilities were terminated in the seventh inning. The Wildcats laced three Loyola hurlers for 22 hits and the Greyhounds helped out with 13 errors. Villanova scored 18 runs, 4 in the first and 11 in the second, before Loyola could get a man on base. Coach Lefty Reitz gave up in the fourth and asked a seven-inning limit.

Joe Coffee, Villanova shortstop, led the assault with five hits, including a homer and a double, in six times up and Leftfielder Smith and Centerfielder Koproski, of the Wildcats, each contributed a towering home run to centerfield.

Tomorrow the Wildcats engage Western Maryland at Westminster, Md., and Saturday they move to Washington, D. C., to face the strong George Washington nine.

Vass Routed As G. W. Golf Team Is Tied

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, April 23.—Fashioning a clever 72 over the Country Club of Maryland course, Ed Johnstone, Baltimore University golf captain, paced his team to a 3-to-3 deadlock with George Washington University here today. Johnston defeated George Vass, Colonial No. 1 man, 7 and 5.

The best G. W. score of the day was hung up by Charley Stockell, who turned the course in 79 as he played in the best ball play only, Baltimore's representative having forfeited.

Complete Results

Johnston (B) defeated Vass, 7 and 5; Stockell (G. W.) by default. Best ball—Baltimore, 5 and 3.

Gudmunson (G. W.) defeated Snyder, 7 and 6; Kunkle (B) defeated Rein, 1 up. Best ball—G. W., 6 and 5.

George Widener New President At Belmont Park

New York, April 23 (AP).—George D. Widener was elected president of the Westchester Racing Association to succeed Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt at a special meeting today of the board of directors of the association, which operates Belmont Park.

Vanderbilt recently resigned his Belmont position along with the presidency of the Maryland Jockey Club, which operates the Pimlico Track at Baltimore, and his various other racing positions in order to apply for a commission in the Navy.

The board also reelected Peter A. B. Widener as a vice president and named George M. Francis to another vice presidency to succeed Maj. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, who also had resigned to return to active duty with the Army Air Corps.

Western High Turns Back N.T.S., 10 to 5

With three first-year pitchers handling the mound work, Western High's baseball forces turned back National Training School, 10-5, yesterday on the suburban court.

Blue, Fines and Gould limited the Trainers to 6 hits while their mates collected 12, each team getting a pair of doubles. The Raiders marked up their winning margin with a 5-run rally in the fifth inning.

S. A., formerly Cleveland Indians infielder, and Lieut. Rusty Thompson, U. S. N., former coach of Tech High School.

Elizabethtown Nine Defeats Shepherd, 3-2

Special Dispatch to The Post

Shepherdstown, W. Va., April 23. Shepherd College baseballers lost a heartbreaker to the Elizabethtown (Pa. College nine, 3 to 2, in the opening game here yesterday.

It was a pitchers' duel throughout with "Woody" Woodson, of the Rams, and Melhorn, of the Pennsylvania school, both holding their opponents to five hits. Woodsen shaded Melhorn in strikeouts, 14 to 13.

Shepherd lost a golden opportunity to either tie the score or win in the ninth when, with only one out, Woodson singled and went to third on a slow roller which Dasher beat out for a hit. Dasher then stole second. With men on second and third, Melhorn tightened up and struck out Calhoun and Davidson in succession to end the game.

Carolina Slugs 5 Va. Hurlers For 18-1 Margin

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlottesville, Va., April 23.—North Carolina's diamond team rang up their biggest total of the year here today, swamping Virginia by a score of 18 to 1. The lone Cavalier tally was made by Merritt, first man up in the ninth, who laced out a home run.

Coach Tebell trotted out five twirlers in an attempt to halt the Tarheel attack, but to no avail. Carolina scoring in every inning save one. The big push came in the sixth frame, when eight runs were registered off of three twirlers. The Cavaliers contributed to the rout by making ten errors.

Gersten, Carolina's stocky leftfielder, led the Tarheel 20-hit attack with four singles, while Reynolds, Myers and Morris each contributed two singles and a two-bagger.

Carolina fielded sharply throughout. Wiltshire, Virginia outfielder, was robbed of two hits when spectacular running catches were made by Hussey and Harris, and in retaliation raced to deep center to pull down Myers' terrific clout over his head.

Millner Named Irish Assistant Grid Coach

Redskins' Star End Succeeds Druze; Here Last Six Years

By the Associated Press

South Bend, Ind., April 23.—The Rev. J. Hugh O'Donnell, president of the University of Notre Dame, today appointed Wayne V. Millner, of Salem, Mass., assistant football coach in place of John Druze, who quit Tuesday to become a Navy physical director. Millner was Notre Dame left end in 1934 and 1935 and for six years has played with the Washington Redskins of the National Professional League.

Millner, 30 years old, was bothered by a succession of injuries last year with the Redskins and played most of the games heavily taped and bandaged. He was out part of the 1940 season with a leg injury.

Millner was one of the finest defensive ends in the pro game and was also a great money player. His pass catching in the 1935 Notre Dame game against Ohio State which beat the Buckeyes in the last four seconds of play made him one of the favorite grid graduates of the South Bend school. He caught two passes in the 1937 Redskin-Bear game, on the ice, which gave the Redskins the league championship.

Millner gained previous coaching experience at Catholic University, tutoring the ends of the Sun Bowl team of 1940.

In six years with the Redskins Millner nabbed 14 touchdown passes and was one of Sammy Baugh's favorite receivers.

Millner's loss will be keenly felt by the Redskins, who have now lost two of their finest all-time ends in as many years. Charley Malone resigned before the 1941 season.

Millner is married and the father of two girls.

Australians Give Americans Sports Show

Canberra, April 23 (Australian News Bureau to U. P.).—A miniature Olympic games for American and Australian troops will be held at Melbourne probably in August, according to today's statement by Maj. Lynn Cowan, U. S. Army morale officer.

Meanwhile all sports organizations in Australia are cooperating in providing entertainment for the Americans—from table tennis to football and baseball groups.

Because the U. S. soldiers arrived without equipment for American football the Australians are weaning them to rugby football in which there is more running and less close formation contact.

In one state rugby union and rugby league—which have somewhat different playing rules—are competing keenly for American adoption of their respective codes. Rugby league has scored a few points on its rival, as two American teams already are training under the league code. Both league and union are staging exhibition matches at American camps during weekends.

Last Sunday 4000 persons attended a sports arena, when only 2000 had been expected. For next Sunday's baseball match 5000 programs have been printed. Normally 500 would be the attendance at a baseball game except in Melbourne, where baseball is played as a preliminary to professional soccer football fixtures.

Major Cowan emphasized today, "hospitality of the Australian home and fraternizing between the two forces has been of such nature that you would think the Australian army and the American Army are one—as indeed they are. The American troops here are fit and their morale is 100 per cent.

Apprentice Gorman Pilots Columbus Day for First Victory

Son of Discovery Scores by Nose Over Grey Wing; 8000 Fans Present

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Havre de Grace, Md., April 23.—Apprentice Jockey David Gorman rode the first winner of his career here this afternoon and earned it in a thrilling nose finish decided by the camera. Young Gorman was aboard Columbus Day, owned by Harry Richards, who recently gave up the saddle to become an owner and trainer, and the son of Discovery was along in the final stride to bring long-shot backers a $35.10 mutuel. The Cedar Farm's Grey Wing was second in the test of a mile and 70 yards and C. F. Hockley's Glastauder was third. A field of nine 3-year-olds competed.

The crowd of 8000 put most of the money on the chances of Mrs. E. Dupont Weir's Hyacinthus. This son of Hyperion set and forced the pace along with Grey Wing. In the meanwhile, Gorman was steadying Columbus Day along in fourth position. Entering the stretch, Hyacinthus began to fade and Grey Wing took a definite lead. Then Gorman began to hand-ride Columbus Day and the colt responded. The two leaders battled head and head for the final 30 yards.

Longshot Pays $62.50

The longest mutuel price of the day, however, came in the fourth race. Al Wellman's Boom On, paying $62.50, came from behind to defeat, among others, J. W. Y. Martin's Road Scraper and the Christiana Stable's Sobriquet. Jockey Al Prain, seldom seen in the saddle in recent years, put up a strong finish on the 4-year-old and won going away.

Well-played horses won the key races to bring a $25 pay-off in the daily double. Jouett Shouse's Vee, part of the three-way Trainer Joe Serio entry, won the first race by a half length. Dot's Key was second and H. M. Babylon's The Duck, another part of the entry, was third. Those who wagered on the combination collected $7.10. Henry Little's Olympian proved much the best in the second event. Installed the favorite at a $5.80 mutuel, the Grand Time colt circled the leaders and galloped home four lengths in front of Jungle Moon with Camp Sortie third.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—VEE (entry), $7.10, $3.50, $3.40; DOT'S KEY, $5.70, $4.70; THE DUCK (entry) $3.40.

VEE, off in first flight, was under pressure throughout and wore down DOT'S KEY to win in final strides. DOT'S KEY raced BUGLER into defeat to take lead, but could not resist winner while closing gamely. THE DUCK raced wide and closed with good energy. LITTLE BUD lacked speed early and closed gamely.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1000. For 3-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:07. Off at 3:08. Winner, H. Little's b. or br. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—OLYMPIAN, $5.80, $4.00, $2.90; JUNGLE MOON, $11.30, $6.60; CAMP SORTIE, $13.10.

OLYMPIAN was steadied early while racing on outside early, went to front boldly approaching stretch and drew out to win with something in reserve. JUNGLE MOON was sluggish early, improved position when shaken up and closed with good energy. CAMP SORTIE went between horses to take command at far turn and weakened gradually after being displaced. VOUCHER went evenly in first flight.

Daily Double—VEE and OLYMPIAN Paid $25.00.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1200. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:38. Off at 3:41. Winner, G. R. Watkins' br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DOUBLE B., $9.20, $4.80, $3.40; MAROC, $10.60, $8.70; PRECEPTOR II, $9.10.

DOUBLE B., in thick of contention from start, shook off TAMIL to take command and held on gamely under pressure in closing to barely last. MAROC was shut off on inside, came out for racing room, moved up boldly and hung right at end. PRECEPTOR II, slowest to begin, obtained racing room on inside and closed boldly. BLENSION was well placed from start, moved up menacingly and then weakened.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1300. For 3-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:09. Off at 4:09½. Winner, Al Wellman's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BOOM ON, $62.50, $21.80, $9.00; ROAD SCRAPER, $5.80, $4.10; SOBRIQUET, $3.30.

BOOM ON raced on outside from start, responded gamely to hand riding and wore down ROAD SCRAPER to win going away. ROAD SCRAPER opened long lead going to far turn and weakened gradually thereafter. SOBRIQUET raced on inside from start and weakened in final stages. RIDING LIGHT lacked early speed and closed boldly.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1500. For 2-year-olds. The Mount Pleasant. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:38. Off at 4:39½. Winner, H. C. Richards' ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—COLUMBUS DAY, $35.10, $11.70, $7.60; GREY WING, $8.60, $5.90; GLASTANDER, $8.70.

COLUMBUS DAY, rated while within striking distance for half, came to outside for racing room, improved position gradually and was up in concluding strides. GREY WING alternated in setting and pressing pace with HYACINTHUS, shook off latter but could not resist winner. GLASTANDER could not keep up early, responded when shaken up and closed resolutely. HYACINTHUS was rated while racing with GREY WING and was weakened when placed to drive.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NEW TRICK, $8.20, $5.30, $3.90; ZORRO, $7.70, $5.40; IVA MAE, $7.40.

NEW TRICK, impeded at first turn, recovered quickly, improved position between horses, took command entering stretch and held sway to end. ZORRO was keen forward factor from start while racing between horses and closed with good energy. IVA MAE was bothered at first turn, worked way to contention on outside and bore out in stretch run while closing ground. LOCH NESS was shuffled back at first turn, came to inside and hung in final eighth.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1200. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:35. Off at 5:35. Winner, H. G. Bedwell's bh. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GINOCA, $9.50, $4.30, $3.50; DARBY DU, $7.50, $4.10; SENTINEL, $3.90.

GINOCA was rated in first flight, moved between horses at far turn, took slight lead approaching stretch and was kept to drive to hold DARBY DU safe. The latter saved ground when outrun early, came out for racing room, was carried wide into stretch and hung in final 70 yards. SENTINEL improved position sharply approaching stretch, bore out and weakened in final stages. NAVY raced with GAY MAN'S pace, was pinched off on inside at far turn and closed gamely.

EIGHTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1200. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 6:01. Off at 6:01½. Winner, J. Sands' b. g. GENTLE SAVAGE was steadied while racing in front with WELL ALLRIGHT, went to inside after dropping back, rallied when shaken up and was up in concluding stride. WELL ALLRIGHT forced early pace, took wide lead approaching stretch and weakened in final sixteenth. SARAN was within striking distance from start, moved up menacingly in midstretch and weakened at end. HINDU SPY was taken up when in close quarters going to first turn, worked way up on outside and tired through stretch.

Colt Soldier Song Out of Kentucky Derby

Media, Pa., April 23 (AP). — A spokesman for Samuel D. Riddle, owner of the Glen Riddle Farms, said today that Riddle's Soldier Song will not run in the Kentucky Derby.

The horse, already entered, had a "breakdown," the spokesman said, and as a result was brought to the Riddle Farms here. He gave no details.

Selections at Havre de Grace

Dear Al:

Sweep Swinger will get his Kentucky Derby chance. Owner Buhl saw that closing bid of his 3-year-old in the Chesapeake Stakes and decided that he will go well at a mile and a quarter. Sweep Swinger takes his final drill in these parts at Pimlico this morning and will be shipped to Lousville tomorrow. Jockey Paul Keiper was suspended for the last two days of the meeting. Keiper was charged with rough riding in Wednesday's eighth race aboard Gendarme. Gaby, the popular Baltimore News Post handicapper, is sick and is missing from a Maryland pressbox for the first time in years. He is on the mend, however. By the way, Walter Haight goes today. Looks like now or Charles Town. Jocky Danny Scocca will pass up some big track work to make the swing around Charles Town, Hagerstown, etc. Willie Daly is doing well as a trainer in New England. More Maryland writers going to the Kentucky Derby than ever. Let's give a big hand to the Maryland Horsemen's Protective Association for that "Victory Race" plan. The first of these races for Army and Navy relief may be run tomorrow. The entries for opening day on Monday at Pimlico will be closed at Havre de Grace tomorrow morning which is an excellent idea. Impound, owned by Alfred G. Vanderbilt, is working well at Pimlico. Porter's Cap and Level Best also have shown speed over the same oval. Jockey Al Schmidl is leading the riders in the race for the $500 watch that goes to the saddle champion. The Baltimore boy has 10 winners. Eddie Campbell and Ken McCombs have eight winners each. Jockey Porter Roberts, who rode the disqualified Sunphantom in Wednesday's eighth race, was exonerated. Sunphantom swerved into Battle Won inside the sixteenth pole and almost put Jockey Eddie DeCamillis over the fence. The stewards, under the new rule of the Mayland Commission which allows them to use their own judgment in the placing of a disqualified horse, gave Sunphantom second money because he impeded only Battle Won. See you on the rail.—BILL.

First race—ZACABRAND ran a good race last out and belongs on top of these maiden juveniles. TOWER PET gets in light and will be a factor. BLEEDING HEART to account for the minor award.

Second race—LIT UP won over this track and has all the earmarks of a winning favorite in this sprint for fillies. ASK AUNT ADA has worked well and belongs close up with these. CHERRYDALE won in surprising fashion early in the session and deserves some respect.

Third race—MAR D'ESPRIT has shown early speed in two outings. Won last year over this oval and I'm going to take my chances. COLD CRACK is a fair sort and looms as the one to beat. CAESAR B. for the minor money.

Fourth race—CADUCEUS is the highweight and the speed of this party. Needs only the right handling. MARKSMAN is fit as hands make horses. SUNSET BOY won like a good horse last out and is dangerous.

Fifth race—ICE WATER finds a route that suits here and I see no reason for mistakes. PHARIEN is in with a feather and is dangerous. ALHALON'S last was encouraging.

Sixth race—I'm going to put WALTER HAIGHT on the top of this heap. He needs distance and cheap opposition and certainly gets both in this field. MYSTIQUE holds a strong hand due to light weight and is a threat. MAGNIFY belongs in the money circle.

Seventh race—RAHANEE turned on the heat in the stretch and bounced home last out. Looks like a repeater. BUNNY BABY and BUSY FINGERS to account for the place and show awards.

Eighth race—BUSY MAN deserves the top pick in this company and I'm going to string along. PEP TALK is a possibility with a price. BOSTON PAL for the show end.

Best bet—ICE WATER.

Athletics' Six Errors Enable Yankees to Gain 6-4 Triumph

New Yorkers Score 3 Runs In 8th Inning

Yanks Are Outhit, 9-8; Use 4 Pitchers; Gordon's Hit, Bases Loaded, Is Decisive

By the Associated Press

New York, April 23.—The Philadelphia Athletics observed the birthday of William Shakespeare today with their own "comedy of errors," making six fielding miscues, and in the final act handed the New York Yankees a 6-to-4 victory.

The world champions needed all the assistance the A's could give because they were outhit 9 to 8, had to use four pitchers and had to come from behind with a three-run rally in the eighth on one hit, a single by Joe Gordon with the bases loaded.

The Yanks started out like champs, gaining a three-run lead in the first four frames while Rookie Hank Borowy blanked the A's on one hit. But in the fifth Pete Suder led off with a triple and the Athletics piled up four runs on five hits and an error in chasing Borowy to the showers.

Suder's blow was followed by singles by Elmer Valo, Bill Knickerbocker, Lou Blair and Bob Johnson. Blair scoring all the way from first on Johnson's hit as Third Baseman Gerry Priddy let George Selkirk's throw get away from him.

Rookies Hurl

John Lindell, Mel Queen and Norman (Red) Branch, all freshmen, shared the subsequent pitching chores for the Champs and Queen received credit for the victory, although Branch had to come in with the bases loaded in the ninth and fan Pinch Hitter Mike Kreevich for the third out to save the decision.

In the eight hinning Gerry Priddy reached first safely when Ken Richardson, subbing for Dick Siebert at first, failed to have his foot on the bag in taking a throw. Then Frank Crosetti grounded to Knickerbocker and reached second and Priddy third when Knick's throw to first was wild. Priddy scored the tying run on Selkirk's infield out; Joe DiMaggio and Charley Keller were intentionally walked to fill the bases and Gordon broke up the game.

Tech, Under New Coach, Host To Anacostia in High Series

Wilson, Roosevelt Also Play; Coach Clarey Pits Strategy Against Joe Kaufman

Led by a new coach and with new faces in most positions, Tech, last of the public school nines to see series action this season, plays host to Anacostia in half of the interhigh schedule today. Wilson entertains Roosevelt in the other half, both games starting at 4 p. m.

John Clarey, a recent addition to the Manual Trainer staff, will be in charge of the team today, facing another new mentor in Joey Kaufman, who has replaced Rolland Lund as the head of the Indians.

Though he hasn't decided definitely, Clarey will probably send big Dan O'Connell, a veteran, to the hill in the Trainers' first effort. And that along with First Baseman Keithley and Catcher Harvil, will be just about the extent of his seasoned material.

Tech, however, will lack little in offensive strength. In its only previous game it slugged impressively, despite the use of so many novices. Anacostia can depend on John Penn for its pitching, providing that player's injured arm is improved.

Henry to Coach W. & J. Eleven; Succeeds Holcomb

By the Associated Press

Washington, Pa., April 23.—Dr. Ralph Cooper Hutchison, president of Washington and Jefferson College, announced today the appointment of Director of Athletics Wilbur (Fats) Henry as head football coach.

Henry, a former all-American tackle at W. and J., succeeded Stuart Holcomb, who resigned two months ago to become head football coach at Miami University, Oxford, Ohio. More than 30 applications had been made for the job.

"At this time, when football along with other college activities faces a crisis due to war conditions, the college has turned to Director Henry to serve in the emergency," said President Hutchison. "He will be able to take the team developed last year by Holcomb and continue without completely abandoning the system installed by Holcomb."

West Virginia Streams Stocked Near Towns

State Game Conservation Commissioner T. D. Gray told Kiwanians here last night that the present policy of the commission in stock streams is to place legal size fish near urban centers and where streams are relatively most accessible to the greatest number of anglers. Restrictions on the sale of automobile tires and gas, plus the reduced amount of time it is anticipated anglers will have for the sport, have prompted the emergency policy, he said.

Gray, whose department also controls the policies on State parks, said further development of this field would necessarily be trimmed during the war but promised full-scale expansion after the war.

Vander Meer Goes Route As Reds Win

By International News Service

Pittsburgh, April 23.—The Cincinnati Reds scored their third victory of the year today when they broke loose in the seventh inning for five runs that beat the Pirates, 5 to 3.

Johnny Lanning had held the Reds to one hit in the first five innings only to be shelled from the mound in the seventh, as Johnny Vander Meer went the route to bag the win for the Reds.

Haas started the seventh for the Reds with a double, followed by a base on balls and Frank McCormick's bunt that filled the bases. A long fly and Hemsley's single scored two runs, and Joost's single off Strincevich, sent in to relieve Lanning, brought in two more runs. Rookie Joe Abreu then singled in the final score for the winners.

The Reds made seven hits and the Pirates utilized five to score single runs in the first, fourth and eighth.

C. Wright Bout With Constantino Given Approval

By the Associated Press

New York, April 23.—The New York State Athletic Commission approved today an eight-round over-the-weight fight between Chalky Wright, New York recognized featherweight champion, and Lou Costantino, undefeated in 55 straight fights, at the St. Nicholas Arena, May 7.

Originally the commission ruled that Wright first must defend his title against Sal Bartola, of Boston, but Bartola is ill. John J. Phelan, chairman of the commission, said that Bartola would be examined again next month and if in condition would be approved as Wright's next opponent.

Three commission physicians advised Bartola should not be permitted to fight for six weeks. Phelan ordered Wright to post a forfeit of $1000 to guarantee that he would go through with a title bout with the Boston battler when the latter is available.

successor, Tex Hughson. Terry, who had held the Yankees to five hits last week, was swatted out of the box in four innings.

Stan Spence, deemed incompetent by the Red Sox when they traded him to the Nats last winter, gleefully collected three of Washington's 13 hits, including a triple and a double. Bill Zuber and Joe Gomez, of all people, also collected three-baggers against the Boston pitching.

The Nats put the slug on Terry right away. They rapped him for three runs in the first inning after Case drew a walk. Spence thumped a triple to the center-field wall and after Vernon struck out, Campbell scored Spence with a single to right. A bit later, Bobby Estalella doubled against the right-field fence for the third run of the inning.

They surged back at the right-handed Terry for two more runs in the second inning after two were out. Case scored without the aid of any kind of a hit. He drew a walk, stole second, went to third on Conroy's wild attempt to catch him and continued home when DiMaggio fumbled the errant throw in center field. Spence followed with a double against wall in right and Vernon scored Spence with a double to short center, which DiMaggio played as if it were a deadly rattler.

Bill Zuber Triples

Mexican Joe Gomez displayed a sudden burst of power in the fifth against Hughson. . . . After Campbell and Early led off with singles and appeared to be abandoned on base, Gomez slugged a line drive triple to center that moved 'em home. . . . Zuber's ninth-inning trouble consisted of a walk to Williams, a triple to the center-field corner by Tabor, Fox's double to left, and Conroy's single. . . . It added up to three Boston runs. . . . Williams was hitless until he singled to right in his fourth turn at bat. . . . Case, who drew two walks, stole a base and scored two runs, was the only Washington athlete who didn't get a hit.

Schoolboy Golf Leaders Favored in Today's Play

Roosevelt, Bethesda Are Both Unbeaten; Georgetown U. Linksmen Meet Loyola U.

School golfers near the halfway mark of both the Metropolitan and Public High sections of the league play today with both Roosevelt and Bethesday expected to continue as pacesetters with unbeaten records.

The Riders meet Western at Woodmont while the only other unbeaten team in the Dawes Cup competition, Wilson, meets Coolidge at Columbia. Bethesda and St. John's have a date at Washington. Georgetown Prep, defending champion and with the Barons undefeated in the Met section, is idle until Sunday.

Loyola of Baltimore vs. Georgetown U. at Bannockburn.

Georgetown Golfers Host to Loyola

Georgetown's golf team will play its last collegiate match before the opening of the Eastern League next week when the Hoyas meet Loyola of Baltimore at Bannockburn today.

G. U. has a three-match winning streak and will be heavy favorites to make it four in a row. Buddy Sharkey, beaten for the first time by Baltimore's Eddie Johnson on Tuesday, will be in his usual number one role for the Hoyas.

Bobo, Flynn Set To Arrive Monday

Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn yesterday announced that both Harry Bobo, giant Negro heavyweight boxing championship contender from Pittsburgh, and Johnny Flynn, of Rochester, N. Y., are to report here by Monday for their scheduled ten-round boxing bout at Uline's Arena Wednesday night.

Flynn, the 23-year-old, 195-pound knockout conqueror of Wallace Cross and Cyclone Williams, is to put in an appearance Sunday, while Bobo is scheduled to report here by Monday.

Timely Hits Help Giants Beat Phils, 5-2

By International News Service

Philadelphia, April 23.—Although outhit 11 to 9, the New York Giants today turned back the Phillies again, 5 to 2, with Hal Schumacher credited with the victory.

Schumacher gave the Phils their only runs in the seventh before being relieved by Ace Adams.

The Giants were sent off to a two-run start in the first inning when Willard Marshall doubled, scoring two runs. Danning added two more with a double in the fourth and Mize doubled one across in the fifth.

Browns Lose Fourth in Row To Indians

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, April 23.—Cleveland's Indians smashed through the Browns' defenses in the eighth and ninth innings today for a 9 to 2 victory.

Ken Keltner's homer started the drive after two were out in the eighth and broke a 2 to 2 tie. Walt Judnich's fumble of Jeff Heath's single allowed the Indian to reach second; Les Fleming was passed intentionally to set up a double play. Then Chet Laabs in right field dropped Lou Boudreau's fly and two more runs scored.

Elden Auker had allowed eight hits up to and including Keltner's home run but that and Heath's fourth-inning homer behind Keltner's double had been the only damaging blows. In the ninth he lost his cunning.

It was Cleveland's fourth straight victory over the Browns and the fifth consecutive loss for St. Louis.

Capital Group Buys Rutland R. R. Control

A group of Washingtonians has obtained control of the Rutland Railroad through the acquisition of at least 51 per cent of the preferred stock, it was learned here yesterday.

During recent weeks a group of which John D. Babbage, of Washington, is an active member, has been buying up shares of preferred stock in the road owned by the New York, New Haven & Hartford and New York Central Railroads.

At a stockholders' meeting Tuesday in Rutland, Vt., five Washingtonians were elected as new directors. They are: Mr. Babbage, Theodore B. Nickson, comptroller of the Federal Housing Authority; John F. Sinclair, formerly with the Hearst Enterprises; Donald H. McKnew, Washington investment banker, and Theodore S. Grape, retired Washington banker. Frank McNulty, of New York City, also was newly named to the board.

Continuing in office as directors were Receiver William E. Navin, Robert C. Arnoll, Eric G. Eklund and Theron A. Woodsum.

Latest reports list assets of the Rutland Railroad, now in receivership, at approximately 22 million dollars. The road showed total income of $333,819 available for fixed charges in 1941 as compared with a deficit of $32,366 in 1940.

Mr. Babbage declared yesterday in Washington that "the Washington group is independent of any other group and is acting solely for its own account."

Mr. Babbage, who is associated with Barrett Herrick & Co., local investment bankers, said that directors will meet April 30 in New York City to elect a new slate of officers.

The Rutland Railroad operates in Vermont and New York over 407 miles of rail. It is primarily a bridge line between New York, Boston and Montreal.

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

D. C. Store Sales Up 22%

Washington department store sales in the week ended April 18 resumed their upward trend after a brief check during the previous week due to seasonal influences. Local sales in the latest week were 22 per cent heavier than in the same 1941 period.

For the first time this year a sales drop was shown in the week ended April 11 when volume was 4 per cent under the same 1941 week. This was due to the later Easter in 1941. With the holiday season out of the way, department store sales are expected to continue the unbroken rise noted all of this year.

Store sales here in the four weeks ended April 18 showed a 24 per cent upturn over the same period last year. This was greater than the average gain of 20 per cent for the Fifth Federal District in the same period.

All the figures reported above are from the weekly review of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond.

New General Manager Named

W. E. Dent has been promoted to general manager of Smith's Transfer & Storage Co., it was announced yesterday by President Arthur C. Smith. Robert J. Woods has been made general sales manager. The Washington firm has added another 100,000 cubic feet of storage capacity with acquisition of a warehouse on Georgia Avenue, Mr. Smith reported.

Northwestern Mutual Life

The Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Co. reported yesterday that on March 31 its total assets had reached a new high of $1,459,950,631, an increase of $20,060,808 over the preceding three months.

Sales of insurance during the quarter were $85,943,420 on 21,324 new life policies. The company reported total insurance in force was $4,097,977,399, represented by 1,105,363 policies.

"The first quarter of 1942 shows a marked betterment over last year which was the best in the history of the company except 1918," said M. J. Cleary, president.

Astrologically Speaking

R. B. Bangs, of the Commerce Department, estimates that in February the public had a "disposable income" equivalent to an annual rate of 97.5 billions, out of which it spent at the annual rate of 79.1 billions and saved the balance.

In the similar month last year "disposable income" was estimated at an annual rate of 81.2 billions, out of which spending was at the yearly rate of 72 billions.

Considering price increases in the last year, Bangs concluded that saving has increased and spending decreased, in proportion to "disposable income."

Stocks Tumble Fractions to 2 Points On Federal Plans for Inflation Control

New York, April 23.—Price-freezing and tax gloom enveloped Wall Street today as the stock market resumed its long decline after a few rallying sessions.

The slide was broad and fairly steep for many of the leaders. Closing losses generally ranged from fractions to more than 2 points. Many new lows for the last year or more were established.

Ignoring a brighter foreign news picture, the market went in for more belt-tightening in adjustment to the comprehensive controls the Government will announce shortly for dealing with inflation. Washington reports that one of the measures considered might involve business taxes only a little short of confiscatory levels had a particularly chilling effect on speculative sentiment.

Penetrating last Friday's bottom range the Associated Press 60-stock composite dropped .8 of a point to the lowest since April 28, 1933. It closed at 32.5.

Share dealings totaled 429,473 shares, compared with 257,030 yesterday.

Among the leaders reaching new low territory for a year or longer were American Telephone, United States Steel, Boeing, Douglas, United Aircraft, Glenn Martin, Sperry, American Telephone, Anaconda, Kennecott, Eastman Kodak and Standard Oil (N. J.) Giving up 1 to 2 more points were Bethlehem Steel, General Motors, Chrysler, Sears Roebuck, Harvester, American Can, Westinghouse, duPont, Allied Chemicals, Johns-Manville and Philip Morris. Rails had fractional losses with the widest in Santa Fe and Chesapeake & Ohio.

Bonds and most speculative commodities moved down with stocks. Chicago wheat fell 1 to ⅝ cents a bushel and corn dipped ¾ to 1 cent. Hogs were 10 cents higher. Cotton futures slipped 40 to 60 cents a bale.

Curb shares also were hit with heaviest losses in Aluminum of America, American Cyanamid, Colt's Patent Firearms, Gulf Oil, Heyden Chemical, and Humble Oil. Creole Petroleum and Pentepec Oil were steady. Transactions here were about 68,990 shares compared with 44,000 the previous day.

Pittsburgh Steel Enjoined on Scrap Price Violations

Pittsburgh, April 23 (AP).—Federal Judge F. P. Schoonmaker today issued a permanent injunction restraining the Pittsburgh Steel Co. from violating Government regulations of scrap prices.

The Office of Price Administration on April 15 filed a complaint charging the company purchased more than 70 carloads of unprepared iron and steel scrap from shippers in Southwestern States at prices ranging from $1.50 to $2.50 per ton more than provided in the OPA's revised price schedule No. 4.

OPA attorneys said the company consented to the injunction and admitted the allegations in the complaint, but contended the violations were unintentional.

In a statement issued here, Price Administrator Leon Henderson said the action would be followed by others against iron and steel scrap dealers, brokers and consumers. He added:

"These new actions will be either civil or criminal depending upon the facts of each violation. Scrap is vital to the manufacture of heavy arms and armaments and the price schedule covering its purchase and sale must be scrupulously observed."

Morgan Stanley To Offer Block Of N. J. Standard

New York, April 23 (AP).—A secondary market offering of 150,000 shares of Standard Oil Co. (N. J.), from the portfolio of General Aniline & Film Corp., has been set tentatively for Friday afternoon after the close of business by Morgan Stanley & Co. and a group of other security dealers, it was learned today.

All details of the transaction have not yet been worked out, financial sources said.

Stock control of General Aniline now is held by the United States Treasury which seized the shares after deciding the real interest in them was German. The Treasury action culminated a long series of directorial and managerial changes, and was followed by appointment of a four-man board to operate the big chemical concern.

General Aniline, financial records show, on December 31, 1940, held 203,053 shares of Standard Oil (N. J.) common stock among its marketable security investments.

Bank Idle Cash Off 140 Million During Week

By the Associated Press

Idle bank funds declined again last week to a new low for recent years of $2,750,000,000

The Federal Reserve Board estimated that these excess reserves declined 140 million dollars, mostly due to Federal borrowing, in the week ended April 22.

The board's statement said:

"During the week ended April 22 member bank reserve balances decreased 32 million dollars. Reductions in member bank reserves arose from increases of 18 million dollars in money in circulation, 23 million dollars in Treasury cash and 47 million dollars in nonmember deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts, and a decrease of 15 million dollars in Reserve Bank credit, offset in part by increases of 8 million dollars in gold stock and 4 million dollars in Treasury currency, and a decrease of 58 million dollars in Treasury deposits with Federal Reserve Banks. Excess reserves of member banks on April 22 were estimated to be approximately $2,750,000,000, a decrease of 140 million dollars for the week.

The principal change in holdings of bills and securities was an increase of 42 million dollars in United States Government securities, bonds increased 3 million dollars and bills 39 million dollars."

Reserve Index Steady in March

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board's index of industrial production remained in March at 172 per cent of the 1935-39 average, the same as in February.

Aggregate output was slightly larger in March, but the increase was equal only to the usual seasonal rise and therefore did not affect the index, which is adjusted for seasonal differences.

The index, however, was 25 points higher than a year ago, and was at the highest level in history. Although steadily advanced by increasing war production, the index also has been held back by compensating declines in civilian production.

Week's Bank Clearings Show Moderate Gain

New York, April 23 (AP).—Bank clearings in 24 leading United States cities totaled $7,006,787,000 in the week ended April 22, or 3.9 per cent more than in the comparable period last year, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

The current total was 9.2 per cent above the previous week's figures.

New York City's turnover, biggest single factor in the total, was down 5.2 per cent from 1941 at $3,570,620,000. The remaining 23 cities reported a volume 15.5 per cent above 1941 figures.

Amended Complaint Asked of A. G. E. Trustee

New York, April 23 (AP).—Judge Edward A. Conger in Federal Court dismissed a complaint filed by Stanley Clarke as trustee of the Associated Gas & Electric Co. against the Chase National Bank but gave the trustee permission to serve an amended complaint.

The action, described as involving a sum "in excess of three million dollars," was listed in the court docket as one alleging "breach of trust." The ruling was on a motion of the bank.

War Financing Policy Drafted By Bank Group

Special Dispatch to The Post

French Lick Springs, Ind., April 23.—The economic policy commission of the American Bankers' Association laid before the executive council of the association at its spring meeting here a 26-page memorandum setting forth the "broad principles which underlie the detailed methods" most suitable for the $52,400,000,000 of public borrowing which the Treasury expects to engage in during the fiscal years 1942 and 1943.

In its report the commission, headed by W. Randolph Burgess, vice chairman of National City Bank, of New York, laid stress on the need to raise the maximum possible amount of money for waging the war out of current income and not through bank purchases of Government securities. The banks are prepared to advance the Treasury the money it cannot raise elsewhere, but "it is in the national interest," the report said, "that these amounts should be as small as possible because of the inflationary effect."

Findings Summarized

Of the ability of the country to "finance this vast undertaking" the commission raised no question whatever. The commission's own summary of its findings and recommendations follows:

"1. The present budget program calls for public financing of $18,800,000,000 in fiscal 1942 and $33,600,000,000 in fiscal 1943.

"2. The way this huge sum is raised will influence our whole economic and social structure.

"3. To help avoid damaging inflation the greatest part of this sum should be borrowed from the current income of people who would otherwise spend it—and next best from funds now idle.

"4. Banks and bankers are offered the opportunity of assisting the Treasury in the sale of war savings bonds and other Government securities to investors ,of acting in effect as underwriters of Government issues, and providing themselves what additional funds may be required by the Treasury, all with the support of the Federal Reserve System acting only as the lender of last resort.

"5. Even with the best efforts to place securities with other investors, the Treasury's needs will require a large increase in bank holdings. Each bank must be ready to take its fair share of these securities.

"6. To avoid disturbed markets and uncertainties, a fairly steady level of interest rates is desirable, and it can be maintained with the cooperative effort of the banks, the Treasury and the Federal Reserve System.

Capital Ratios to Drop

"7. The sale of Government securities to investors other than banks might be encouraged if excess bank reserves were allowed to decrease as deposits expand. A smaller amount should be adequate to maintain reasonable stability of money rates.

"8. During this period banks cannot expect to maintain as high capital ratios as in the past, nor does this appear to be necessary as long as their expansion of assets is mainly in cash and government securities. Banks should be allowed to earn enough, however, to increase their capital at a moderate rate.

"9. In the fight against inflation the banker, by virtue of his position in the community, has a special task at his own doorstep in selling bonds to investors. He shares responsibility with Government to see that in this area there is no repetition of 'too little' and 'too late.'"

The desirable sources for Treasury borrowing, the report says, are in order: "First, and best, from the current income of people which would otherwise be spent; second, from idle money in the hands of non-bank holders; third, from the commercial banks, and four, and worst, from the Federal Reserve System."

How Debt Is Divided

The Treasury says that its $70,280,316,765 tital debt on April 20 included $64,571,453,110 direct Treasury obligations and $5,688,863,655 Treasury-guaranteed obligations of Governmental corporations.

Occoquan Co. to Revise Charter For $5,500,000 Power Project

By the Associated Press

Richmond, April 23.—At the request of the applicant, the Virginia Corporation Commission continued today an application of the Occoquan Co. for authority to construct a $5,500,000 hydroelectric pumping plant on Occoquan Creek, 14 miles south of Alexandria.

W. E. Gallegher of Washington, attorney for the company, said the continuance was requested because of a charter provision prohibiting the exercise of the right of eminent domain and that it appear a new charter might have to be sought before the project could be undertaken.

George Knutson, vice president of the company, said after the brief appearance before the commission that whatever steps were necessary would be taken to permit the project to go ahead.

The plant, he said, would be the second of this type in the United States although a number of the same general type are in operation in Germany. The other one in this country is at Rocky Ford, Conn.

The theory of the pumping plant, he explained, is that during periods of slack power demand, power would be purchased from some other company, probably the Virginia Public Service, to pump water from the stream to a 125-foot deep reservoir. The water power thus made available would be used to augment the supply of power needed at the peak periods of the day.

He said the proposed plant would have a capacity of 107 million kilowatt hours per year of which about 34 million could be generated from the stream flow without pumping.

Roughly speaking, he said two-thirds of the power required for the pumping operations would be generated by the release of the water thus stored up, but pointed out that this power would be available at the periods of greatest demand.

The plans call for a 125-foot dam which would provide a reservoir covering some 2600 acres in Prince William and Fairfax Counties. The dam would be about 1000 feet above the Route 123 bridge at Occoquan.

Knutson said less steel and other critical materials would be needed for this type of plant than for steam generating plants. The company had estimates to indicate that additional power would be needed in connection with the war program and the general plan is to sell the Occoquan company's product to other companies, such as Virginia Public Service and Virginia Electric and Power. It was estimated that the project could be completed within approximately one year.

Rail Loadings Up 4% During Week

By the Associated Press

The Association of American Railroads reported yesterday that 846,862 cars of revenue freight were loaded during the week ended last Saturday.

This was an increase of 32,329 cars, or 4 per cent, compared with the preceding week; an increase of 137,789 cars, or 19.4 per cent, compared with a year ago, and an increase of 218,094 cars, or 34.7 per cent, compared with 1940.

All classes of freight except less-than-carlot merchandise showed sizable increases from the previous week and most were up sharply from a year ago. The more-than-seasonal rise lifted the Associated Press adjusted index of loadings, based on 1923-'30 as 100, to 91.1 per cent, compared with 90.2 the previous week and 76.3 a year ago.

Colgate Head Hopeful On Soap Supply Outlook

New York, April 23 (AP).—E. H. Little, president of Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Co., told stockholders at the annual meeting that while domestic production of fats and oils was insufficient to meet the needs of soap makers, he was hopeful of the outlook, at least for the present.

He said the company had several months' raw materials supplies on hand and its research staff was busy developing substitutes for products formerly imported and now on the ration list.

The American Tobacco Company

Twenty Year 3% Debentures

Dated April 15, 1942 — Due April 15, 1962

Interest payable April 15 and October 15 at the office or agency of the Company in New York City. The Company has appointed Guaranty Trust Company of New York as paying agent for the Debentures.

A cumulative Sinking Fund of $3,000,000 each year commencing in 1943 payable in cash, to be applied to the purchase or redemption of Debentures, or in Debentures; the Sinking Fund being subject to reduction in amount upon retirement of Debentures otherwise than through the operation of the Sinking Fund. It is calculated that the amount of Debentures to be retired by the Sinking Fund plus the amount, if any, retired otherwise than through operation of the Sinking Fund will aggregate at least 75% of the issue by maturity.

Redeemable, at the option of the Company, in whole or in part, at any time upon 30 days' notice, at the following prices and accrued interest: to and including April 15, 1945, 103%; thereafter to and including April 15, 1948, 102½%; thereafter to and including April 15, 1951, 102%; thereafter to and including April 15, 1954, 101½%; thereafter to and including April 15, 1957, 101%; thereafter to and including April 15, 1960, 100½%; and thereafter, 100%.

Also redeemable for the Sinking Fund on any interest payment date after April 15, 1943, upon 30 days' notice, at the following prices and accrued interest: to and including April 15, 1954, 101½%; thereafter to and including April 15, 1957, 101%; thereafter to and including April 15, 1960, 100½%; and thereafter, 100%.

The following is merely a brief outline, prepared by the Company, of certain information contained in the Offering Prospectus and is subject to the more detailed statements in the Offering Prospectus and the Registration Statement, which also include important information not outlined or indicated herein. The Offering Prospectus, which must be furnished to each purchaser, should be read prior to any purchase of these Debentures.

THE COMPANY The Company, incorporated in New Jersey in 1904, and its subsidiaries are engaged in the business of manufacturing and selling cigarettes, smoking and chewing tobaccos and cigars. In 1941 the net sales of the Company and its consolidated subsidiaries (including $186,976,249 in Federal revenue stamps affixed to the products) were $363,548,664, made up as follows: cigarettes—88.65%, tobaccos—7.38%, cigars—3.56% and miscellaneous—0.41%. The principal product of the Company is Lucky Strike Cigarettes, the sales of which constitute the preponderant portion of total sales. American Cigarette and Cigar Company, a partly owned consolidated subsidiary, manufactures and sells, under a brand leased from the Company, Pall Mall Famous Cigarettes. The three chief manufacturing plants of the Company are at Richmond, Virginia, and Durham and Reidsville, North Carolina, at each of which locations Lucky Strike Cigarettes are manufactured. The Company and its subsidiaries also own various storage areas on which are located numerous sheds for the storing and aging of leaf tobacco. As such aging process generally requires about two years, the Company and its chief leaf-buying subsidiary normally have on hand very substantial inventories of leaf tobacco. Leaf tobacco has been subject to wide fluctuations in price.

CAPITALIZATION OF THE COMPANY

	Outstanding as of December 31, 1941
Funded Debt	$31,827,000
Short Term Notes payable to Banks	89,350,000
Preferred Stock, 6% Cumulative; par value $100 per share (outstanding 526,997 shares)	52,699,700
Common Stock; par value $25 per share (outstanding 1,609,696 shares*)	40,242,400*
Common Stock B; par value $25 per share (outstanding 3,134,184 shares*)	78,354,600*

Including $1,280,850 par value Common Stock and $4,158,975 par value Common Stock B, held in the Company's treasury. Does not include $6,834 Dividend Certificates, exchangeable for not exceeding 273 shares of Common Stock B.*

PURPOSE OF ISSUE The total proceeds ($98,250,000 before deducting expenses estimated at $342,500), plus accrued interest, from the sale of the Debentures, together with other funds of the Company to the extent necessary, are to be applied to the payment of $28,977,000 of funded debt and $75,500,000 of short term notes payable to banks (i.e. the entire outstanding funded debt and bank loans of the Company as of April 10, 1942, except for $926,000 of non-callable bonds), thus positioning the Company for purchases of its requirements of leaf tobacco. The Company intends to pay from other funds its expenses of sale of the Debentures and the accrued interest on its obligations to be paid off as above stated. During the year ended April 10, 1942, there was a net increase of $54,650,000 in short term bank loans of the Company, the additional working capital derived therefrom being required principally by the increase both in dollar amount and quantity in inventories of the Company and its subsidiaries, occasioned by higher prices being paid for tobacco and the increasing volume of business. The Company may borrow additional amounts from time to time as occasion arises.

EARNINGS The following condensed statement of results of operations of the Company and its consolidated subsidiaries has been prepared from the consolidated financial statements in the Offering Prospectus and has been reviewed by Lybrand, Ross Bros. & Montgomery, independent certified public accountants. Such statement is subject to, and should be read in conjunction with, the financial statements in the Offering Prospectus together with the notes accompanying such statements.

Year Ended December 31	Net Sales (1)	Net Earnings Before Interest and Taxes Based on Income	Interest	Provisions for State and Federal Taxes Based on Income	Net Income	Dividends Paid

(1) Includes Federal revenue stamps affixed to the products, as follows: for 1939, $131,741,611; for 1940, $151,636,536; and for 1941, $186,976,249.

DEBENTURES The Debentures, authorized but presently unissued, will be direct obligations of the Company, but not secured. They will be issued under an Indenture dated April 15, 1942, between the Company and Guaranty Trust Company of New York, as Trustee. The Indenture does not authorize the issuance of any additional securities thereunder but does not limit the amount of other securities, either secured or unsecured, which may be issued by the Company. Reference is made to the Offering Prospectus for information as to covenants in the Indenture with respect to the creation of liens on property of the Company. With certain exceptions, the provisions of the Indenture and the rights of the Debenture holders may be modified by the Company and the Trustee with the consent of the holders of not less than 66⅔% of the Debentures outstanding.

UNDERWRITING Subject to certain terms and conditions the Underwriters, including the undersigned and the others named in the Offering Prospectus, have severally agreed to purchase these Debentures from the Company in the respective amounts set forth in the Offering Prospectus at 98¼%, or a total of $98,250,000, and accrued interest. Such Debentures are to be offered to the public at 100%, or a total of $100,000,000, and accrued interest. The underwriting discounts are 1¾%, or a total of $1,750,000. Payment for and delivery of the Debentures are to be made on or after April 28, 1942, but not later than May 8, 1942.

Price 100% and Accrued Interest

The Underwriters, including the undersigned and the others named in the Offering Prospectus, have agreed to purchase these Debentures when, as and if issued and subject to the approval of Messrs. Davis Polk Wardwell Gardiner & Reed, counsel for the Underwriters, and to certain further conditions. It is expected that delivery of Debentures in temporary form, exchangeable for definitive Debentures when prepared, will be made on or about April 28, 1942, against payment therefor in New York funds.

TO FACILITATE THE OFFERING, IT IS INTENDED TO STABILIZE THE PRICE OF THESE DEBENTURES. THIS STATEMENT IS NOT AN ASSURANCE THAT THE PRICE OF THE ABOVE SECURITY WILL BE STABILIZED OR THAT THE STABILIZING, IF COMMENCED, MAY NOT BE DISCONTINUED AT ANY TIME.

Further information, particularly financial statements, is contained in the Registration Statement on file with the Securities and Exchange Commission, and in the Offering Prospectus which must be furnished to each purchaser and is obtainable from the undersigned or from any other Underwriter of this issue.

Ticket-Buyers to Contribute $50,000 to See Two Men Bowl

Printer and Truck Driver to Roll In War Bond Tourney; 1708 Entries

By the Associated Press

Houston, Tex., April 23.—More than $50,000 will be shelled out by ticket-grabbers tomorrow night to watch a truck driver and a printer collide in the finals of a Houston bowling tournament.

Under ordinary circumstances, only close friends and relatives would part with cash in order to watch L. P. (Lolly) Lalumiere, linotype operator, and West Britain, driver for a soft drink concern, roll 'em down the alleys.

But this is no ordinary tournament, second only to the American Bowling Congress in the number of singles entries—1708—and one of sports' most successful methods of raising funds for America's war chest.

Run on a handicap basis, the tourney was open to men, women and children. Each entry paid $1 and received a war stamp book, with one 10-cent stamp, as a receipt.

The rest of the money went into war bonds for prizes. Owners of the seven establishments on whose alleys the meet was held bought bonds with the money taken in line charges.

A special section was reserved for service men, with Corpl. Nick Loss of Ellington Field winning the $50 first prize.

Purchase of war bonds will obtain seats for the finals. More than $36,000 worth of bonds already has been purchased, and the operating committee expects the total to run far above $50,000.

Standing room will go to those buying $1 worth of stamps at the gate.

Spanish War Veteran, 71, Dies in Fall

Sergt. Harry Sarah, 71, veteran of the Spanish-American War, yesterday toppled 40 feet to his death in Grant Building at Soldiers' Home, where he had lived for the past 10 years.

Joseph Kodesta, building elevator operator, told police he saw the veteran fall from over the second-floor banister. A spell of dizziness was believed to have caused the fall.

Charles R. Bartell, resident of the Grant Building on the same floor with Sarah, recalled serving with him in Company E, Ninth Infantry, in Cebu, from 1910 to 1911. Sarah, he remembered, "was a great roamer" around the island, became familiar with the tribes and learned their difficult languages.

"Just this morning I was joking with Sarah about not having to do any more kitchen police. He laughed and said, 'No, I'm 71 now.' And now he's gone."

A veteran of the Spanish-American War, Sarah had served 21 years in the Regular Army, records disclosed. He leaves a daughter, Mrs. Sarah Peters, Winfield, Long Island.

Furniture Pin Girls Take Top Position

The House & Harrmann girls in the Silver Spring Ladies Bowling League finished on top of the ladder over Wright's Floors even though the latter team had the same number of games won and lost. Blanche Lukas, Kidwell's rolled highs of 137-356 with Silver Beauty Salon and Kay-Rene sharing team highs with respective totals of 535 and 1502.

SILVER SPRING

A. Muddiman's 138 for Southern Railway and Vince McKnally's 372 for the Friars Club led the Businessmen's League with Stone's Mercantile posting team highs of 594 and 1628. The Friars Club won the flag with Southern Maryland Seafood in second place.

BROOKLAND

Ray Watson's 160 single topped the Brookland Merchants with Karl Gochenour's 428 set high for the night. The Diamond Cab boys, with Elmer Wesley's 410 set, posted team highs of 646 and 1862 to win all six games in the doubleheader. Ray Watson came close with his 424 as did Cliff Hollis with 404. University Delicatessen and DePerini also won all six from opponents.

ARLINGTON

Virginia Wright, Heflin's, was best pinswoman in the Arlington Ladies League with her 125 game and 320 set, but the Bauserman Service girls took the team honors after posting scores of 542 and 1516, also winning three from the Utopia Club. Marge's Beauty Salon and Heflin's also shared some of the honors as both quints had 542 for team game.

D. & H. Court Team Takes City Crown

The game, played at the Tech High School gymnasium, climaxed more than three months of play in the 11 recreation leagues which comprised 84 teams. Dick Tennyson, boys 'activities director, supervised the leagues.

"Acky" Viana led the winners' attack on the basket with ten points for his night's effort, although every member of the Delaware and Hudson team scored at least twice from the floor. Frizzell scored seven points for the losers.

Boy Athletes To Be Honored At Y.M.C.A.

More than 100 awards will be presented tonight at the anual athletics award night of the boys' department of the Central Young Men's Christian Association.

The affair is scheduled to begin at 7:30 p. m. in the boys' gymnasium in the building at 1732 G Street Northwest. Buck Newsom, pitcher of the Washington baseball team, is to deliver an address and make the presentations in behalf of the boys' department.

A special feature will be voice recordings, to be sent to R. B. Morgan, veteran boys' physical director at the "Y," who has been commissioned in the Army Air Corps to serve as a physical instructor. Refreshments will be served and motion pictures shown of Camp Letts, the Y. M. C. A. boys' camp near Annapolis. Rudolph Wiedemann, member of the boys' work committee of the Y. M. C. A., will be master of ceremonies.

Softballers Practice

Breuninger, Real Estate Leader, Dies

Mr. Breuninger

Lewis E. Breuninger, prominent real estate operator and philanthropist, died at his home yesterday, 5700 Sixteenth Street Northwest, of a heart attack. He was 83.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at noon in the Foundry Methodist Church, Sixteenth and P Streets Northwest. Burial will follow in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Born in Harford County, Md., Mr. Breuninger came to Washington about 46 years ago and established himself in the restaurant business. He later went into dairying before becoming a real estate operator. Mr. Breuninger retired 10 years ago.

A former president of the Real Estate Mortgage & Guaranty Corp., Mr. Breuninger also was a member of Columbia Country Club, a trustee of the Foundry Methodist Church, the Central Union Mission and American University.

Surviving him are three daughters, Mrs. Esther L. Janney, of Hollis, Va.; Mrs. Ruth B. Stickle, of Washington, and Mrs. Robin M. Lakens, of Swarthmore, Pa.; and two sons, Henry L. and Lewis P., both of Washington.

Taxi Hits Man, Driver Gets Out And Beats Him

L. T. Gravatte, 53, of 302 Rittenhouse Street Northwest, told police he was severely beaten by a taxi driver last night after the latter's cab had knocked him down on De Sales Street near Seventeenth Northwest.

Gravatte was removed to Emergency Hospital and treated for severe injuries.

According to police, the driver jumped from his cab after striking Gravattte and immediately set upon him. Richard B. Baker, and M. H. Ratka, of the Mayflower Hotel, went to Gravatte's aid after which the driver returned to his cab and sped away.

John Davis, 17, of 905 G Street Southeast, was seriously injured when he rode his bicycle against an automobile at Ninth and B Streets Southeast. He was removed to Casualty Hospital suffering with a skull fracture. Police said the car was driven by Wilfred H. Seemuller, 38, of 1843 B Street Southeast.

Auxiliary Police Officer Helps Capture Suspect

He was seized about a block from the Joseph K. Lewis jewelry shop at 505 Eleventh Street Northwest at 3:30 a. m. when Auxiliary Capt. Frank M. Dyer and Sergt. Abel Mann, cruising in a police car, noticed blood on his left hand. A piece of iron pipe, but no loot, was found on his person.

The suspect was intoxicated, the policeman stated, and his record disclosed he once served time in Virginia for a similar offense.

Koppleman Tried To Influence RFC Loan, Jones Says

By the Associated Press

Commerce Secretary Jesse Jones said today Representative Kopplemann (Democrat), Connecticut, once attempted to obtain a $60,000 Federal loan for a friend on property that cost $8000.

He made the statement during a House Banking Committee hearing on legislation to aid automobile dealers after Kopplemann had charged that the RFC, under Jones, had a record of not being in sympathy with small business.

Yank Makes Jap Fur Fly In Burma

By Daniel De Luce

Associated Press Staff Writer

With the American Volunteer Group in Burma, April 10 (Delayed).—Driven out of Mingaladon and then Magwe, the fighting Yanks of the American Volunteer Group, now are braced against the inevitable heavy Japanese assaults on their new base defending northern Burma.

Already they have cracked down on the enemy's numerically superior forces, and have destroyed an entire squadron of the invaders' finest aircraft.

In two dogfights spaced 48 hours apart, ranging 100 miles over the green mountains of China's Yunnan province and Burma's Shan States, the American pilots broke up a swarm of Japanese air raiders and blasted 15 out of the sky for certain.

Five other enemy planes probably were destroyed in the combat.

Zero Fighters Ambushed

The Japanese planes were on a special 1000-mile mission, equipped with extra gas tanks, and were out to catch the A. V. G. aground. Twice, however, the heavily gunned Japanese Zero fighters fell into an ambush in the clouds.

The waiting Yanks raked them with a savage fire and Japanese planes hurtled from the skies, trailing clouds of white smoke, to plunge flaming into paddyfields and jungle growths.

A Texan, who was a Royal Air Force sergeant pilot in Canada after washing out at the U. S. Air Corps training school at Love Field, Dallas, Tetx., had the closest call.

During the course of the melee he got on the tail of a Zero fighter and, because of the difficulty he'd had confirming five previous combat victims in Burma, he followed his adversary down until he saw him crash in flames.

While the Texan was thus engaged another Japanese plane got on his tail and sent a burst of machine-gun fire through his instrument board. Oil from a broken line spurted over the Texan, blinding him, and he made a crash landing.

As he sat in his wrecked plane, half-stunned, another enemy plane swooped low with blazing guns and narrowly missed finishing him off.

Waiting for Second Batch

Wednesday noon (April 8) a fast twin-engined Japanese reconnaissance bomber scouted the field. Then in midafternoon a Japanese fighter formation was reported en route. The "Flying Tigers" went aloft.

The Japanese swooped over the runway but there were no rows of stationary aircraft. They combed the edges of the field, hunting for concealed prey.

Then the Americans counter-attacked!

Brown streaks of lightning dived at the low-flying strafers. Above the scream of motors and crackling gunfire stricken Japanese planes sounded like exploding bombs when they crashed to the ground.

The Japanese cruising high in the sky stayed there, just dim silver specks to ground observers, while one after another ten of their mates died fighting and the remainder broke and fled in their damaged ships.

Today (Friday, April 10) at dawn Japanese navy Zero planes sneaked over the Chinese hills and roared toward the American's field in a technique apparently borrowed from the American "fliers" devastating attacks on Moulmein and Chiengmai.

But not a single Allied plane on the ground was burned.

"The worst marksmanship we ever heard of," said Squadron Leader Arvid Olson, of Chicago, with great relief.

This afternoon the Japanese returned—in V formations of three planes each—stalking 2 miles up for the kill. Possibly they expected to find a maimed American volunteer group helpless aground.

Then what must be the Japanese pilot's idea of hell broke loose—machine guns firing from above and behind their tails with heavy tracers and armor-piercing bullets slashing at the unarmored navy Zeros.

One Has Close Call

Smoke geysered from a crashing Japanese plane midway up a mountain; another dug into ploughed land beside a river; another burned out of sight across a bridge.

Bill Reed, Marion, Iowa, an ace, was almost smothered with hot oil when an oil cap ripped off his windshield, but he hit a navy Zero with a tough angle shot and saw it burst in flames.

Then he slipped into a cloud bank to escape pursuing enemy craft and few by instruments.

40,000 Women Garment Workers Get 10% Pay Rise

New York, April 23 (AP).—Forty thousand women garment workers were granted an approximate 10 per cent pay increase in a decision announced today by former Mayor James J. Walker, impartial chairman for the industry.

The workers were represented by the joint cloak board of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union. An increase of 15 per cent had been asked.

Walker said that considerations weighed by him in arriving at the compromise settlement were increased costs of living on the one side, and the necessity of keeping employers from being "driven to the wall," on the other.

Israel Feinberg, general manager of the union, said that the increase was in reality an adjustment on piece-work wages. He said that a worker could earn up to and including $5 a week more under the ruling. Approximately $80 a week is the prevailing wage in this piecework and seasonal industry, he said.

Employers Deny They Agreed On Closed Shop

New York, April 23 (AP).—William P. Witherow, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, and Charles R. Hook, chairman of the employers group in the industry-labor no-strike agreement, denied tonight that employer members ever agreed that the closed shop should become an issue for arbitration before the War Labor Board.

In individual statements they challenged the A. F. L.-C. I. O. claim that the agreement provided "union security" issues were to be settled by the board, a contention upheld by the War Labor Board last night.

"I have been charged with violating a pledge which the record shows was never given," Witherow declared. "The one thing I have pledged my country is my utmost effort to help win this war. And the closed shop is not a win-the-war measure."

Marie Dionne Under Treatment in Hospital

Toronto, April 23 (INS).—Marie, smallest of the Dionne quintuplets, is under treatment at Toronto's Hospital for Sick Children, it was disclosed today. She will undergo electrical tests to determine the extent of a muscular ailment in her right thigh. The tests will seek to determine whether Marie is suffering from a progressive muscular atrophy, which might eventually result in a withered limb.

Free French Doubt Darlan Will Hand Over Vichy Fleet

By International News Service

New York, April 23.—Admiral Darlan would not be foolish enough to turn over the Vichy French fleet to Nazi Germany, Admiral Philippe Auboyneau, newly appointed commander of the Free French naval forces, declared here today.

The Vichy fleet, Admiral Auboyneau pointed out, is Darlan's trump card against further encroachments on his political preserves by Pierre Laval, Hitler's puppet in Vichy.

"Furthermore," Admiral Auboyneau said, "there would be large defections among French naval personnel if the Vichy fleet were ordered to fight for the Germans."

Asked if he would order Free French naval units to attack Vichy ships on the high seas, he said he would do so only if they were in the service of the Nazis.

Fleet in Good Shape

"There is the danger that Laval may place French merchant ships under Nazi control," he added, "for the purpose of carrying munitions to the Germans under the pretext that they are carrying food to France. The Allies must realize that if the Vichy government institutes convoys, these ships will be bringing war materials to the Germans and not food to France."

Admiral Auboyneau said that despite recent reports to the contrary, a good proportion of the Vichy fleet is "in good shape and seaworthy."

The admiral, who has just arrived here from New Caledonia, where he served as commander of a Free French light cruising squadron in the Pacific war area, is en route to London to assume his new duties as successor to Admiral Muselier.

The Free French navy, Admiral Auboyneau said, now comprises 50 warships of various sizes in addition to many smaller ships such as torpedo boats, corvettes, etc.

Control Pacific Islands

"All of the French islands in the Pacific are now in control of the Free French," he said. "Our ships are in the Pacific Ocean, in the Atlantic and in the English Channel, and are performing vital tasks in the war effort of the Allies.

"All of the French ships which were taken over by the British at the start of the war have been turned over to the Free French and are now manned entirely by Free French crews."

Listen! with Glynn

John Steinbeck's new novel, "The Moon Is Down," has created about as much comment in both its book and play forms of late as any dramatic subject you can think of.

The story of the unconquerability by forceful means of the people in occupied lands, it has won praise for pointing out that fact in beautifully written form. It has, at the same time, won brickbats for making the conquerors seem a little less than monsters—weak, puzzled men, whose hearts often were not in their work. The conquered people not so strangely resemble the Norwegians; the conquerors, German soldiers.

Be that as it may, it's one of the most-talked-about novels—and plays—that you'd want to hear about.

So this is to inform you that you can hear about it directly tonight when it will be given its first presentation on the radio as a part of the "Kate Smith Hour" over WJSV at 8 p. m.

The parts will be taken by the regular Broadway cast of the play, led by Otto Kruger, as the commanding officer of the occupying troops, and by Ralph Morgan, as the mayor of the occupied town. The curtain of the regular play will be postponed in order that the cast may do the radio show.

Despite the fact that "The Moon Is Down" is being heard on the Kate Smith Hour, it should be hastily added that it has no connection whatsoever with "The Moon Comes Over the Mountain."

Contract Bridge

Not having a card of his partner's suit to lead proved a great handicap to the tournament player who strove to set South's bid of two no-trump on today's hand, which was dealt at the Eastern mixed-pair championship.

His wife, who sat East with four top diamonds burning in her hand, turned as pink as the camellia pinned on her shoulder as she reluctantly discarded ten, queen, king and came in at the end with only the ace to find declarer had made his contract.

The bidding:

Opening lead: 4 ♠.

South deftly managed to keep throwing West in the lead, and was never once compelled to lead the dangerous diamond suit himself, thus demonstrating again that strength badly placed is no strength at all.

West opened the four of spades, the spade jack from dummy held the trick, and the seven of spades was continued. East threw a heart and West held off. South winning with the spade ten. The six of hearts was next led, and the jack from dummy successfully finessed. Now came the queen of clubs, declarer overtaking with the king, and again West held off.

The jack of clubs followed, which West won with the ace; he cashed the ace of spades and exited with the heart queen. He hoped to keep declarer on the board and force him to lead diamonds to his partner. But the ace of hearts took his queen, the king of hearts followed, and then a low heart threw West in again. With nothing but spades or a club to lead, West played a club, which declarer won with the ten. The king of spades was cashed for the eighth trick, declarer making two no-trump, doubled, winning three spades, three hearts and two clubs.

Publicity Agent Sues Ex-Governor

James A. Noe, former Governor and Lieutenant Governor of Louisiana, was sued for $3558 in District Court yesterday by a local publicity agent who claimed that Noe had never paid him for services rendered during the 1939 Louisiana gubernatorial campaign.

The suit was filed by Harry J. Costello, 2123 California Street Northwest, who asserted that in April of 1939, Noe had made an oral contract with him to pay Costello $3000 as a "public relations executive."

In addition to this sum, Costello said, he was never reimbursed for $558.85 for expenses during the campaign—which saw Noe defeated in the Democratic primary race.

He asked the court to order Noe to pay the allegedly promised salary, the campaign expenses and the costs of the suit.

War Leveling Class Barriers, Halifax Says

By the United Press

New York, April 23.—Postwar England will "do everything" to give full and equal opportunity to all citizens by forestalling the return of unemployment and "establishing more free and fair trading conditions," Lord Halfax, British Ambassador, said tonight.

Startling social changes already have taken place in England, Halifax told members of the St. George's Society of New York, including "leveling out differences of wealth" and extension of the social security system.

England already has made progress toward achievement of one of the four freedoms, freedom from want, Lord Halifax said. The effect of the essential work orders, whereby workers cannot quit without the consent of the ministry of labor, is to help eliminate casual labor and guarantee a continuous income despite day-to-day fluctuations in the labor demand.

"In the England we mean to build," Lord Halifax said, "we shall do everything we can to give full and equal opportunity to all our citizens. This is a people's war and victory shall be a people's victory.

"Taxation is leveling out the differences of wealth and redistributing the national income in a way our fathers would have thought inconceivable.

"So far as humanly possible we shall see that the curse of unemployment does not return after this war.

"Under the agreement between Britain and the United States, both countries pledged themselves to work to establish more free and fair trading conditions. Insofar as we can succeed in this purpose, it is reasonable to hope that it will reflect itself in improved standards of living."

Lord Halifax said the war "has seen an extension of the system of social security, in health insurance, unemployment insurance, old age and widows' pensions."

Englishmen, characterized by Halifax as having "a respect for tradition that is not logical," and "a passionate love of freedom," can take pride in these accomplishments."

"Since the last war," he said, "no problem has pressed more heavily on the hearts and consciences of the British people than that of decent housing. In the last 20 years rehousing of several millions of my fellow countrymen has been put through with the help of all political parties and of public and private funds."

'Slum' Operator Fined $500

Myrtleo Bell, 63, Washington apartment owner, was fined $500 by Judge George D. Neilson in Police Court yesterday on his plea of guilty of illegally operating what health officials described as two "slum" dwellings at 215 and 217 G Street Northwest.

Judge Neilson declared he was "shocked" at the conditions described by witnesses, adding: "We certainly cannot tolerate such conditions in the Nation's Capital."

J. J. Kimball, chief building inspector for the District, testified that 51 persons lived at one time in eight two-room and one one-room apartments. He told the court that he had refused Bell an operator's permit after a four-month old Negro child was burned to death in one of the apartments April 3.

Will Allen, Washington reporter, who said he had visited the premises to cover the case, told the court that a mother with five children lived in one room 8 by 9 feet. He testified that another family of 12 persons lived in two rooms.

Bell revealed on the witness stand that he operates "between 50 and 75" apartments in Washington. He maintains an office at 1323 Ninth Street Northwest, he said.

The defendant's plea of guilty was to six charges. The charges and fines were: Operating two apartments without license, $200; building additions without permit, $100; uncleanliness, $25; violating electric wiring regulations, $25, and having defective and dangerous electric wiring despite being notified to correct defects, $150.

Corporation Counsel E. W. Thomas prosecuted the case.

Ancient Rites Enthrone New Archbishop

By the Associated Press

Canterbury, England, April 23.—Wearing the same resplendent robes his father wore in a similar ceremony 45 years ago and against a traditional background altered only by the war, Dr. William Temple, 60, was enthroned today as the ninety-eighth Archbishop of Canterbury, primate of all England.

Spitfire fighter planes heading toward France flashed in the April sky, striking the note of incongruity in the ritual eight centuries old.

Trumpeters sounded their fanfare as archbishop and retinue entered the great west door of Canterbury Cathedral. The Archdeacon of Canterbury, the Rev. T. K. Sopwith, led Dr. Temple to the massive, marble chair of St. Augustine, where "the enthronement of the most reverent father in God, William, Lord Archbishop of Canterbury, primate of all England" was duly enacted.

Forty-five bishops stood by in the sand-bagged church and the sun splashed through the bomb-marked stained-glass windows as the renowned liberal churchman formally took office.

In an address, the new archbishop declared that "if the Christian movement and all the hopes connected with it are to prevail, the Axis must be defeated.

"It is our duty as Christian citizens to do our best toward winning the war that we may keep open the possibility of a Christian civilization."

The new archbishop said that German victory would entail abandonment of international fellowship "under the allegiance of our Lord."

"This is no guess," he said. "It is the declared policy of the German state and follows of necessity from its principles."

Dr. Temple was named Archbishop of Canterbury last February 22 to succeed Dr. Cosmo Gordon Lang, who resigned January 21 at the age of 78.

Typhus Ravaging Nazis, Reds Say

Sub Sinking Cheers Tailor In Arlington

Happiest man in Arlington County yesterday was Max Mager, proprietor of a tailoring and cleaning shop at 2715 Wilson Boulevard.

Mager greeted all his customers with a broad smile and made certain that they saw a clipping from Tuesday's Washington Post prominently displayed on the wall of his store.

It was the account of the torpedoing of a Japanese submarine by an American sub commanded by Lieut. Comdr. Elton W. Grenfell, formerly of Arlington.

"He was my customer," declared Max, proudly.

As if in proof, Max walked over and tapped a cabinet.

"He left some of his clothes here with me when he went to take charge of that submarine," he declared. "I asked him if he was scared to go and he said that he had been at sea for 17 years but that this time he guessed he did feel a little scary."

Max thought a moment soberly. Then his face lighted up again.

"I guess he's doing all right now," he said.

Max, who came here from Russia 20 years ago, is a naturalized citizen and intensely patriotic. He registered for the draft last month. He's ready to go when called.

One thing bothers him, though. He doesn't have Commander Grenfell's present home address. Max wants to write Mrs. Grenfell and tell her that the commander's tuxedo is all right. Also he wants to send them a defense bond just to show how much he appreciates his former customer hitting that Jap submarine.

Jaycees Seat New Officers

Geoffrey Creyke, jr., second vice president, yesterday succeeded Millard F. West, jr., who has been commissioned a second lieutenant in the Army Air Corps, as president of the Junior Board of Commerce at the installation luncheon in the Annapolis Hotel.

L. Wagner Lawder, first vice president, who held the presidency for ten minutes during the new elections and who is also going into the Army, was succeeded by Bernard J. Nees. Others who took office were James A. Willey, second vice president, and Jesse E. Aiken, who filled a vacancy on the board of directors.

Guest Speaker Harald H. Lund, executive secretary of the District of Columbia Tuberculosis Association, spoke on "New Social Responsibilities."

Eagle Fliers Go To Middle East

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, April 23.—Seventeen American fighter pilots, members of the three American Eagle squadrons of the R. A. F. have left Britain to take part in the air battles in the Middle East and the Pacific War Zone, the Air Ministry disclosed today. At least six of them already have arrived and gone into action at Malta, while others have been sent presumably to Libya, Australia and India.

Among the pilots was J. St. M. Maxwell, 21, of Washington, D. C

Guiseppe Messina Funeral Set For Tomorrow

Seven grandchildren will serve as pallbearers at funeral services for Giuseppe Messina at 9 a. m. tomorrow when a requiem mass will be celebrated at the Shrine of the Sacred Heart Church, Sixteenth and Park Road Northwest. Burial will be in St. Mary's Cemetery.

Mr. MESSINA

Mr. Messina died Wednesday at his home, 730 Otis Place Northwest, at the age of 97. A native of Italy, he came to Washington 46 years ago and was a member of numerous Italian-American societies.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Concetta Messina, and 10 children, Peter, Charles, Salvatore, Anthony, Rosario and Angelo Messina, and Mrs. Vincezo DiGiorgio, Mrs. Salvatore DiMisa, Mrs. Nunzio Bovello and Mrs. Nicoletta Caltabiano. He also leaves 30 grandchildren.

Stock List Slumps To 9-Year-Low on Anti-Inflation Plan

New York, April 23 (AP).—Selling attributed to inflation-control fears sent the stock market today into low ground on average for nine years and left many of the leading issues with final losses of $1 to $2 or more a share.

Brokers reported a major selling motive was word from Washington indicating the Government's forthcoming anti-inflation program would call for sharply increased corporation taxes along with price freezing in many lines of consumer goods.

Stocks like United States Steel, American Telephone, Standard Oil (N. J.), duPont and Sears, Roebuck dropped $1 or more, several reaching new lows for a year or more.

Bonds of speculative rating declined with stocks.

Mrs. Roosevelt Broadcasts Plea For China Relief

An appeal for united China relief was broadcast yesterday by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt at a luncheon at American University during which she received honorary membership in Pi Delta Epsilon, national journalism fraternity.

Liu Cheih, counselor of the Chinese Embassy, also spoke at the luncheon meeting which was broadcast over WINX. The speeches were recorded for a later short-wave broadcast to China.
